Hoar's Election Bill.

J A THOMAS Editor and Proprietor

HIGH-HANDED OUTRAGE UPOT THE RIGHTS OF THE PEOPLE.

Senator Hoar submitted, from the committee on privileges and elections, today, says the Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, the bill upon which he has been at work for some weeks, and the object of which is to turn the States of the South bodily into the embrace of the Republican party. Senator Pugh well described its dark objects and the unhappy results sure to follow any attempt to enforce it. It was noticeable that Mr. Teller, who as a member of the majority of the committee consented to the report of the billtook occasion to reserve the right of dissent when it is brought up for action. The bill is extremely voluminous, covering nearly forty printed pages. Its provisions are most carefully and ingeniously drawn; and while state and local election officials are not, in words, dispensed with, the absolute right to declare the result of a congressional election is lodged in the hands of the federal officers. A board of canvassers for each congressional district is provided for, which board will kindly relieve the state officials of all trouble, and their certificate is to be accepted by the clerk of the house of representatives.

It is understood that in the preparation of this bill Mr. Hoar had the benefit of the advice and experience of Mr. John Davemport, the chief federal supervisor of elections in New York, and several of the provisions inserted in the bill are of a similar character to some which Mr. Davenport has been running on his own hook in New York for years past. The house-to-house canvass of voters is an idea which Mr. Davenport conceived ten years ago, and whiah he has carried out in New York city at every congresional election since. Not having the sanction of law for it, there has not been the opportunity to use it for what it is worth which is now proposed in Mr. Hoar's bill. This house to house canvass, which is to be made by the partisan federal officials, is by the bill to practically supersede the state registration lists, and no voter whose name is not on the list of the federal officials may find himself deprived of his ballot. The chief supervisors are made in effect the arbiters of all congressional elections, and in order to supply them with whatever funds that may be desired by them the extraor linary recourse is had to forbidding a scrutiny of their accounts by the accounting officers of the treas iry. This will throw open the door for the pointment of an army of retainers, who will swarm around the polls to browbeat and intimidate, and with whom state officials can only undertake to in-long imprisonment. The bill, like the bill on the same subje t introduced in the house by another Massachusetts man, nominally applies to the whole country, but in case of enaciment into law would be a dead letter everywhere except in the south. Senator Pugh's notice to Mr. Hoar and h's associates that the bill will be fought to the last extremity by the minority, kept at home. The operatives spend and with all the power at their command, was right, and will meet the approval of the country.

Greed for Office.

Robesonian. Whatever may be said of the past, at no time was there ever seen such greed for office as prevails to-day. As thronged a: Washington city has been in other years, never before has it been visited by such contending hosts striving for office as in recent months. The mania for office is not confined, it appears, to certain centers of population, but the contagion has spread like a deadly epidemic out into the remotest rural hamlets of the land, The craze has grown so intense, moreover, that the ward orahake's Drug Store, adjoining Dr. O. tor, and crossroads politician and the nearer home. Let surplus capital in newspaper scribbler now and then in plain disregard of the tax-payers interests and the people's rights, dares to advocate official changes in order to make vacancies. They want a chance. They are out and want a chance for themselves or their friends to get in. Even the Farmers' Alliance, a noble institution, based on the sound principles of the Democratic party and conducted with the highest and holiest aims in view, is being made use of in some quarters by hot-headed individuals, but by only a few, we are glad to say, to further the changes to the detriment of public service and increase of tax-burdens to the public. Greed for office or a morbid misanthropic passion or down right ignorance, either one or the other or all three combined, enter to make here and there a man advocate official changes at close of every term. Such is the nonsensical extreme to which this greed for office occasionally carries a man.

LOUISBURG, N. C., MAY 9, 1890.

We are glad to say that in the grand old county of Robeson, so noted for its intelligence, conservatism and patriotism; and so pre eminent for its stability, deliberation and economy, there are but few of this er zed and fanatical class of office-seekers. If there is a body of people on earth that can sit down more coolly and crushingly, yet calmly and deliberately on wild enthusiasts, and unblushingly ambitious demagognes than any other, it must be found inside the line that marks off from the rest of the world, the great county of Robeson. It is only the crazy or boldly ignorant can't see or don't know that our people have far too much sense not to understand that frequent changes in public official servants gives them both poorer more expensive official service. And not only can they see this, but also that those who advocate frequent official changes are doing so either because they want office for themselves or their cousins, or their other friends and not for the public good. The offices are for the benefit of the people. They were not established to be handed around for Dick, Tom and Harry and the rest, but for the benefit of the public. Therefore, the people who fill the offices are going to do it in such a way as will secure the best and the cheapest public service.

And of course, common sense says, this cannot be done by frequent changes. The foregoing is suggested by a late eech on office-seeking delivered on the floor of the House of Representative- by a gallant Mississipp an. We are proud we can say, furthermore, that the fore-going will flud a popular echo in our county among all, who like ourselves. have been raised between and have had their hands hardoned by PLOW HANDLES.

The South's Great Need.

