The Times is the only newspaper published in Franklin county, and its circulation exceeds all over every section of this and adjoining counties, advertisements should make a note here.

The Editor will not be responsible for the views of correspondents. Brief communications from all sections must be accompanied by the name of the author, and will be published unless otherwise directed.

A sale of the office. It gives the names of the sellers, the buyers and the amounts paid, and wants to know what the President is going to do about it.

The Indianapolis Sentinel, Democrat, turned the tables on its Republican contemporary, the Journal, a few days ago, by taking one of its editorial denunciations of Mr. Cleveland for depositing money of the treasury in national banks and publishing it word for word, simply substituting Harrison's name for Cleveland's and Republican party for Democratic party. The Journal says the point and had no remark to make.

THE TIDE OF TARIFF REFORM IS ON THE FLOOD.

N. Y. Herald.]

We judge from the platform which the Democrats have indorsed in State conventions that the protective victory of last autumn has not demoralized them in the slightest.

They—it may be as well to say we were most unconsciously whipped at that time, but it hasn't changed our conviction that we were right.

The common sense of the people may be blinded for a time and a panic may be created—an old trick of politics by which the wrong candidate gets the office.

But in the long run the people make the crooked things straight again, and that "long run" will terminate in 1892, when tariff reform will come an established fact.

The Democratic half of our ten million voters have been consistent believers in the genius and enterprise of American manufacturers and determined defenders of their rights.

The home market never has and never will satisfy their demands. We have the skilled labor, we have the machinery—we have the resources of a magnificent country to draw from; unsurpassed mill sites; an immense laboring population with brains in their fingers, who can produce larger results in ten hours a day than the same class in other countries can produce in twelve or fifteen.

We have therefore a right to be represented in every quarter of the globe, and to carry our wares without let or hindrance to every country where purchasers are likely to be found.

A tariff which limits our activity and constricts our efforts is, therefore, hostile to our national ambition. It ties our hands behind our backs and disables us in the grand fight for wealth. The party which adopts it as a policy represents an economical blunder.

During the last five months a great many Republican business men have come to see this. They have learned the lesson by hard luck, by diminishing profits and threatened bankruptcy.

The tide of opinion has turned, and if the elections of last year had been postponed to this November, the Democrats would have been elected by a large and decisive majority.

It is a matter of dollars and cents. The manufacturer favors the party which gives him the best chance to make money, and the wage earner throws his influence on the side which insures the steadiest and largest income.

Gov. Ames voted for Harrison. He made a mistake. Mr. Harrison's party is pledged to make raw material dear. The Governor says plainly that unless he can buy raw material at a cheaper rate he can see nothing but disaster in the future for business.

Many of the woolen men in New England voted for a higher tariff. They were persuaded that protection would save them. Now they see that it will ruin them and they are clamoring for free wool.

All right. There is nothing like experience to teach the principles of political economy. It's a pity that experience should be so dearly bought, but that is one of the laws of progress. Men who don't see what is for their good are apt to have their eyes opened with a staggering blow.

An old farmer lost the hinch pin of his wagon once on a time. He thought to supply its place with a bit of tough wood. He put his finger into the hole to ascertain its size. Just then the horses started. He lost his finger. When describing the accident he said: "The moment the team started, I saw that I had made a mistake."

Likewise the manufacturers who are suffering for want of raw materials. The moment Harrison's policy began to work they saw their mistake.

We are glad the Democrats are hanging on to their convictions. In the Virginia, Ohio and Pennsylvania conventions the theories of their platform were the many must not be taxed to support the few. Monopolies are a curse to the republic. The party that favors trusts and combines and kills competition is not the party of the people and must be sent to the rear.

Well, that is wholesome truth, and that kind of truth is bound to win its way.

The Democrats should get together and keep together. They have the Light in the Sickroom.

