"Don't be idiotic," he roughly retorted.
'Be satisfied with what you have already done to disgrace yourself and me. Don't imagine that you are going on to have me pointed at as a deserted husband; to have the history of your shame hawked through all the papers in the land. If you hankered for the excitement of an elopement you should have embraced the opportunity when you had it; rest assured you will not get another." "No?" with an insolent smile. "Will

Mrs. Rogers never take you away again?" He opened his lips, but then, as if fear-ing to trust himself to speak, turned and rushed from the room. Anita buried her head in the sofa pillow and lay still, making no moan, although every nerve was a-quiver under the stinging humiliation of Donald's tone and her own impotent anger. A moment later she lifted her white face, dully staring. Donald had come back.

"I want to take it all back Nita," he said humbly, even pleadingly, "all the hateful things I have been saying. I have tormented myself into a temper over this thing, and I have said more than I meant-a good deal more than I ought. It does look queer, and you won't explain it. And the queerest thing about as to put an altogether different aspect upon the matter; and I think you are Lamps and Lamp goods, Garden keeping your lips closed in some foolish whi n of shielding your cousin some way. I know that he is at the bottom of the whole business; that-why, great heavens, Nita, if an angel came to tell me evil about you I could not really believe it!" moving a little toward her. "I believe nothing-nothing, Nita, except what I saw; and someway, somehow, I believe in you in spite of that." Anita had buried her face again in the

Anita said nothing. Womanlike, even in her weeping she had her wits well about her, and, seeing Donald ready for reconciliation, she was full of obstinate resolve to move no step toward meeting him half way. His had been the first wrongdoing; legitimately his was the humiliation of confession and pleading. Seeing her in tears for his harshness, she subtly planned, he, already disposed to tenderness, must be moved to take her in his arms with comforting and caressing: and when he had come to that she knew he would be completely at her mercy. She would not yield to him at once: his punishment must be prolonged while the last remnant of her coldheartedness could endure; and her tardy forgiveness must impress him once for all with the fact that her feelings were not to be lightly disregarded. "Won't you tell me, dear?" more tenderly still. Anita's head was shaken with sudden sobbing. He took it for a gesture of refusal, and without another

After a moment, surprised at the silence, she looked up, chagrined to find him gone, and, forgetting her resolve of cold quiescence, ran eagerly after him to the hall door; but he was already far down the street, hurrying on with a quick, nervous stride, already beyond reach of her voice if she called.

But there was a rare light of happiness on her face as she came back, sitting down in the chair where he had arms. been, softly caressing with her cheek the cushion against which his head had rested. After all, he still loved her in his large, passionless, unselfish way, that would think no evil even though his own yes had seen her in the arms of another, guilty kisses showered upon her face. Even after that, if an angel came to tell him evil of her he would not believeeagerly repeating his words. And she, -her face grew graver as she reverted to her own feelings, conscious that all his magnanimity had been powerless to kill that pain of jealous distrust. Full of longing to meet his tender confidence with a trust no less perfect than his own, it seemed still impossible that her heart should soar beyond her understanding. Convicted of evil in her mind, she could not, through blind love, force herself to believe him guiltless; but she could be even more generous than he—the glory Heavy and fancy groceries, such of transcendent love lighting her wet eyes-for with even a doubt of his truth still shadowing her heart she could take him back to her love, overlooking, condoning everything.

Anita stooped to help the child upon her feet again and restore the scattered contents to the basket, while, as if it had been mis chievously watching for the opportunity, the wind at this moment seized upon her own hat and sent it spinning away through the dust. The child, not to be outdone in kindness, darted after it and presently returned triumphant, but not until the wind had made havoc with the arrangement of Anita's bair, while the story of its adventure was grimly marked upon the hat. Again Anita besitated as she shook the dusty plumes, glancing uncertainly back; but now it was farther to go home than to press on to her first goal; and after all, harrying on, what would it matter to Donald in what guise

Alone in the long hall outside the office she stopped, with swift feminine touches striving to improve her disheveled appearance; and when she had brushed her hat and with sundry little pats helpless to improve had assured berself how far her hair was awry, when she had shaken her skirts and smoothed up the long wrists of her gloves still she lingered, her heart tumnituously beating. She would not go in through the large outer office, but went on to the door more seldom used opening into Donald's private room, halting with the door knob in her hand, swallowing a lump that had risen in her throat, while in incoherent thought she tried to frame what she first would say; but in the chaos of her mind only rose the vision of Donald as he would look, the glowing love that would be in his eyes as he rose to clasp her in his

Softly she turned the knob, a tender smile curving her lips, her eyes luminous with anticipation, softly pushed open the door and entered the room.

