

THE FRANKLIN TIMES.

VOL. XXIII. LOUISBURG, N. C., FRIDAY, JUNE 30, 1893. NUMBER 17

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

TO PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS.

The Superintendent of Public Schools of Franklin county will be in Louisburg on the second Thursday of February, April, July, September, October and December, and remain for three days, if necessary, for the purpose of examining applicants to teach in the Public Schools of this county. I will also be in Louisburg on Saturday of each week, and all public days, to attend to any business connected with my office.

J. N. HARRIS, Supt.

Professional cards.

C. M. COOKE & SON,
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW,
LOUISBURG, N. C.

Will attend the courts of Nash, Franklin, Granville, Warren and Wake counties, also the Superior Court of North Carolina, and the U. S. District Court.

D. J. E. MALONE,
Office two doors below Thomas & Aycock's drug store, adjoining Dr. O. L. Ellis.

D. W. H. NICHOLSON,
PRACTISING PHYSICIAN,
LOUISBURG, N. C.

E. W. TIMBERLAKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
LOUISBURG, N. C.

Office on Nash street.

F. S. SPRUILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
LOUISBURG, N. C.

Will attend the courts of Franklin, Vance, Granville, Warren and Wake counties, also the Superior Court of North Carolina, at court sessions in all counties.

N. Y. GILLEY,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
FRANKLIN, N. C.

All legal business promptly attended to.

THOS. B. WILDER,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
LOUISBURG, N. C.

Office on Main street, one door below Eighth St.

W. M. PERSON,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
LOUISBURG, N. C.

Practice in all courts. Office in the Court House.

WHAT IS IT CAN IT DO?

The original and only genuine Camphor Ointment... Prepared by Dr. Starkey & Paalen, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

COFFINS AND ASKETS.

We have added to our already complete line of wood and cloth covered Coffins and Caskets

SOLID WALNUT COFFINS AND CASKETS.

Also a line of

METALICS

as nice and fine goods as is carried in any of our cities. Our stock is complete in every line.

Respectfully,

R. R. HARRIS & Co.

Louisburg, N. C.

Bank of Louisburg

Does a General Banking Business.

Collections made and returned promptly

Northern Exchange bought and sold.

COUNTY ORDERS CASHED

Interest paid on deposits after three months.

W. P. WEBB, President.

HON. HENRY WATTERSON.

HIS ADDRESS BEFORE THE AGRICULTURAL AND MECHANICAL COLLEGE.

A Masterly Address Teeming With Fine Thought, Beautiful Rhetoric and Charming Illustrations. News-Observer.

It was a noteworthy audience which assembled in Metropolitan Hall last evening to hear the address of that distinguished orator and journalist, Hon. Henry Watterson, before the students of the Agricultural and Mechanical College. It was an audience composed of the culture and beauty of the City of Oaks, for besides the thoughtful array of professional and business, there was the charming presence of feminine beauty pervading the whole length and breadth of the hall. The students and faculty of the Agricultural and Mechanical College were present in a body. The hall was crowded to its utmost capacity long before the appearance of the orator of the evening, and there was hardly standing room. The galleries were filled. It was truly a representative audience, one which was a just compliment to the occasion of the visit of the accomplished Kentuckian to our midst—and certainly a most expectant audience.

The graduating class had the seats in front of the stage. Shortly before 8 o'clock the orator was escorted into the hall by President Holladay, the trustees of the college, and other distinguished gentlemen, including Mr. Thos. R. Jernigan, Mr. W. S. Peimrose, Dr. Hubert Hayward, Mr. A. Leizer, Prof. C. D. McIver, Col. W. P. Green, Dr. Eugene Daniel, Mr. Corbett, Mr. W. R. Capshaw, Mr. H. E. Price, Col. Holladay, President of the A. and M. College, first announced that Rev. Dr. Daniel would open the exercises with prayer. After prayer Col. Holladay, in graceful words of commendation to the speaker or introduced, Hon. Henry Watterson, of Kentucky, and announced his subject as "Money and Morals." The orator was greeted with enthusiastic applause.

Mr. Watterson introduced his address with a pleasant anecdote, the lesson of which was the hope expressed by himself that the audience was not suffering poverty as to either one of the things mentioned in his subject.

He declared there was no subject that did not have two sides to it. Agreement as to conclusions might not always follow, and he was constrained to believe that we are more apt to be in the wrong when most positive and emphatic. The self-confessed man in the wrong says: I can't give in, so you must. He declared humbly that he would not be pragmatical but as he had the floor the audience must give in. (Laughter)

The speaker with a beautiful burst of rhetoric, in words of choice and vivid description pictured America and held up its magnificent possibilities. Was there anything to darken the light—anything to obstruct the future? There were Canada and Mexico, the asylums of the man with money and no morals. Every one has thought of what a trial it is to be without money. All have dreamed of what a luxury it would be to have it—have reveled in the thought of the wheel of fortune bringing the coveted prize—have thought of how it would bring comforts to suffering friends and pay debts.