B. W. Buchanan, M. D.

Such a common proverb, despite all our sanitary teachings, that the occupant of a sick room in a private house should be kept at all hours in a darkened room. Not one time in ten do we enter a sick room in the day time to find it blessed with the light of the sun.

Almost invariably, when we cannot look at the face of the patient, we are obliged to repeat the things may be done up, in order that the rays of a much greater heat than the most able physician may ever hope to be, may be admitted. Too often the compliance with this request reveals a condition of the spots which, in a state of darkness, is almost inevitably one of disorder everywhere.

foods, medicines, furniture, bedding, misapplied; dust and stray leaves in all directions.

In brief, there is nothing so bad as a dark sickroom; it is as if the attendants were anticipating the death of the patient; and if the reason for it be asked, the answer is as inconsistent as the fact. The reasons usually offered is that the patient cannot bear the light; as though the light could be cut off from the patient by a curtain or screen and as though to darken one part of the room it were necessary to darken the whole of it. The real reason is an old superstitious practice, which once prevailed so intensely that the sick, suffering from the most terrible diseases, small-pox, for instance, were shut up in darkness, their beds surrounded with red curtains, during the whole of their illness. The red curtains are now pretty nearly given up, but the darkness is still accredited with those mysterious curative virtues.

A more injurious practice really could not be maintained than that of darkness in the sickroom. It is not only that it and disorder are results of darkness—a great remedy is lost. Sunlight is the remedy best; and the loss is momentous. Sunlight diffused through a room warms and clarifies the air. It has a direct influence on the minute organic poisons, a distinctive influence which is most precious, and it has a cheerful effect upon the mind. The sick should never be gloomy, and in the presence of the light the shadows of gloom fly away. Happily the hospital ward, notwithstanding its many defects, and it has many, is so far favored that it is blessed with the light of the sun whenever the sun shines. In private practice the same remedy ought to extend to the patients of the household, and the first words of the physician or surgeon on entering the dark sickroom should be the dying words of Goethe, "More light, more light!"

Revolution in Tobacco Curing.

There is an item going the rounds which indicates that there seems to be a revolution in the art of curing tobacco in the South.

people we read the points with interest and commend them to our farmers for thoughtful consideration. By the old method the stalks were hung with the leaves on them in the barn, and all cured together, making it difficult, laborious and precarious to get just the desired color in the leaf. New processes have been invented within the past few years which greatly lessen the labor, the risk and the time in curing, ensuring better results. Many planters have adopted the method, which seems to be coming into favor, of stripping the leaves from the stalk and curing these only, thus saving much time and labor and securing a more uniform color and better grades, which means, of course, higher prices when put upon the market.—Winston Republican.

Confederate Veterans' Association of North Carolina.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the State Confederate Veterans' Association, held in Raleigh, on Thursday, August 29th, 1889, the following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, That the first annual meeting of the Confederate Veterans' Association be held in Raleigh, on Wednesday, October 16th, 1889, and that the president be, and he is hereby authorized to call the same, and that the representatives in said annual meeting will consist of the president of the County Association or his authorized proxy, and any representatives who may be present from the counties where no organizations have been effected. Each county will be entitled to one representative.

Resolved, That the transportation lines in the State be and they are hereby requested to grant free transportation to one delegate from each county to and from this convention.

Resolved, That a copy of these proceedings be transmitted to the press of this State with a request to publish notice editorially.

In obedience to the above resolutions I hereby notify the County Confederate Veterans' Associations in counties where organizations have not been had, that the first annual meeting of the Confederate Veterans' Association of North Carolina will assemble in Raleigh October 16th, 1889, at 10 o'clock, a. m. This meeting will take into consideration every matter pertaining to the county and State associations providing for a more thorough organization and plans for assisting indigent soldiers of the State who require our aid and support.

MERIT WINS. We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Buckler's Arteric Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell so well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. W. H. Farman, Jr. Druggist.

Farmer's Wife.

