THE PRESS ON VANCE.

WHAT THE REPORTERS SAY OF HIS SPEECH.

All Speak Well of It and Kindly of Its Author—The Speech Drew and Held and Excited Much Meritment.

The Washington correspondents write pleasantly of Senator Vance's speech delivered recently in the Senate. The New York Herald prints a very excellent picture of him as he stands, one hand uplifted, addressing the Senate. The extracts below are all from the Washington correspondents of the papers named:

New York Herald: Vance is an entertaining talker, and his peculiar Southern way of stating things moved his audience to frequent smiles and occasional laughter. He is somewhat corpulent of figure, and his light suit of clothes made him appear bigger than usual. His hair and heavy mustache are almost as white as snow, and his hands tremble so that he cannot hold manuscript while reading. To remedy this he had books stacked breast high in front of him to serve as a reading table. He was closely listened to by his fellow Democrats, but the Republican side was almost deserted.

Louisville Courier-Journal: Senator Vance made a witty and sarcastic speech in the Senate to-day against the repeal of the Sherman act. He made some keen thrusts at the administration Senators, which were much enjoyed by the audience.

New York Press: This was a dull day in Congress, its only relief being in the speech delivered by that national humorist, Mr. Vance, of North Carolina, in the Senate on behalf of the cause of silver. Mr. Vance criticized the administration freely, declaring that the President's interference by patronage was unprecedented, and saying that if it had been known last year that Mr. Cleveland would favor such a measure as the unconditional repeal of the silver purchasing clause of the Sherman act, the Democratic presidential ticket would not have received a single electoral vote south of the Potomac river. Mr. Vance's speech abounded in other sensational statements and was filled with his characteristic humor. He showed in his bearing and his voice the effects of his severe illness, but he acquitted himself so well that he was generally congratulated at the close of his speech.

No sympathy is felt for a man who is a fool twice.

Now Try This.
It will cost you nothing and will surely do you good, if you have a cough, cold or any trouble with throat, chest or lungs. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, cough and whooping cough, is guaranteed to give relief, or money refunded. Sufferers from La Grippe found it just the thing and under its use had a speedy and perfect recovery. Try a sample bottle at our expense and learn for yourself just how good a thing it is. It is sold by all druggists and at J. S. Dupress's, 150 S. 2nd St., St. Louis, Mo. Large size 50c. and $1.00.

Oh, What a Cough.
Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that most terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cents to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a million bottles were sold the past year. It relieves cough and whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it.

FEED SALE AND LIVERY STABLES.
The attention of the public is called to the fact that the undersigned are prepared to give the patrons full satisfaction. Remember that you can be accommodated at any hour, day or night.

only a feeble surrender of party principle and an indefensible violation of repeated party pledges. His speech to-day was mainly a criticism of the repeal movement within the Democratic ranks as a breach of faith with the voters who put the Democratic party in power at the last election and an abandonment of all the professions of that campaign under the pressure of alien and undemocratic influences.

But Mr. Vance's humor was perhaps more highly relished by his listeners than his serious argument. His fertile wit easily found an inexhaustible field in the contrasts offered between the pre-election promises of his own party and its post-election performances, and neither the President and his advisers nor the administration leaders in the Senate were spared in his many clever turns of irony and sarcasm. Mr. Ransom, Mr. Vance's senior colleague from North Carolina, has been recently suspected of a tendency to desert from the administration ranks, but nothing in the junior Senator's speech pointed directly at this rumored infidelity, although Mr. Vance went somewhat out of his way to pillory General Gordon, of Georgia, as a "horrible example" of the tergiversations of "conversion" to the administration's policy.

Philadelphia Times: The speech of the deservedly popular orator from North Carolina was entertaining as well as instructive. His denunciations of the attack upon silver was bitter and intense, but he is a natural humorist and enlivened his discourse with many witticisms and taking anecdotes.

Although his intellectual processes are as clear and vigorous as when he was the most popular orator in the Senate, he is failing physically. His step is feeble and his hand trembled visibly while he was holding his manuscript. Upon several occasions his voice almost entirely failed him, and in the midst of one sentence he was obliged to pause until a page brought him a glass of water. Senator White, of Louisiana, who sat near him, left his seat and hurriedly entered the cloak room to procure a glass of water, and handed it to a bright little page, who carried it to the orator.

Although the galleries were not well filled at first, before the conclusion of his address every seat was occupied. Upon the floor of the Senate upon both sides the Senators were present and listening intently. Gathered around him were Senators who have long been eminent in the walks of life. For many years Senator Vance was known as the wit and wag of the Senate, and that reputation was well sustained to-day by the numerous stories and illustrations with which his speech was embellished.

