A WIFE TO HER HUSBAND.

One of us, dear— But one— Will sit by a bed with a marvelous fear, And clasp a hand, Growing cold as it feels for the spirit-land— Darling, which one? One of us, dear— But one— Will stand by the other's coffin lid, And look and weep, While those marble lips strange silence keep; Darling, which one? One of us, dear— But one— By an open grave will drop a tear, And homeward go, The anguish of an unshared grief to know— Darling, which one? One of us, dear— But one— It may be you will slip from me, Or, perhaps my life may first be done— Which one?

A LOST PENNY

A TENDER, TOUCHING AND BEAUTIFUL STORY BY MISS BRILLIANT, AND VEREABLES BY DR. J. H. McLEAN. ROBINSON, OF THE DAILY SUN. A hardware newspaper reporter sees much of human nature. In searching for news he met upon the pavement a bright little black-eyed girl, who he took to be scarcely six years old. Tears glistened on her eyes and she clutched down her rosy cheeks like dew drops in a flour-sack. She had been crossed in the fulfillment of some antichristian wish, she had dropped a penny and it had rolled out of sight some where in the gutter. From her grievous little heart, gushed the sympathetic tear. That simple penny was a mine of wealth to her, and she had grasped it so eagerly and its possession had filled her with such joy. Now it was gone. Search for it proved futile, but it was replaced with a nickel. A smile of bewildered ecstasy lit up the little sorrowful face again and she ran away in untold glee, with sweet lips and a pretty dimple playing with the rose blush on the cheek.

This is a picture drawn from nature. How often do such incidents happen in the lives of the older ones! Our sky may perchance be oft times clouded, and oft times the touch of sorrow's finger leaves a melancholy tinge, the brightest hopes lie bleeding and the grand old love lites burn burning tears of misery. 'Tis then sympathy is needed and when the good Samaritan drawn by the "ties that binds our hearts in christian love," whispers to the grieved one he looks us. Though the sunlight is hidden by a cloud, it will shine all the brighter when the shadows are gone. This consoling sympathy for the woes of others is the "balm in Gilead" for troubled hearts. Under its influence many a burden will roll away into the sepulchre of the past, and like christians we can say, "He hath given me rest by his sorrow and life by his death." Then it is that our troubles, like that of the little girl who lost the penny, will be turned into joy and gladness.

This little incident teaches a practical lesson. We see men and women who have buffeted the waves of adversity through months and years sink at last in ankle-deep water. Their power of resistance has been worn out by long usage. Hope has deceived them so long, or postponed the fulfillment of her promises so often, that they cease to believe her stories of peace and happiness in the future. Many a convict has served his time in prison and thrown his life away as soon as set free. There is a slough of despond near the end of every period of suffering mental or physical. Few cross it safely. Many go down who swim bravely when the billows rolled high. Looking on the comfortable side, part of the world wonders why they sank when they were so near out of trouble. Not every one could understand that they were worn out, their hearts broken, and the comfort and sympathy of friends had turned to icebergs. They kept their colors flying when the battle was at its heat, and friends flocked around them and proffered aid, when aid and sympathy were not much needed. But when trouble and disaster came the friends deserted. There is something most pitiful in this yielding to the pressure of bitter fate after a hard struggle. The person who needs a helping hand is he who has pulled a heavy load nearly to the top of the hill and there halts, casting a look backward at the rough road he has traversed, and another at the height in front which he has yet to surmount. Weakened by toiling up the way the bit of light ahead of him magnifies into an impassable mountain and he faints at the door of success. Friendship is then appreciated. Friendship in deeds as well as words. An encouragement. It revives strength. It inspires the weary, heavily-laden traveler to press onward. It is the quintessence of christian brotherly love and charity. Scatter deeds of kindness around you; you will experience much joy in the giving.

Lawyer's License in Speech.

Sanford Express. There is one feature of the Boyle case which terminated at Raleigh last week in his conviction, that serves to teach a lesson which we wish to emphasize. It is stated that Boyle was given an opportunity at the close of his trial to speak and that he bitterly denounced two of the prosecuting attorneys for charging him with the offences of drunkenness and unchastity, the same offences of which these attorneys themselves are guilty. To be sure it came in bad grace from these attorneys to be reproving Boyle for these offences, notwithstanding he is a very bad man and ought to be punished. It pleased the audience when Boyle denounced these lawyers for their allusions to his unchastity and drunkenness. It would have been well enough for a son of, chaste and upright lawyer to have returned to these offences of people in vehement denunciation. Then for a lawyer to consistently practice law, he should be pure in his life and habits as well as a gospel minister or editor.

