WHAT IS IT THAT HAS DONE FOR IT?

The original and only genuine Compound Oxygen Treatment, that of Drs. Starkey & Palen, is a scientific adjustment of the elements of Oxygen and Nitrogen magnetized; and the compound is so condensed and made portable that it is sent all over the world. It has been in use for over twenty years, thousands of patients have been treated, and over one thousand physicians have used it and recommended it—a very significant fact.

Jones held an execution against a farmer and when he called for a settlement, the agriculturist took him out into a wild pasture, and pointed out a wild steer as the particular piece of property that should be levied upon. Jones chased the steer around for awhile, and then sat down, and taking out his book, began to write.

"What are you doing there?" asked the granger.

"Charging mileage," replied the constable, without looking up.

"Do I have it all to pay?" gasped the rancher.

"You bet."

"Then take this tame heifer here. I can't stand any such game as that."

DELEON, TEXAS, July 28, 1891. Messrs. Lippman Bros., Savannah, Ga. Gents—I've used nearly four bottles of P. P. P. I was afflicted from the crown of my head to the sole of my feet. Your P. P. P. has cured difficulty of breathing and smothering, palpitation of the heart, and relieved me of all pain; now I can breathe through it readily.

I had not slept on either side for two years, in fact, dreaded to see night come, now I sleep soundly in any position all night. I am 59 years old, but expect soon to be able to take hold of the plow handles; I feel proud to be lucky enough to get P. P. P., and I heartily recommend it to my friends and the public generally.

Yours respectfully,
A. M. RAMSEY,

CAPT. SWIFT GALLOWAY,

ORATOR, LAWYER, STATESMAN ADDRESSES A FINE, CULTURED AUDIENCE IN THE OPERA HOUSE ON THE MERITS OF THE KEELEY CURE.

Dossey Battle, Esq., Follows with Illustrations of the Grand Work Accomplished in the State by the two Institutes—A Remarkable Record.

The Opera House was comfortably filled on Thursday night July 27th, to hear Capt. Galloway, whilom State Solicitor, and Dossey Battle, Esq., lecture on the Keeley Cure, that has brought salvation to 150,000 men and happiness to as many heirs and homes.

Capt. C. M. Cooke introduced Capt. Galloway in most commendatory terms, vouching for him as a man of high honor and a perfect gentleman.

Capt. Galloway, after fitly acknowledging the compliments paid him in the graceful introductory speech of Capt. Cooke, stated that his mission here was a free-will offering on the altar of one of the greatest moral agencies which, in the merciful providence of God, had ever been evolved through the ages for the amelioration of our fallen race; and he was proud to bear testimony in his own person that he came at the invitation of his friend Mr. Dossey Battle, manager of The Keeley Institute at Rocky Mount, and without fee or reward, in the hope that he might utter some word that would aid in speeding the cause which he appeared here to advocate, and that, speaking from personal experience, he could bear testimony to the efficacy of the Keeley treatment and declare that it fulfilled to the letter its every promise and established its every claim.

He spoke of the onward march of science, the continually increasing wisdom and expansion of the mental vision of man, and said he "the light of civilization is steadily and consistently brightening to its perfect day; but yet amid all the increase in his comforts thus produced and his ever growing prosperity, man still finds on his pathway the same old enemy that has confronted him from the very dawn of his history—Alcohol, King Alcohol."

