The Farmer.

The farmer in this day and time The happiest man I see, I care not for his birth nor climate, Nor what his name may be.

The man that cultivates the soil Is sure to be fed, For God hath promised those that toil A full supply of bread.

The farmer always lives at home, And makes his own supply, And ever ready to give some To stop the urban cry.

Although his home may humble be, And he appears quite poor, The peddler loves his house to see When on a trading tour.

His lovely wife stays in her place, And does all she can, And tries to wear a smiling face, When he is close at hand.

His friendly boys to all are kind, Though cunning as a mouse; His tender girls with noble minds Are jewels for the house.

His tender girls can use the wheel, And they can knit and sew, And if they're in the field They're not afraid to go.

You hear the farmer's axe speak out, The power of his arm, And those who wish their children stout Must raise them on a farm.

I hear his voice ring through the land Mid summer's hottest day, For the harvest is at hand, And he feels very gay.

He makes the laborers out to cut The wheat up on the farm, And binds it all in bundles up And fits it for the barn.

His bending orchards doth abound With fruit of every kind, And tender grapes may be found Upon his lovely vines.

And when his fields with weeds are green, Before they all turn brown, He starts his boys out with a team To hide them in the ground.

They take with them his turning plow, And go the fields around, And short experience teaches them how To turn the surface down.

And when the pleasant summer's o'er, And winter's day's appear, The farmer has enough in store To last him all the year.

By some the farmers have been said To be poor, shabby men, But still they get their meat and bread, And all they wear from him.

The rich and wise are by him fed, Although his face they spurn, And woe, if they had power, tread Upon him as a worm.

Race Prejudice.

Wil. Star. The result of the McDow trial in Charleston presents the race question in a new shape and has caused more or less discussion in the Northern press.

It is the first instance as far as we know in the South, where a white man was tried for his life by a jury, the majority of whom were negroes. The very fact that the defendant so managed by objecting to white men to secure a majority of negroes on the jury is evidence enough to establish the belief that he depended upon that element mainly to secure his acquittal. For few people after that jury was made up expected a conviction on the charge of murder; some thought, but not many, that possibly a verdict of manslaughter might be rendered. While there are many who are disappointed at the verdict of acquittal there are few, and very few, who are surprised at it. If there was any doubt as to the reason for selecting that particular kind of a jury when the trial began there was no doubt at the conclusion, and at the demonstrations which took place when the verdict was announced, and the prisoner was discharged. A shout went up from the white friends of the acquitted, and the negroes present went almost frantic with delight. When McDow left the court house and entered the carriage provided by his friends and waiting in anticipation of his acquittal to convey him to his home, he was followed as a hero by a multitude of negroes who made the walk ring with their exultant shouts. They followed him to his house where something like a public reception was held. The negroes

Courage.

There is no higher virtue than courage. To impugn a man's courage is to offend him the greatest indignity; yet how many of us possess the purest elements of courage?

Many of us feel that we are passing through severe trials, and rejoice because of them, but it is only in times of trouble that high courage is displayed.

Adversity is so useful to soul development as bodily exercise is to physical development.

If we aspire to greatness we must bear the discipline without which real greatness is impossible.

If we wish to be considered brave we must not shrink at the trial of our courage; however it may come.

The seasons are bad, but that is none of our affairs. All that the law of God or man requires is that we go forward. Standing on the borders of the Red Sea, God said to Moses, "speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward," and the command comes ringing down the centuries.

There is no such thing as "waiting for something to turn up." The word of success is onward! and he who refuses to obey is swept away by the on rushing billows.

Whatever the situation is, take courage and go forward. It is not in the power of a man to command success, but every man may deserve it.—New Bern Journal.

Sectional Arrogance.

It is now twenty-five years since the soldiers of the Federal and Confederate armies stacked their arms and the war was declared to be at an end; but when the Federal soldier ceased to fight and the Confederate soldier returned to his home to go to work and try to repair the waste that the war had made, the Republican politicians of the North took up the war cry, and have been keeping it up ever since. They have resolved in as far as they can, that the people of the North shall not forget that there was ever a war between the sections, and seem determined to make them believe that although peace was then officially declared the South is still in arms and as chock-full of fight as ever. This is what one forming his opinions from the speeches of the average Republican campaign orator and editor would think, and they have reiterated it so often and so persistently that a good many credulous people on the other side of the line actually do think it, or they vote as if they do.

A SOUND LEGAL OPINION.

E. Bainbridge, M.D., County Atty., Clay Co., Tex. says: "Have used Electric Nitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with malarial fever and jaundice, was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Nitters saved his life."

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: "He positively would have died, had it not been for Electric Nitters. This great remedy will ward off, as well as cure all malarial diseases, and for all kidney, liver and stomach disorders stands unequalled. Price 50c. and $1 at Furman's."

Who Lost the Ten Dollars?