Washington Post: Mr. Vance delivered his speech on yesterday from printed slips brought close to his vision by a half dozen large volumes piled upon his desk. His manner was as usual very humorous, and the witticisms which glittered all over the production were provocative of frequent peals of laughter on the floor and in the galleries. Not one-half of the Republican Senators were in their seats, and these for the most part seemed to give more attention to their correspondence than to the speech. On the Democratic side of the chamber, however, almost every chair was occupied—half a dozen of them by Republicans—and all seemed to enjoy the entertainment to the utmost. For the first hour of the speech Mr. Voorhees was not in his place, and when he did come into the chamber he sat on the Republican side.

Mr. Vance resumed his seat at 2 p. m., having occupied an hour and forty minutes. He was soon surrounded by Senators offering their congratulations.

STOP TALKING PANIC.

The Country Has Been Pretty Nearly Talked to Death During the Past Three or Four Months.

Somebody suddenly observed that gold was going off to Europe. It had been doing this for three years, but nobody noticed it until the drain began to tell on the Government's gold reserve. Then somebody spoke of it with an ominous shake of the head, and immediately went up a great hue and cry about the danger just ahead. The people were scared out of their wits. They began to take their money out of the banks and hide it away somewhere, and banks had to suspend. They began to skip and scrap and save and deny themselves the ordinary indulgences of life, merchants found trade dull and themselves unable to pay their bills. Every dollar that could be obtained was fastened upon with a death grip, instead of being sent about its business of paying debts. Banks loaded up their vaults with reserves of 30, 40, 50 or 60 per cent, and refused to cash their depositors checks or loan a dime on the best of security. We became a nation of nervous wrecks as to money matters—a nation of crazy fools, somebody has put it—and each went about yelling "Panic!" at the top of his voice to alarm his neighbors all the more.

It is surely about time to stop such nonsense. Here is an official statement that there is in the possession of the people of the country, outside of the Treasury, over sixty million dollars more than on August 1, and nearly seventy millions more than they had a year ago, when they felt pretty flush. And yet this crazy scare, induced by talk and kept alive by senseless gabbles has so effectually banished it from its proper place in business that the whole country has been running on one wheel for a month or more.

The way to restore confidence is to restore confidence, and the best plan is the old Jerusalem style of each man looking out for that part of the wall over against his own door. Pay your bills. Use your money as you would ordinarily. Put your cash in the banks. Don't talk panic, or act panic, and in a little while there will be no panic.—Courier-Journal.

Marriage Maxims.

- Never taunt with a past mistake.
- Never allow a request to be repeated.
- Never be angry at the same time.
- Never meet without a loving welcome.
- Let self-denial be the daily aim and practice of each.
- Never talk at one another, either alone or in company.
- Never let the sun go down upon any anger or grievance.
- Neglect the whole world beside rather than one another.
- Let each one strive to yield of tenness to the wishes of the other.
- Never make a remark at the expense of the other—it is meaningless.
- Never part for a day without loving words to think of during absence.
- Never find fault unless it is perfectly certain that a fault has been committed, and always speak lovingly.
- Never let any fault you have committed go by until you have frankly confessed it and asked forgiveness.
- The very nearest approach to domestic happiness on earth is in the cultivation on both sides of absolute unselfishness.

Encouragement.

"I always embrace an opportunity," said Mr. Mullin, complacently, to his ladylove.

Mullins was a successful business man, but rather backward in love-making.

"Do you regard me as an opportunity?" asked the girl, shyly.

He did after that.

Ethics of Money-making.

Biblical Recorder.

There is now a good deal of excitement in financial circles. Promising business men are making assignments; banks are suspending, and some are predicting worse things yet to come.

One secret of it all is, we think that the mania for gold is so general and has so permeated the trading centers of our population, that many have resorted to questionable means to acquire wealth. Honesty, more than gold or silver, is the basis of all financial transactions. Where the rules of honesty and fair dealing are disregarded, and men hasten by doubtful means to accumulate fortunes in a week, that their plodding but honest grandfathers accumulated only after a life time of honest toil, may expect a reaction and a turning of the wheels of justice, so that they will see plainly the hand of an honest God, who will rebuke the sin of dishonesty and the sin of covetousness, as he always has done.

We do not fear the financial future of our great country. Let us not be frightened by the outcry of some who go to the wall, considering their methods, ought to have gone there long ago. Let us deal honestly with our fellow-men, and let none make haste to be rich, especially by questionable means.

We can but express regret that some who have dealt fairly and honestly, are suffering with the guilty. These would do well to study Solomon's maxims as to money and debt making.