He here drew a pathetic picture of the evil effects of alcohol upon the victim of its abuse and upon his family and upon society. He said that to cure or arrest this mighty evil, expedient after expedient had been devised and agency after agency had been invoked and put in motion, instancing the temperance organizations, the eloquent and touching appeals of gifted temperance orators, and the enactment of prohibitory legislation. While not denying any of those means, because he admitted that they emanated from the purest and holiest motives and aspirations of noble and philanthropic spirits, yet, he exclaimed, "what is the reason of the failure along all these lines and in all these fields of effort? Here it is: There was a failure to discover or at least to establish the true actual nature of the monster curse which they had been so bravely fighting—this curse of drunkenness. It is true that as long as fifty years ago, said he, it was faintly suggested by a few able physicians that drunkenness—the drink crave—was a disease; but it was reserved for the latter quarter of this wonderful century, so rich in useful inventions and discoveries, and for the active investigating mind of a now living eminent American physician, Dr. Leslie E. Keeley, to accept this as a rational theory and then to establish it as a scientific fact. A great many physicians (he continued) deny to-day that the craving for alcoholic stimulants, begotten by long addiction to their use, is a disease; and yet every one of them calls a confirmed periodic inebriate a dipsomaniac, thus giving their argument completely away in one word; for mania is a mental disease, and 'dipsomania' is drink mania, the uncontrollable thirst or craving for strong drink. Having satisfied his mind of the truth of his theory, that restless genius, impelled by the yearning of his soul to confer a priceless boon upon suffering humanity, set himself to find a cure for the dread disease. Unbaffled by obstacles and taking fresh courage from each repeated trial and test, he at last after patient and assiduous toil developed this wonderful and glorious discovery which bears his now illustrious name.

Capt. Galloway proceeded then to describe the early stage in which will power and abstinence would probably cure the disease; then the stage or period in which they might possibly cure; and then that in which it was practically impossible to permanently eradicate the disease without medical treatment at a Keeley Institute. He said that in the second stage it was his opinion, formed upon intelligent estimates by persons of good judgment on the subject, that one man only in a thousand might be cured without the treatment; but who ought to run this risk, said he, when by the treatment nine hundred and seventy out of a thousand cases are permanently rescued from the drink habit?

He described the methods pursued at the Keeley Institutes, and spoke of the splendid work being done by Mr. Osborne at Greensboro and Mr. Battle at Rocky Mount for the disenthralment and restoration of the unhappy victims of this unfortunate habit. He spoke of their ability and high character and perfect adaptation for their chosen work. He gave a pleasing description of the spacious grounds and commodious buildings of the Keeley sanitarium at Rocky Mount, where he was treated, and its retired location away "from the maddening crowd" and the stir and commotion of the busy world, but suggestive of peace and repose, and he extolled the quality and quantity of its accommodations. He spoke of the fraternal feeling and kindly spirit ever manifested by the patients toward each other. He said that good-for-nothing and naturally depraved men are rarely if ever seen at those sanitariums, and that the personnel would compare favorably with that of any assembled body—nearly every one that goes there for treatment is a person of honorable feeling and conduct, and most of them are men of intelligence and refinement.

He said that all eminently useful inventions and discoveries that have run counter to preconceived notions of the leading minds of the age have had bitter and fierce opposition to contend with at first, and, until by signal successes, they had cleared from the track the main opposing forces. That so it was with Jenner's great discovery of vaccination in the 18th century; so with Pasteur's wonderful cure for hydrophobia discovered in this generation, and he cited other distinguished instances. He declared that many of the most eminent men, in the medical profession in America and Europe to-day, were earnest friends and active advocates of the Keeley treatment, and that numbers of the most learned and able physicians had themselves taken the treatment for alcoholism and the morphine habit and become cured—and, said he, the day is fast approaching when its every antagonist will confess conviction of his error and faith in this marvelous discovery.

He declared that the use of alcohol in various useful arts and industries made its existence a necessity of civilization, and so, whatever may be the virtues of moral suasion or temperance organizations, or force-laws in so far as their effect on those who have never contracted the liquor habit is concerned, yet for the reclamation of the unfortunate ones who have contracted the disease of drunkenness, or the drink crave, it will not do to place your reliance for a cure of the evil in force-laws or moral suasion, or the drunkard's will-power; there is but one safe refuge, namely, that which Dr. Keeley has evolved and established. He pointed as proof to one hundred and forty odd thousand living monuments in human flesh and blood—and he said watch the happy faces and elastic step of the column of this grand army of the disenthralled, and how can you longer stand a cavalier or a doubter? He also pointed to the testimonials which this great government had given in establishing twenty-seven Keeley sanitariums in soldiers' and sailors' homes for veterans.

The number of imitations, so-called cures, counterfeits—also attested the worth and perfection of the Keeley cure. Men did not counterfeit a worthless article, they trade on the confidence men have in the well-established Keeley cure.

