THE MAN WHO NEVER SWEARS.

I've often wondered how he feels When troubles come his way,

For instance, when a gust of wind Takes off the tile be wears,

I wonder what he thinks about-The man that never swears.

Or when to make a business trip He hastens through the rain And gains the station just in time To miss the morning train,

How does he feel as in the west The express disappears? I wonder if he thinks bad words-

The man that never swears. The world is full of trying scenes, No matter where we go.

The truly good are tempted sore, As you perhaps may know,

My sympathy he shares, For I imagine how he feels-The man that never swears. -T. C. Harbaugh in Cincinnati Tribune.
