TRACKWALKING

ARAILROAD OCCUPATION THAT MUST GROW TO BE TEDIOUS.

How the Erie Transportation Company Keep Their Roadbeds in Repair—Looking for Loose Nuts and Protruding Spikes Along the Lins.

The terrible accident that happened to Peter Dangherly, the "trackwalker," gave to many readers a new word in the vocabulary of "trades and occupations."

"A trackwalker, a trackwalker?" exclaimed one citizen when asked the definition of the term. "Why, yes; of course. A trackwalker is a fellow who walks the tracks. See? Just as easy! Now ask me something hard!"

It pressed for a closer explanation of the long word's meaning, the citizen, watching trying to ring in on his nose. A trackwalker is a fellow who walks the tracks. See? Just as easy!

When all this was over, the man who had been talking about the trackwalker, stepped down from the platform and said to the man who had been talking about the trackwalker...

ON THE VERGE OF THE UNKNOWN.

An Experiment That Makes Us Ask, "What is Coming?"

Mr. W. H. Proce, chief engineer and electrician to the postoffice, has put up a wire a mile long on the coast near Lenoir...

There is a possibility here of interplanetary communication, a good deal more worthy attention than any scheme for making gigantic electric flashes. We do not know if we can communicate by telephone through the ether to New York or Melbourne with or without cables...

None of us understands accurately, or even so approximately, what the conditions are, but some of us know for certain that they are occasionally, and by what we call accident, been present to people far inland, and that, when present, the communication is completed without wires, and mind speaks to mind independently of any intermediary not extending within it.

A Refresher to Be Deported Upon. Professor W. H. Proce is a good deal of a hothead. He is a man of a singular fact that whenever he appears to deliver a lecture the rain begins to fall.

A LITERAL MINDED MAN.

An Interested Spectator Who Took a Political Story in Good Faith.

The most curious person in the audience of a story teller is the literal minded man. When General Dix ran for governor there was great discussion as to his age.

I finally took up the question of General Dix's age, gave the dates of the various biographical dictionaries and encyclopedias, and based a theory on the fact that he was a lieutenant, and finally said that the only really authentic data had been revealed by some recent historians in the colonial records of Massachusetts.

It isn't true, Mr. Dewey," he repeated, "because that happened more than 200 years ago." I was told when in Watertown last fall that although this happened in 1871 that man had never been able to come into town since—Chauncey M. Dewey in New York World.

The Poverty of Shopping. The poetry of shopping comes in with these shoppers who are starved for excitement, variety and beauty at home.

A Medical Deduction in 1715. In 1715 a collier digger having been stifted at Jena, the medical faculty of the university decided that the cause was not the direct action of the devil, but a deadly gas.

Small Boy—Mamma wants you to read her up two barrels of those apples she was looking at.

Decide—All right, sonny. "Say, couldn't you pour the two barrels into one big barrel?" "Eh? What for?" "That she couldn't get it through the door of the lock closet."—Good Mamma.

A DEBT PAYING RELIGION.

One of the greatest needs of the times is for a quickening of the public conscience with regard to the sacredness of financial obligations.

We have not yet had faith in man's integrity. We know that there are many, both in our country and abroad, who are not so good as their word.

Mr. Wesley was a man of extraordinary ordinary wisdom. One of the "rules" for the government of the Methodist Episcopal Church is that together with the members of the church, they should be diligent in the discharge of their financial obligations.

It is not time for the pulpit and press to speak out more plainly and pointedly on this subject. The Advocate thinks so. A religion that does not teach men to pay their honest debts is not the religion of Christ.

Nothing is more unjust or capricious than public opinion. It is impossible to prevent cough and cold in the winter season. A draught of air, the going out of a fire or any sudden change of the temperature of a room is sufficient to produce such a result.