He closed with a glowing tribute to the ladies and an appeal to all to aid in saving the precious lives that were daily being offered as victims to the insatiate monster, alcohol.

The lecture was interspersed with apt and enjoyable anecdotes.

Capt. Galloway is a man of handsome and striking personality, a fluent, graceful speaker and was heard with rapt attention by the large and intelligent audience.

Capt. Chas. M. Cooke then introduced Mr. Dossey Battle, manager of the Rocky Mount Keeley Institute, who spoke for forty minutes in a clear, pointed way, illustrating the grand work done by the two Institutes in this State. He paid a glowing tribute to the philanthropy and big-heartedness of Capt. W. H. Osborn, President of the Board of Directors, and the individuals of the Board, of the Keeley Institute company. They are, he said, all men of large souls, with hearts brim full of the milk of human kindness.

In showing the new manhood and nobler and better aspirations awakened in a man by having the incubus of the drink disease thrown off, that had hovered over him, shadowing him like a huge vampire, with sombre wing, whose claws were in his flesh and beak fixed in his soul, Mr. Battle stated that he had kept track of forty-five cured men, who had once sustained church relations, and of those thirty-nine had renewed those relations and were now working for God.

He was upheld in his work by the thought that he was accomplishing some good to offset the bad example of previous years. The work had obstructions, the chief of which were the drinkers who had not yet reached the staggering and gutter stage, but who were tending that way. All drunkards travel that same road, no man starts a drunkard. He paid his respects to the stupidity of the man who was not ashamed to get drunk but who yet hesitated to be treated.

Capt. C. M. Cooke himself a man of the most exalted character had vouched the character of Capt. Galloway to the audience as a high-toned gentleman, with all the word implies, and Capt. Galloway had boldly proclaimed the utter folly of any abashment to go for relief to a Keeley Institute. It is the only human agency yet found for restoring manhood and saving a drunkard from hell here and hereafter.

Capt. Galloway and Mr. Battle left town after the lecture to fulfill an appointment the next night. They go on an extensive lecturing tour in the east, after which they will visit leading points in the west.

Our people were highly pleased with the speeches and trust these gentlemen will visit us again. Both are well known in this county.

Where is Your Boy?

Durham Recorder.

"We do not leave home at night when it is possible to remain there, but when we have occasion to be up street at late hours we have never failed to observe some boys from eight to sixteen years of age going to and fro in crowds, and using language that would shock the modesty of any decent man. Some parents say it is impossible to keep their boys indoors at night. We think it is getting to be a serious matter when parents can't govern boys from eight to sixteen years old. We have had some of them to tell us their boys would slip off without their knowledge. One offense of that kind would be all a boy, who has the right kind of parents, would wish to commit. Leather straps, cow-hides or crabbles could soon cure a boy thus inclined if properly applied.

It has been said that children, when young step on our toes but when older step on our hearts. A great deal of the latter stepping could be avoided if the subject were taken in hand in time. When a young tree is planted, however crooked it may be, it can be straightened by proper care, but let it grow for a few years and then try to straighten it and you will fail. The boy resembles the tree in this particular. Most boys need frequent chastising to keep them in the path of the upright.

Let every parent, who has boys, try to instill into them a high sense of honor. This can be done, but it requires both time and patience to accomplish the work. The world is getting too busy to find time for boy culture. There are parents, we mean fathers, who seldom ever see their children awake. They go from their business late at night, and leave for the same early in the morning. The children grow to manhood without any special training by the fathers. Mothers cannot do all the work.

All-business men could do just as much business as they now do and spend a third of their time with their families if they would unite upon a plan. The profits of business men are consumed by the expense connected with night work. Save your boys while you can and in after life you will save many heart aches.

Thanks to the Legislature.

Chatham Record.

Quite a number of persons in this county have withdrawn their subscriptions to the business fund of the State Alliance, or at least as much of it as they could get, for no one has received back the full amount paid by him. A few days ago seven postoffice money orders were presented at the postoffice here for payment, all of them having been sent by Maj. W. A. Graham, trustee of the business fund, to persons who had applied for a return of their money. For this return of their money these persons are indebted to the last legislature, which amended the charter of the Alliance so as to allow them this right, and for which simple act of justice the Third party leaders are abusing the legislature so severely.