"I should suppose it would seem suffi-ciently evident," with a faint, sardonic smile, angrily conscious of her battered hat and the dusty untidiness of her dress, while her glance took in the exquisite neatness of the other's toilet, the smooth hair and the dainty, dustless gown. Evidently Mrs. Rogers had come in before the storm began, Anita shrewdly inferred, measuring the time in her mind, at the same time noting that the door to the outer office was closed.

Donald had hurried forward, flushing a little with surprise or embarrassment, with that little mockery of his old manner he had come to assume before others. "It is pleasant that you let yourself be blown this way: but I must say I approve your taste rather more than your judgment. I should hardly have supposed you would care to venture out such a day as this."

"Oh, I am sure you could not have exrained ear could not miss.

"I believe most women like to go beating their way through a storm," chimed in Mrs. Rogers in her vivacious way. "It seems somehow to satisfy that craving for antagonism that seems to be inherent in the female heart." "Do you think so? returned Donald, with a smile of careless conftesy, a tiny frown furrowed between his eyes. "And do you enjoy this peculiar craving?" "Oh, yes; we all do. And most of us CHAPTER XIII. wear our lives out beating against the wind—that is, contriving imaginary total depravity of inanimate things that "I came around, you know, to see if Mr. Bartels and you," innocently turning to Anita, as if ingenuously impelled to explain her presence there, "out of kind charity, to revive my drooping spirits, would not come around late this afternoon for a little game of tennis; but the wind seemed to answer for you before I had long fairly gotten the invitation out of my 96

"I should not have supposed you could consider it necessary to wait for even the wind to answer such an invitation as | 97 that," with an insolent smile, after a brief stare of incredulity. "You know that I do not play tennis, Mrs. Rogers." "No," slightly discomfited; "but if you 97

would only learn, you would enjoy it so much." "But you are not going out in the dust?" interposed Donald hastily, his protest, however, somewhat lukewarm in tone. "Won't you wait until the storm is over, Mrs. Rogers?" "Oh, no; the doctor is waiting for me, and," gayly nodding herself out of the door, "two's a company, while three -ah, you know. Good afternoon, both of you." Donald closed the door after her with a relieved expression, turning to Anita

"Nonsense!" impatiently. "Why will you always impute ideas to that poor woman that never enter her head? c referred to herself, of course."

"Of course nothing on earth could have induced me to come in had I dreamt how painfully superfluous I was to be," she went on as if he had not spoken. "And even worse than that, to interrupt your tete-a-tete-to drive your guest away!" with a smile of bitter irony. "I cannot sufficiently express my regret."

"Nonsense!" cried Donald again, reddening angrily. "There was no reason" y exclaimed, first to recover her voice in on earth why you should not have come in, as you know perfectly well. And as for driving her away: she had finished her business before you came in and would have been gone long ago had she not stopped to speak to you.

"Her business?-that invitation to play tennis, of course you meant to say, with a hard, mirthless laugh. Donald gave himself a little restless shake, as if he would throw off the cloud that had gathered on his face. "Oh, never mind the woman!" he irritably exclaimed. "You came to see me about | 1040 something, did you not, Nita? Let's change the subject to that," looking at her anxiously.

"Why, yes, I did come to see you about something," a bitter smile curling her 1044 lins. "I came because," steadily regard ing him, "I would like a little money." "Why, certainly: but," seeming somewhat embarrassed, "how much do you | 1049

"Oh, twenty-five or thirty dollars will do with what I have, I think. I want it," explaining with an air of painful 1052 punctiliousness, "to buy material for a 2053 pected me," a little sneer in her tone his new tea gown and perhaps to get lace to make a jabot up the front."

"Don't, Nita," with a sort of hurt gentleness. "I don't want to know how you propose to use it. And you must have a larger allowance after this that the want may not occur again," looking up at her pleasantly. He was always generous in money matters, and was, in fact, well pleased that she had come to ask this little favor now. "I will make this fifty; you see I must give you a check—my purse is as bare as Old Mother Hubbard's cupboard."