Nowhere in this country is granted that open and deliberate license of speech that the average lawyer indulges in to a jury in a court house. The reputation of an honorable person may be assailed by a lawyer to a jury, and that person has no redress, unless it be in the violation of law, by the application of a writ of habeas corpus. The press; with all its boldness and zeal does not dare to take such license of speech as a frequently granted the lawyer. A political platform speaker with his usual recklessness, very rarely descends to the bitter personalities and wanton assaults of the forum. Is this license of speech in the courts, the seat of law, necessary to the administration of law and justice? We know that when a rascal gets into law or in its clutches or on the witness stand he ought to be thoroughly ventilated, but the discrimination ought to be faithfully made and observed between the good and bad in speech. The average judge frequently allows the average attorney in his zeal to go beyond the basis of revealed truth and his speech does discredit to his high profession. Many high-minded lawyers say things to a jury that they would be ashamed to say to themselves in private. Every lawyer ought to be a pure and good man, because he is by profession an ambassador of justice and truth.

Capt. B. F. White has a horse that eats young chickens, feathers and all, and he had an old gander that would take a stick and knock against the bottom of the corn crib to make loose grains fall through the cracks and an old turkey gobbler that exercised a fatherly care over a young partridge. These are remarkable things, but the Capt. vouches for their truthfulness. —Almanac Gleaner.

Is Capt. White a "professional"? —Ed. Times.

Ex-President Davis writes the committee on invitation to the Centennial celebration by North Carolina of the Constitution from a sick bed, regretting his inability to be present at Fayetteville on that date, on account of increased impaired health. In his letter he pays handsome tribute to North Carolina's pre-eminent patriotism during and subsequent to the Revolution. It will be a source of great regret to thousands that the venerable Mr. Davis cannot be present on the above named occasion.

Oxford Ledger: Dr. Dixon will soon have completed the addition to the boys' building at the Orphan Asylum. In the upper part of Wake county near the Granville line, some weeks ago, a man hanted his companion that he could eat more chicken stew than he could. His friend accepted the wager and a half dozen chickens were killed and the stew was nicely prepared, when they sat down at a table and commenced operations in the presence of their friends. It is said that the stew disappeared at a rapid rate until it was all gone, neither one winning the bet. The result of this match terminated in the death of one of them in a few days, and the other narrowly escaped the same fate. We could not learn the names of the parties.

Hog Cholera vs. Charcoal.

AN ALMOST SURE CURE FOR THE DISEASE—THE GOVERNMENT'S DUTY.

For pigs and fattening hogs give anthracite coal every few days. If this cannot be had, get Cumberland coal, and the next best is charcoal. These will cure one of the best correctives for a disordered system, and in a number of cases experimented on by several large feeders of pigs as well as ourselves, we have found that anthracite especially will stop the spread of cholera, even when it has gotten into the head.

Some years ago we lost some eighteen large fattening pigs, and by using anthracite freely the disease was stopped. Our pigs and sows now have the run of the woods, where they have free range and a variety of food, yet we feed coal freely, especially charcoal. We turn charcoal ourselves. It is a very easy matter to keep a quantity on hand. Make a good fire, and after it burns freely another it with soda and a little water poured over it, and a large pile of good coal can be had. Use it freely. The approach of cholera can usually be noticed by the appearance of large red spots gradually turning into canning sores back of the ears. Remove such animals from the rest, give small quantities of laxative food, and feed freely to the sick; as well as to the healthy animals. Those having the disease badly cannot be cured, and had better be killed at once and burnt. A real cholera sick hog cannot be sold for meat without detection in the open market, as the appearance of the animal is against it, and none would risk buying such meat. If sold at all, it would be by stealth, and then it would be made up in sausage. Pigs should have a wood range, and access to pure water, exposure to intense heat during the summer will usually inoculate the animals with disease germs which will cause the disease to manifest itself in the early fall. Had the large sums of money paid by our government for a number of years in trying to eradicate this disease been used in enforcing health laws for the proper feeding and caring for these animals some good might have been accomplished. As it is, we have hundreds of agricultural books published, with queer microscopic drawings, which bewilder the reader and confuse his ideas, and do little, if any, good. Filth, heat, impure food, and crowding together will bring on disease in almost any animal, and only the most rigid inspection of all meats will be of any use. —Baltimore American.