Oh, What a Cough.

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cents to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a million bottles were sold the past year. It relieves cough and whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it.

A BIT OF SUNSHINE.

Sing, sing, you sweet bird, my yellow Canary. You friend of my childhood hours. However the rooks of the household may vary There's a bright note from you, my yellow one (part).

Your song soon follows to showers. Supporting the telephone call is most trying. Or the organ grinder's low cry. Or unwholesome laughing and prying Till we all swear we would rather be dying. Still you trill and trip to my bliss!

In the heat of summer when robins are doing Your warble rolls clear in a tune. When children are laughing and laughing and prying And I am a tropical pearl half dissolving. Your cheery rattle is a boon!

You like my caressing, my glance and my prying. You beg and you perk, don't you, Dick? Your intelligent ways are simply amazing. The whole day long you are never caught napping.

For you peck and you sing "yoo-hoo yoo-hoo" But at first you mistook the perch of your perch. To dream through a "sleep of the just." You took your head in to avoid risk of losing. And each fairy feather stands guard while you're snoozing.

Dick, you look like a star of gold dust!—Hose H. Lottrop in Ladies' Home Journal.

Catching a Wildcat in One's Hands.

The wild jungle cats of southern India, are tall, long legged, bold and dangerous animals. One of them was prevented from doing serious injury to General Hamilton by the skill he had acquired in catching cricket balls.

The cat came to the cantonment prowling after fowls. The dogs were set on its track, and for some time there was an exciting chase among the hedge which divided the officers' quarters.

Then there came a long check, the dogs having lost the scent. Hamilton at last espied the cat squatting in a hedge and called the dogs. When they came, he knelt down and began clapping his hands and cheering them on. Suddenly the cat sprang at his face, but he caught it as one would a cricket ball, gave its ribs a strong squeeze and threw it to the dogs.

The cat had made its teeth meet in his arm, and for weeks he carried it in a sling.—Youth's Companion.

The Pygmies of Spain.

As might have been expected the dwarf race of Morocco and the Atlas has been traced to Europe, and fairly pure types are found in Spain, especially in the province of Gerona. These people are only 3 feet 7 inches to 8 feet 9 inches high and are otherwise characterized by a yellow skin, broad, square faces, Mongolian eyes and red hair of a rusty tinge. Specimens of them are occasionally to be seen in the mountains of Salamanca, and there is said to be a number in the Col de Tennes and the valley of Ribes, several hours by rail from Toulouse. It is not improbable that the Mongolian eye, which is observed in a small percentage of Welsh and English people, is derived by inheritance from the Iberian pygmies or a common ancestor.—Cassell's Magazine.

Found in Nearly Every Village.

There is generally somebody—a lady as a rule—in each district, on whom its finest malapropos are fastened, sometimes quite unfairly. It is she who is reported to have made that speech about the glories of her father's house, up to the door of which there rana "revenue of popular trees," who who asked her daughter to play that little "manly" she had learned at the "cemetery," and she again who pronounced Mr. Brown as "proud as Lather," while the turf hunting Mr. Smith was such a "toby" he deserved to be "lattooed" at his club. Dear Mrs. Malapropos! what should we do without her!—London Globe.

Just What Education Is.

In a composition upon "Education" a boy once wrote, "Education is going to school, which is being marked every day and examined on paper and then promoted, and if you are a girl you graduate and have flowers; but if you are a boy you don't have flowers; you only go to college." A somewhat unique, deplorable, but comprehensive definition.—Journal of Education.

Detected.

"Say, Bob," said the zealous new custom house inspector, "I've caught a feller here-in-a-lio. Shall I report him?"

"What's the lie?" asked the other.

A man, after gazing at a photograph of the Three Graces, exclaimed: "What fools women are! Those girls have not got money enough to buy themselves clothes, yet they spend the little they have in having their photograph taken."

The proper administration of proper food has much to do with the restoration of sick persons to health, and it is equally true that illness may often be avoided by the avoidance of food or drink which is irritating to the digestive organs.