Money is relative. It is very relative. The man who has $100,000 and $150,000 worth of wants is much worse off than the man who has nothing and wants his dinner. It is also full of illusions. Prince and peasant, warrior, statesman and philosopher, have all been struck by that golden rod. It is the piston rod that drives all else—it is the pivot around which all else revolves. It is universally used and abused. It is courted and reviled. All men profess to treat it indifferently but secretly never knew what it was to be happy till he had an income with its corresponding wants, and enjoyed the friendship of those gentlemen, Messrs. Promissory Note, Renewal, Discount & Co. (laughter.)

He declared that it was upon the whole a broad fact that money hardened and contracted ten men to where it elevated and ennobled one. Many a good fellow has been turned into a bad one by the possession of money. Many people are misled by the world's most accepted maxims. The subject of perseverance is presented in more forms than any other adulatory maxim. But perseverance will not turn a laborer into an artist, and even when success is attained it is disappointing. Men strive for honor and refinement and when at last attained there is no joy in it. He spoke of an aspirant for the Presidency of the United States who had struggled for the office twenty years. When he at last came to be President his ambition had lost its fire, his old enemies had died or become his friends, and so it was that he found no pleasure in it.

The young man who has perished strong at the gate of the land of the one woman of his heart's desire would better seek some one who is contented. The orator's lively denials of characteristic Kentucky humor brought forth much of applause, and occasionally revealed the influence of the old Kentuckian world of Kentucky, who was wild some few years ago.

The speaker went on to discuss the subject of money. He said that gold or always expected, and when he loses he wearies. But it is a fatal mistake when a man lays his hand on money which is somebody else's. But the worst of these is the man who goes as a pillar of the church and municipality as a model of christianity. Hypocrisy, he said, is the homage vice pays to virtue. It is also the mask behind which pretended virtue drives her hypocrites' passions. There are hypocrites and hypocrites. Some are so deep they never find themselves out, others who are hypocrites find themselves out.

Find out a nation's brand and you will know that nation's danger. Never mind about Asia, find out about America. He spoke eloquently of the race problem, and said that there must be faith in God to solve it. Is it the labor question? It seemed that, but to the machinery of our fine government and civilization, it must adjust itself. There seems no one single political interest that looks lasting danger. When any one political party thinks it has the world in a sling, public opinion gets upon its hind legs and kicks it out.

It is all in the relation of the money power to the minds of the people. This would not be so bad if it were confined to the commercial world, but it extends to the $10,000 pulpit, or United States Senatorship. The trail of the trade mark of the dollar is over us all.

What a struggle it is in all great centres for money—nothing but money. How easy it is to forget how a rich neighbor secured his wealth when we are invited to enjoy his bounty. They make their fortunes first, and then buy a seat in the United States Senate. This love of the money power is crushing out every elevating and ennobling sentiment. I do not mean, said the speaker, to argue that the poor are the happiest, but neither are the rich. Switzerland is no more wealthy now than it was five hundred years ago.

What a struggle it is in all great centres for money—nothing but money. How easy it is to forget how a rich neighbor secured his wealth when we are invited to enjoy his bounty. They make their fortunes first, and then buy a seat in the United States Senate. This love of the money power is crushing out every elevating and ennobling sentiment. I do not mean, said the speaker, to argue that the poor are the happiest, but neither are the rich. Switzerland is no more wealthy now than it was five hundred years ago.

The speaker declared that we are upon the ascending and not the descending scale of national greatness. We have many centuries of prosperous existence ahead. The money devil is the lion across our national highway. He is at the road fork, one leading up to national fame and glory, the other leading to ignoble phibromy. Beware of the man who puts his pocket above his conscience, his party and his country. If you want to read of financial tragedy read the history of Wall street. The power of pride and money is weak. The statesmanship which is to lead us up the national incline of greatness and glory must address itself more to honor, virtue and truth.

The speaker enjoined against socialism. He declared that the American people is a homogeneous people. All of us should be proud that we are American citizens. All of us should be proud of the high places that we have our forefathers and our good in everything.

ADOPT GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

James W. Keenan, president of the American People's Party, was the speaker at the meeting of the party held at the Hotel Raleigh, Friday evening, June 24th. He declared that the government should own the railroads, telegraphs, and other public utilities. He said that the people should have a say in the management of these enterprises.