SCROFULA IN CHILDREN.

The following is taken from a letter written under date of July 1, 1888, by Mrs. Ruth Berkeley, a most charitable and Christian lady, of Salina, Kan.: "In the early part of 1887 scrofula appeared on the head of my little grandchild then only eighteen months. Shortly after breaking out it spread rapidly all over her body. The scales on the face would peel off on the slightest touch, and the odor that would arise would make the atmosphere of the room sickening and unbearable. The disease next attacked the eyes and we feared she would lose her sight. Eminent physicians from the surrounding country were consulted, but could do nothing to relieve the little innocent, and gave it as their opinion that the case was hopeless and impossible to save the child's eyesight. It was then we decided to try Shilo's Specific (S. S. S.). That medicine at once made a speedy and correct cure. For more than a year past she has been as healthy as any child in the land."

COURED HIS LITTLE BOY.

My little boy had impurities of the blood that were of a scrofulous nature which resulted in the breaking out of an abscess on the hip. I gave him Swift's Specific (S. S. S.). It purified his blood and restored his health. As a blood purifier it certainly has no equal. FLEUX SINK, Salina, N. C. Many men miss great fortunes because their minds are always full of big schemes. No need to take those big cathartic pills; use Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pills; it is quite sufficient and more agreeable. Poor unhealthy discharges, such as catarrh, gonorrhea, rheumatism, and other forms of skin diseases, are symptoms of blood impurities. Take Dr. J. H. McLean's Sarsaparilla.

A Few Small Matters.

The man with his head above the clouds is generally a failure. A man must know how to utilize the common things of life if he would prosper in a material way.

This is strikingly illustrated in the lives of inventors. When an inventor goes in for a big thing, like perpetual motion, for instance, he goes to the poor house, but when he puts a rubber tip on the end of a pencil he makes a cool $100,000. The man who knows how to handle the little opportunities of life never fails to make his knowledge pay. The inventor of metal plates for soles made about $5,000,000. If he had scorned such small matters and turned his attention to steel armor for vessels he would probably have wasted his time and labor. The roller skate netted its inventor $1,000,000. The inventor of various little toys, puzzles and other trifles enjoy incomes ranging as high as $75,000 a year.

It is so in every line of human endeavor. When a man wants the earth he gets nothing. When he expects to rake in a fortune in big scope he dies in poverty. The successful men of the world fix their attention upon the commonest things—the every day matters and opportunities around them.—Atlanta Constitution.

Rheumatism and Catarrh.

Rheumatism and catarrh are both blood diseases. In many severe cases they have yielded to treatment with R. H. B. (Botanic Blood Balm.) made by Dr. J. H. McLean, of Salina, Kan. Write for book of convincing proof. Sent free. R. P. Dodge, Atlanta, Ga., says: "My wife had catarrh and nothing did her good. Her constitution finally failed and poison got into her blood. I placed her on a use of R. H. B. and to my surprise her recovery was rapid and complete."

W. F. McDaniel, Atlanta, Ga. writes: "I was much afflicted and had rheumatism so bad I could not get along without crutches. I also had neuritis in the last. First-class physicians did me no good. Then I tried R. H. B. and its effects were magical. I cheerfully recommend it as a good tonic and quick cure." Mrs. Matilda Nichols, Knoxville, Tenn., writes: "I had catarrh six years and a most distressing cough, and a most distressing cough, and my eyes were much swollen. Five bottles of R. H. B. 'Thank God I cured me.' John M. Haver, Tyler, Texas, says: "I was subject a number of years to spells of inflammatory rheumatism, which six bottles of R. H. B. thank heaven, has entirely cured me. I have not felt the slightest pain since."

Notice to Tax Payers.

The time for paying taxes allowed by law has nearly expired. After Nov. 1st the sheriff is empowered to collect by distress. To comply with the law and protect my bondsmen, it will be necessary for me to make levies after that time, as cannot do it. It will save tax payers much trouble to come forward and pay their taxes, and not wait until the last days allowed when there will be such crowds there will be little time to look over lists. Wage workers and small tax payers are warned not to delay, as in many cases the cost will be greater than their taxes. H. C. KEARNEY, SHERIFF.