The one great need for the South today is more manufactories of all kinds Until she gets these she will not enjoy that degree of prosperity to which she is entitled. Agricultural pursuits can never make a country prosperous in the true sense of the word-a fact which was eminently demonstrated throughout the South in that period antedating the late war. In no other line of industry has the South been more active than in the manufacture of tobacco. If we take this one industry alone as an example we can easily see the actual need of the South to-day. In those sections of Virginia and North Carolina where to bacco grows most extensively we find an ample supply of manufactories to consume the bulk of the crops. In Winston, Salisbury, Durham, Reidsville, Henderson, Oxford, Richmond. Petersburg, Danville, Lynchburg and other places a large number of factories are busily engaged to converting the raw material into the manufactured product. What is the result? These towns are pro-perous. They expend large sums of money not only in paying for leaf, but also to the operatives. The money is their money at home and it helps to increase home trade. The manufacturer sells his goods and draws money back home from all sections. He expends his profits at home and thus adds to the wealth of his native place. This is an example which teaches the people of the South a wholesome lesson. So long as we have our shoes, bats, gloves, &c., manufactured at the North. so long are we the sufferers and so long will money be close with us. So long as the clothes we wear are made in Northern factories so long will we suffer. In agricultural implements the same holds true. Coming closer home we find that all the cannel goods on our tables - corn, tonntoes, pickles, preserves, meats, &c., are put in Northern or Western factories, and so on through the entire list of our necessities.

Let the South learn a lesson. It i true that we are gaining daily in this line, but we need to bring the matter our sections be put to use. We need canning factories especially, for we can grow the raw supply in the greatest abundance. So also in the shoe factories, furniture works, wooden ware works, and a score of other enterprises works, and a score of other enterprises in the same line. When once the South manufactures her own supplies then our money will stay at home. The merchants will not then "go north" to buy; but will buy in Southern factories what his customers need. Even in a what his customers need. Even in a number of our tobacco towns there is ample room for a diversity of industries. If the manufacture of tobacco pays so well, manufacturing in other lines, which are less crowded, will bring equal A ti-Alliance and Anti-Democratic principle of making frequent official returns. Let some of our readers who have surplus capital ponder these facts.

"I have read somewhere," says the Rev. Mr. Wise, in his "Bridal Greetings," of a bridegroom who gloried in eccentricities. He requested his bride to come with him into the garden a day or two after their wedding. He then drew a line over the roof of their cottage. Giving his wife one end of it he recreated to the other side and exclaimed:

"Pull the line !" She pulled it at his request, so far as she could. He cried:

"Pull it over !" "I can't," she replied.

"But pull with all your might !" still shouted her whimsical husband. But vain were all the efforts of the bride to pull over the line so long as her husband held the opposite end. But when he came round, and they pulled at the same end, it came over with great

In this illustration, as homely as it may be, there is a sound philosophy. Husband and wife must mutually bear and concede if they wish to make a home retreat of joy and bliss. alone cannot make a home happy. There needs a unison of action, sweetness of spirit and great forbearance and love in both husband and wife to secure the great end of happiness in the domestic circle. Home is no unmixed paradise of sweet; the elements of peace and true happiness are there, and so, too, are the elements of discord and misery; and it ne ds only the bitter spirit of the world without to make it a pandemonium, or the loving genius of harmony to make it the prompter of every affectionate impulse.-Ex.

It is a sign of the drift of what is called "society," and of at least possible per ls, both social and moral, when the leading preacher in the great English church, St. Paul's Cathedral, speaks as follows on the modern "Worship of Wealth." While allowing, to the full, the value of weakh, if properly sought and used, he strongly insisted upon the great truth, that the highest and noblest product of civilization was men -men of character and principle, sustaining law and doing good to their fellow-men by setting before them the example of the best ideals of life. In contrast with this, the preacher presented some of the repelling and deplorable aspects of existing social life; and much that he said applies forcibly to life in this country as well as that in England. "What do we see," he asks, "every year as the Loudon season draws near, but a bevy of mothers, like generals, set out on a campaign, prepared to un-dergo any amount of fatigue if only they marry their daughters, not necessarily to a high-souled virtuous man, but in any case to a fortune? What do we see but a group of young men thinking, after perhaps after a career of discipation, that the time has arrived for settling respectably in life, and looking out, each one of them, not for a girl who has the graces and the character which will make her husband and her children happy, but for somebody who has sufficient dowry to enable him to keep up a large establishment?" This tremendous arraignment of modern social views and customs, and the folly and guilt of bowing down to wealth, made a sensation in the great congregation. Has it not a lesson for this country, as well as for London?

No Doubt of It.

"You ask my daughters hand in marriage," mused the old man as he looked the candidate over. "Are you sure you love her ?"

"I know I do." "And you can support her on your

The Ideal Newspaper.

A number of prominent American editors have been recently discussing the ideal newspaper. One wanted more politics, another more so ial and personel gossip, while a third wished to taboo all personalities and social gossip. The result was very perplexing, and showed that each able editor had his "fad." which he was disposed to induige at the expense of his readers. It may safely be said that the "ideal" newspaper does not exist, and will not until all readers share the same tastes. The best newspaper is the one which aims to give all the genuine news of the day, to expose fraud wherever it be found and to defend the interests of the people against the designs of monopolies and big corporations. If a newspaper fills these conditions it comes as near to the ideal