The meeting was held at the Hotel Raleigh, Friday evening, June 24th. It was a very successful one, and the speaker was well received. He declared that the government should own the railroads, telegraphs, and other public utilities. He said that the people should have a say in the management of these enterprises.

A TRINAMPS LAW.

The Madison Hotel, at the corner of Main and Second streets, is the headquarters of the Trinamps Law. It is a very successful one, and the speaker was well received. He declared that the government should own the railroads, telegraphs, and other public utilities. He said that the people should have a say in the management of these enterprises.

The Trinamps Law is a very successful one, and the speaker was well received. He declared that the government should own the railroads, telegraphs, and other public utilities. He said that the people should have a say in the management of these enterprises.

The Trinamps Law is a very successful one, and the speaker was well received. He declared that the government should own the railroads, telegraphs, and other public utilities. He said that the people should have a say in the management of these enterprises.

The Trinamps Law is a very successful one, and the speaker was well received. He declared that the government should own the railroads, telegraphs, and other public utilities. He said that the people should have a say in the management of these enterprises.

The Trinamps Law is a very successful one, and the speaker was well received. He declared that the government should own the railroads, telegraphs, and other public utilities. He said that the people should have a say in the management of these enterprises.

THE LIQUOR DEALERS.

Their Meeting at Raleigh—One Hundred and Twenty-two Delegates Present—An Association Formed and Officers Elected.

On June 22, one of the most important conventions of business men was called to order in Metropolitan Hall, composed of delegates from the retail liquor dealers and distillers of North Carolina. There were 122 delegates present, and the body was a noble one, being the first large gathering of business men ever assembled in the State. They transacted their business in a systematic and quiet manner.

In the morning a preliminary meeting was held and several matters were arranged. The delegates were organized into a committee, and the following officers were elected: President, Mr. J. W. Keenan; Vice-President, Mr. J. W. Keenan; Secretary, Mr. J. W. Keenan; Treasurer, Mr. J. W. Keenan.

The delegates then proceeded to the main session, and the following resolutions were adopted: That the retail liquor dealers and distillers of North Carolina should be organized into a national association; that the association should have the right to petition the legislature; that the association should have the right to sue for damages.

The delegates then adjourned until the next meeting. The meeting was a very successful one, and the delegates were well received. They declared that the government should own the railroads, telegraphs, and other public utilities. He said that the people should have a say in the management of these enterprises.

The delegates then adjourned until the next meeting. The meeting was a very successful one, and the delegates were well received. They declared that the government should own the railroads, telegraphs, and other public utilities. He said that the people should have a say in the management of these enterprises.

The delegates then adjourned until the next meeting. The meeting was a very successful one, and the delegates were well received. They declared that the government should own the railroads, telegraphs, and other public utilities. He said that the people should have a say in the management of these enterprises.

The delegates then adjourned until the next meeting. The meeting was a very successful one, and the delegates were well received. They declared that the government should own the railroads, telegraphs, and other public utilities. He said that the people should have a say in the management of these enterprises.

The delegates then adjourned until the next meeting. The meeting was a very successful one, and the delegates were well received. They declared that the government should own the railroads, telegraphs, and other public utilities. He said that the people should have a say in the management of these enterprises.

The delegates then adjourned until the next meeting. The meeting was a very successful one, and the delegates were well received. They declared that the government should own the railroads, telegraphs, and other public utilities. He said that the people should have a say in the management of these enterprises.

THE BLIND CHAPLAIN AND HIS SON.

The Statesville Landmark says: Recently a wayward son of Rev. Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the Senate, committed suicide in Chicago. He was a graduate of one of the Keeley Institutes but had gone back to his bad habits. Before committing the deed he wrote to his father that he was sick and penitent, and asked for leave to come home. His father replied that there was to be no infirmity. He thereupon took his life. The circumstances have been variously commented upon. The blind chaplain's salary is $1,000 a year, and his family is in the hands of the State. It is argued again that the chaplain's salary is too low, and that his son is entitled to a share of the estate.

The Statesville Landmark says: Recently a wayward son of Rev. Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the Senate, committed suicide in Chicago. He was a graduate of one of the Keeley Institutes but had gone back to his bad habits. Before committing the deed he wrote to his father that he was sick and penitent, and asked for leave to come home. His father replied that there was to be no infirmity. He thereupon took his life. The circumstances have been variously commented upon. The blind chaplain's salary is $1,000 a year, and his family is in the hands of the State. It is argued again that the chaplain's salary is too low, and that his son is entitled to a share of the estate.