"The hardest worked human animal that treads the earth is the average farmer's wife. Her life is filled with few pleasures, while the pain she suffers and the work she does would kill nine men out of ten. It is killing the women too."

The above is clipped from the Wilson Advance and the statement made is a disgrace upon civilization. The Globe is the friend of the farmer's wife, and we think it is high time that some ameliorating influences were being brought to bear upon this aggravated situation.

The farmer who would be contented to allow his wife, year in and year out, to perform her manual labor without the existence of some especially mitigating circumstances is unworthy of the noble occupation of the husbandman.

The farmers organize their alliances, meet and discuss the lagging trust, the railroad combination and all their other grievances, but the little woman at home is working her eyelids out to save the "old man a dollar or two."

"This is what she ought to do." Some narrow-minded, hard-hearted old skin-flint will say. Then if it is the husband of the woman own his wife a duty proportionate to the labor she performs.

In all endeavor, what is he doing to lessen her responsibilities, to make her work easier, to break the monotonous routine of her daily existence, to throw a little sunshine into days absorbed with the serious things of life, what is he doing?

In nine cases out of ten, absolutely nothing. What is he living for? A consummum? We give it up.

Now there are some farmers—blessed thought!—that are in agreeable contrast to the above class. They make life a pleasure to their families, and in consequence life becomes more enjoyable to them. The effect of this is apparent in everything around them. It crops out in the paint on the outside of the dwelling. In the whitewash that makes the barn and outhouse look cherry and bright. In the sleek, well-fed stock, in the vehicles and the farm implements.

The influence of the wife well treated is sure to find just such outlets as these. She is a cultivator, but especially so, when the husband of her heart realizes and appreciates the sacrifices she makes, and the trial she undergoes.—Durham Globe.

POLITICAL POINTS. Ex-Senator Riddleberger has taken the stump for the Democratic State ticket.

Speaker Carille thinks that tariff reform will be the slogan of the Democracy in the next campaign and Cleveland the candidate.

Successful Tobacco Cures.

It is a noted fact that tobacco curing in the Eastern and Southern sections of North Carolina are generally successful. A well known tobacco man accounts for this in the fact that the tobacco in those sections is always cured during the warm weather in August.

The temperature is then high, generally even, and hence it is much easier to regulate the heat than in September when the nights are cool. Mr. R. H. Hicks, of Nash county, has cured 74 bams this season, all of the brightest color and without a single failure of any sort. All of his tobacco was cured by the 20th of August, and hence during the hot weather. This theory seems very plausible and if true the eastern tobacco counties have a big advantage over those in the cooler sections of the State.—Danville Tobacco Journal.

AN INCURABLE CURED. A REMARKABLE STATEMENT FROM A WELL-KNOWN CITIZEN OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Cancer is hereditary in my family, an aunt on each side having died from this dreadful disease. In each instance the cancer was located in identical the same position that mine first made its appearance—just below the left eye and extending down the left cheek bone and nose. I was attended by the best physicians, but the cancer continued to grow worse under their treatment, and no hope of a cure could be given by them; they said: "I had better have my affairs for this life and the next arranged for the cancer was likely to strike a vital organ at any moment, and at once bleed me to death. About this time, 1886, I met with Mr. Shiloh, living near Due West, whose cancer was being rapidly cured by using Swift's Specific (S. S. S.). I gave up the doctors and all other medicines I had heretofore been using, and commenced taking S. S. S., and after the third bottle discovered that the cancer had fallen off, and that those sharp darting pains so characteristic of the cancer had ceased, and the discharge was very profuse. In a few days it began to heal rapidly and soon dried up. By the time I had exhausted the fifth bottle there was nothing left but the scar where the cancer had been, and I was a well man. The cure effected in my case is considered by my neighbors as a most remarkable one, and clearly demonstrates the fact that S. S. S. does CURE CANCER. Swift's Specific is a boon to suffering humanity, and all I ask is, that those afflicted with cancer give it a trial, and also myself be convinced of its virtues."