A FINANCIAL CONUNDRUM THAT DROVE A MAN TO HIS GRAVE.

You are a financier. I am not, but I had a friend who died of a financial conundrum, and although it is too late to do him any good, I would like to know the answer.

He was a good fellow, poor fellow, but he was unlucky. Besides, he was a good deal of a fool. He invested all his own money and some more in Gloried Mining stock. He saw a great deal about it in a newspaper of great former notoriety and much previous velleity. He did not stop to note that the stock was 95 per cent. or more below par, nor inquire if anybody controlling the financial columns had been present with a block of Gloried stock. He didn't do anything but go and blow in his savings in Gloried. The stock took a tumble before he did, and at the round-up he found himself with a large block of Gloried, which nobody wanted, and no money. His wife died, and his only son, who had been brought up in the expectation of luxury, went to the bad. Believing still that even a mining stock which could get quoted and noted every day in the paper that used to be hoisted when his grand-father read it must have some value, and having noth-

Notice to Pensioners and Applicants for Pension.

THE FRANKLIN TIMES is the only newspaper published in Franklin county, and its circulation extends all over every section of this and adjoining counties, and its circulation should make a note here.

The Editor will not be responsible for the views of correspondents. Brief communications from all sections must accompany articles. News items of any nature will be thankfully received.

ADDISON'S DEPARTMENT, BALTIMORE, N. C., June 26, 89. To Pensioners and Applicants for Pension under the Pension Act, and to others whom it may concern.

The following information is published for the benefit of all concerned.

1. The new pension act does not go into effect before next year (1890) except so far as relates to determining the character and classification of those who are to receive its benefits, see 1st proviso. With sections of the new act, copies of which will be furnished upon application to this department, Pensioners will be paid this year from the appropriation ($20,000) provided by the act of 1885, as amended by the law of 1887 and according to the requirements of that act as amended. This sum is required to be paid promptly and is likely to be very small, owing to the large increase in the pension roll since the passage of the new pension act.

2. Pensioners whose names are upon the pension roll will not be required to file new applications, at least until the new pension act goes fully into effect, and most probably not then. Further information on this point will be furnished at the proper time.

3. Blank applications under the old law have been furnished to each county. This information has been received and the supply promptly furnished has been exhausted and a request presented to this Department for a renewal of the same. As the blanks under the old law will not be available after next Monday, July 30, the distribution of such blanks will terminate with that date.

4. Registers of Deaths will be fully informed as to the time when their duties as prescribed by the act will be required to be performed by them. At the proper time copies of the new act will be furnished them for distribution, together with such blanks as, in conformity therewith as may be necessary to fully meet the requirements of the law.

5. The opportunity for the presentation of new applications under the old law terminates with the first Monday in July of the present year. After that date it will be necessary to get applications application particularly in the case of widows and all the old blanks will be distributed with the new blanks.

In addition, the Department will be engaged in making inquiry into the names and extent of the widows provided for by old soldiers, war pensioners, (whose not especially stated in the original applications), in order to accomplish the classification required by section 1 of the new pension act. Inquiry will also have to be made in cases of nearly 3,000 widows who are already receiving a pension, the last legislature having determined in the new pension act that only such widows shall be retained or entered on the pension roll as are "EX-DIVIDENDUM" i. e., such as are in actually destitute circumstances. As applicants will have until the first Monday in July 1890 in which to present their applications and have them acted on a suspension in the matter of the filing of new applications is recommended until such time as this department is prepared to furnish new blanks and meet all the requirements of the new law. When prepared for new applications one and simple notice will be given in the columns of the various newspapers throughout the State.

Very respectfully, G. W. WARDLAW, State Auditor.

Convincing Proof.

In many instances it has been proven that B. B. B. (Bainbridge's Blood-Balm) made by Blood-Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga., will cure blood poison in its worst phases when all other treatments fail.

A. F. Brunson, Atlanta, Ga., writes: "I had 25 running sores on one leg and 5 on the other, and still getting worse. I believe I actually swelled. I loved a barrel of medicine, in vain efforts to cure the disease. With little hope I finally acted upon the urgent advice of a friend, and got a bottle of B. B. B. I experienced a change, and my despondency was somewhat dispelled. I kept on using it until it had taken 16 bottles, and all the sores, rheumatism and all other horrors of blood poison have disappeared. I think I can now and will again give you my experience of twenty years of torture."

Robt. Wood, Maney, Ga., writes: "My disease was pronounced a virulent form of blood poison. My face, head and shoulders were a mass of corruption, and finally the disease began eating my sinews. My bones ached, my kidneys were damaged, I lost my flesh and strength, and it became a burden. All said I must surely die, but nevertheless, when I had used ten bottles of B. B. B. I was pronounced well. Hundreds of eyes can now be seen on me. I have now been well 12 months."

Blindness is a very contagious disease.

Lots of doctors are making more money in New York city by fastening this disease and making it last longer than in any other city.