The Statesville Landmark says: Recently a wayward son of Rev. Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the Senate, committed suicide in Chicago. He was a graduate of one of the Keeley Institutes but had gone back to his bad habits. Before committing the deed he wrote to his father that he was sick and penitent, and asked for leave to come home. His father replied that there was to be no infirmity. He thereupon took his life. The circumstances have been variously commented upon. The blind chaplain's salary is $1,000 a year, and his family is in the hands of the State. It is argued again that the chaplain's salary is too low, and that his son is entitled to a share of the estate.

The Statesville Landmark says: Recently a wayward son of Rev. Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the Senate, committed suicide in Chicago. He was a graduate of one of the Keeley Institutes but had gone back to his bad habits. Before committing the deed he wrote to his father that he was sick and penitent, and asked for leave to come home. His father replied that there was to be no infirmity. He thereupon took his life. The circumstances have been variously commented upon. The blind chaplain's salary is $1,000 a year, and his family is in the hands of the State. It is argued again that the chaplain's salary is too low, and that his son is entitled to a share of the estate.

The Statesville Landmark says: Recently a wayward son of Rev. Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the Senate, committed suicide in Chicago. He was a graduate of one of the Keeley Institutes but had gone back to his bad habits. Before committing the deed he wrote to his father that he was sick and penitent, and asked for leave to come home. His father replied that there was to be no infirmity. He thereupon took his life. The circumstances have been variously commented upon. The blind chaplain's salary is $1,000 a year, and his family is in the hands of the State. It is argued again that the chaplain's salary is too low, and that his son is entitled to a share of the estate.

The Statesville Landmark says: Recently a wayward son of Rev. Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the Senate, committed suicide in Chicago. He was a graduate of one of the Keeley Institutes but had gone back to his bad habits. Before committing the deed he wrote to his father that he was sick and penitent, and asked for leave to come home. His father replied that there was to be no infirmity. He thereupon took his life. The circumstances have been variously commented upon. The blind chaplain's salary is $1,000 a year, and his family is in the hands of the State. It is argued again that the chaplain's salary is too low, and that his son is entitled to a share of the estate.

The Statesville Landmark says: Recently a wayward son of Rev. Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the Senate, committed suicide in Chicago. He was a graduate of one of the Keeley Institutes but had gone back to his bad habits. Before committing the deed he wrote to his father that he was sick and penitent, and asked for leave to come home. His father replied that there was to be no infirmity. He thereupon took his life. The circumstances have been variously commented upon. The blind chaplain's salary is $1,000 a year, and his family is in the hands of the State. It is argued again that the chaplain's salary is too low, and that his son is entitled to a share of the estate.

The Statesville Landmark says: Recently a wayward son of Rev. Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the Senate, committed suicide in Chicago. He was a graduate of one of the Keeley Institutes but had gone back to his bad habits. Before committing the deed he wrote to his father that he was sick and penitent, and asked for leave to come home. His father replied that there was to be no infirmity. He thereupon took his life. The circumstances have been variously commented upon. The blind chaplain's salary is $1,000 a year, and his family is in the hands of the State. It is argued again that the chaplain's salary is too low, and that his son is entitled to a share of the estate.

The Statesville Landmark says: Recently a wayward son of Rev. Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the Senate, committed suicide in Chicago. He was a graduate of one of the Keeley Institutes but had gone back to his bad habits. Before committing the deed he wrote to his father that he was sick and penitent, and asked for leave to come home. His father replied that there was to be no infirmity. He thereupon took his life. The circumstances have been variously commented upon. The blind chaplain's salary is $1,000 a year, and his family is in the hands of the State. It is argued again that the chaplain's salary is too low, and that his son is entitled to a share of the estate.

The Statesville Landmark says: Recently a wayward son of Rev. Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the Senate, committed suicide in Chicago. He was a graduate of one of the Keeley Institutes but had gone back to his bad habits. Before committing the deed he wrote to his father that he was sick and penitent, and asked for leave to come home. His father replied that there was to be no infirmity. He thereupon took his life. The circumstances have been variously commented upon. The blind chaplain's salary is $1,000 a year, and his family is in the hands of the State. It is argued again that the chaplain's salary is too low, and that his son is entitled to a share of the estate.

Henderson College,

HENDERSON, N. C.

The Fall Session of Henderson College will begin Monday, September 4, 1893.

The Academic Department, including English, French, German, Latin and Mathematics will represent only what is best, while the music and art will be under skilled teachers. For further particulars address, Mrs. B. B. PHILLIPS, Principal, Henderson, N. C.

A Beautiful Stylish Shoe for Ladies.

Defectionable Adjustable Shoe

Is made to expand with every motion of the foot; it retains its stylish shape when other shoes give way and break. It is the best shoe made.

PRICES, $2, $2.50, $3, $3.50.

Consolidated Shoe Co., Mfrs., Lynn, Mass.

FOR SALE BY PERRY & PATTERSON; YOUNGVILLE, N. C.