BY LOTTIE FURGURSON. Our Father who art in Heaven"

Is the first of our saviour's prayer; We use its words round the family Whene'r we worship there "Our father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be thy name;"

May Thy will as it is in Heaven, On earth be just the same.

"Give us this day our daily bread." We humbly ask of Thee; As we pardon these who sin unto us, So may our sins forgiven be.

Guard us in time of temptation, When we sorely need Thy care; "Deliver us from all evil."
Oh Lord! hear our prayer. To Thee we'll inscribe the glory,

True homage to Thee we'll rend, "And Thine shall be the kingdom, Forever more, Amen."

After the Battle.

It is now eight months since Mr. Harrison assumed control of the Federal government. The elections just over are the first that have occurred under his administration. The fact, therefore, that the Democratic vote has increased in nearly all sections and to such an extent that it may be compared to a tidal wave is as interesting as it is suggestive.

The Republicans will of course stoutly deny that it is a sign of the trend of public opinion, and repudiate the allega tion that it can be regarded as the popular verdict on the administration, but even they must adm't that the coincidence is sufficiently remarkable to demand explanation.

A. for the fierce and bitter conflict in Virginia it must be freely admitted that it was practically an administration fight and that the result is a stinging and deserved rebuke of Mr. Harrison. He unwar antibly intruded into the politics of that State. Knowing the methods of Mahone, he sunctioned them and assisted him by every influence which a President can command to cary the elections by fraud and corruption. The Navy Yard and the Custom House, with the immense patronage attached thereto, was placed at Mahone's disposal. He had whatever money was needed to influence voters, he had the constant advice of the shrewdest and most unscrupulous leaders of the Republican party, and he had the priceless prestige of the government.

In spite of these advantages, which were used for all they were worth, he is to-day a dead lion, and it is safe to say that Mr. Harrison has won neither credit for his shrewdness nor honor for his motives by the part he took in the bat-

But in other sections the Democrats have either won an unexpected victory or so seriously decreased the Republican plurality that politicians must needs put on their thinking caps. Is a change going on in public opinion? Are the people beginning to find out the narrow policy of the Republicanstheir home market humbuggery; their eagerness for high taxes, that may spend the surplus in all kinds of jobbery; their pension tomfoolery as exemplified by Tanner; their civil service hypoerley and their rush for the spoils o office; their tuckling to all sorts monop olies, combines and syndicates whose purpose is to rob the people, and their avowed motto that "trusts are private affairs"-are the thinking citizens opening their eyes to the fact that the Republican party must be relegated to the background for a generation, that by discipline and merited punishment it may learn to govern without grab-

If this is so, then popular sovereignty is vindicating itself and the masses are p oving that they can be safely trusted to rule with honesty and conscience.

Massachusetts has done some splendid work. The machinery of Brackett has won the day, but it is a costly victory. A few more such and the Republican party will be ruined. It retains its grip, but with relaxed and trembling muscles. An aroused public sentiment threw party affiliations to October and December, and remain | the wind and Russell comes out of the fight with wounds of which it may be through the Democratic ranks like an elephant through a forest of saplings.

He laughed at the fears of the cautious and sneered at the warnings of the timid. He conducted a fight unparalleled for bitterness, for gross personalities, for nal hatred and for appeals to prejudice and passion. The ballot box has taught him a lesson. His punishment has been severe as it was richly mer-

And so all along the line. From Iowa to the Atlantic the same evidences of a healthy and independent public opinion are manifest.

The election season has been stimulating, exciting, delightful. For the most part it has been thoughtful and good natured. The Republicans will accept the sesult with resignation and the Democrats with increased confidence that the economic policy they represent will be indersed by the people and inaugurate an era of national prosperity in which every citizen will be the gainer.

What to do With $10,000.

A few days since a half a dezen or nore citizens of Clinton were severally discussing what they each would do with $10,000 at their command. Some suggested one thing and some another; some would invest it in a soap factory. another a machine shop and so on. At last Mr. D. B. Nicholson, one of the leading attorneys at the Clinton bar spoke up and said that he would quit law, buy a good farm, raise it to a high state of cultivation and make every one of his boys practical scientific farmers. and that they should never enter any other profession with his permission.

A Gospel That Saves.

A gospel that can save the lost is th one needed by the world, and such a gospel has been provided and the way opened for the salvation of souls. Man must de his part in the plau-he mus repent and believe. A revival of religion always more or less interests the people. Here is a query for some wiseacre to solve. Why do not other lecturers and dissertations on ethical and philosophical subjects draw and move the masses like the gospel? The old story is yet potent beyond anything in the world. Heaven is a subtile power that no man has ever been able to exished by Dr. II. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets (little pills.)

Carelessness Which Causes Loss,

The Wilmington Star notes an incident highly characteristic of the North Carolina way of doing things. There was received at Wilmlerton from Mt. Airy a tebacco hogshead containin thirty-three bushels of apples to be of fei ed as "ime mountain apples" to be offered in competition with the Northern fruit. One was presented to the buyer in all its bright beauty, assorted according to size color and condition, each apple brushed and polished until it glowed like a blushing maiden's check; the other tumbled helter skeiter into its huge receptacle, battered and bruised by its rough handling, and then poured out a confused, dirty mass of half sound and half rotten fruit, repulsive to the eve, and offensive to the senses. When the shipper receives his account of sales he will lay the blame of small returns upon the market which cannot appreciate home enterprise, or upon the rail roads which made such a mess of its freight as to destroy its value. The fault is in his own carelessness. Our people in this, as in all other shipments of perishable things, fruits, vegetables poultry, will never hold their own in competition with other sections unless they adopt some of the ways of those sections. They must address the public eye and the public tastes. These things are not to be despised; and while the seller may have contempt for effemmacy and fastidiousness, these are the Small Sins.

Avoid little indiscretions. Even though harmless in themselves at first. vet they will grow and grow until they become as big as mountains in their precious influences, and will spread a ruin as wide as the sweep of a tornado. Even a word of insinuation thoughtless ly uttered, has been taken up by malice tinctured lips and viperous tongues, and in a week the reputation of an innocent fellow being is solled by the mildew of suspicion, and a'bright life goes under the dark cloud of reproach. We don't estimate the bigness of little things or the power they possess. It is the first leak in the ship which starts it to a wartery grave. The kisss of the gentlest zephyr can keep in motion the waters of an ocean, and the smallest pebble will start a ripple which will grow and grow until foam crested billows sweep in roaring fury across the mighty deep, stirring its waters into wildes surgings and scattering destruction o'er all things within their angry sweep, and so with our little acts of impruo and indiscretion. They start ripples of strife and trouble and sorrow which grow and grow, and swell and swell, until the wildest follows sweep down the river of time, forming and foaming and tossing, spreading dismay here and making wrecks upon the ocean of eter-
