THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Mr. Cleveland's message is detailed statement of the affairs of the Government, and with the exception of his recommendation of tariff revision is not very satisfactory to the people of the South. The Southern people desire some change in the financial system of the Government whereby the agricultural sections will be provided with sufficient currency to transact their business, and had hoped that the President would urge the repeal of the 10 per cent. tax on State banks, as being the safest and most practical relief. While we regret the President's failure to make this recommendation, we believe Congress will devise some satisfactory financial measure before the end of the session.

THE FINANCIAL TIDE HAS TURNED.

As the Bridgeport (Ala.,) News says, nearly everything imitates the example of the tides of the ocean. Especially is this the case in finance, though it is often hard to tell whether the tide is going out, or coming in. In business, the world goes from one extreme to the other. We have had a good long time of depression and shrinkage of values, and we may now well expect the flood tide again. It has already set in, though it may take some time yet to reach the far out nooks and corners. It has already reached New York. and it is fast reaching the other that city now hold nearly $71,000,-000 surplus reserve-the largest on record-which they are unsuccessfully trying to lend, at almost any rate of interest that anybody may offer. There is probably half as much more idle money in the hands of private banks and bank-

A month or two ago these banks could not get money with which to meet drafts from neighboring cities, and were working upon a system of highly artificial credits designed to take the place of money to the extent of scores of millions. Now their vaults are so choked with money that they cannot lend at any price. The stinted borrow. er has paid back the money to the capitalists, whose scare is over, and now he must find a place for it. The small sums that were scared into old stockings and other secret places for safe keeping, have again come out for interests, now the scare is over. Something must be done with it. It must work as well as must people work. It can't be idle. It must be invested again. The wheels that have been stopped by its absence must not only be started, but must make additional revolutions to catch up for the time lost, and to supply the world with the things needed. In other countries there are wars and threatened troubles, and America is, and always has been, the safest place to invest i' It must come back and be used with renewed vigor to catch up for the idle time lost by its absence from fright. It is coming and coming fast. In no section of the country is the field more inviting, the investment safer, and the returns surer. The South has stood the test and convinced the world it is really the most stable and largest dividend payer. It is coming, and will continue to come, and immediately ahead is the era of ten or twenty years of the greatest prosperity the country has ever seen-especially so in the South. cost of production is the same. It is apparent, it is a necessity, it But when ready for market the is a sequence, though some people difference in price is often very never see a result until they are run over by it.

THE EDUCATED FARMER.

The TIMES agrees with the Home and Farm that it has been a very prevalent belief with the farming calling of life. This is a serious mistake. The man who farms, tills the soil and lives from the products of his labor, is greatly to be benefitted by an education, and it is important that he should have it for the following rea-the government; he has a voice in public affairs. Without an education sufficient to enable him to exercise that right intelligently and discretionally, he is liable to bring an injury upon himself and his country. While on the other hand if he were educated up to that point that would enable him to understand the science of government, and what it takes for its economical administration and what bearing national issues have upon the welfare of the country, he could free himself from the burdens which he would otherwise have to bear, and secure equal rights under the government. As the farmers compose the largest per cent. of the population of our country, and an educated suffrage is necessary for the proper administration of public affairs it is highly necessary that the farmers should be educat-In the second place an education

By the last re- cated mind to his occupation and port, the Clearing-House banks of the other classes of people who have looked upon farming as followed by the less intelligent and uneducated people, will look to the rural inhabitants with admiration and wonder. It is essential for man's highest development and happiness that he be educated. It is an unquestionable fact that education adds greatly to one's enjoyment of life. The educated mind is capable of more enjoyment, the capacity is greater, because the mind is more developed. It is more susceptible of receiving impressions of beauty, because the faculties of soul by which a sense of pleasure is discerned are broadened and enlarged. > NONE BUT THE BEST. In making any farm product profitable, two things are to be considered: These are the cost of production and the selling price. In estimating the cost of production it is well to bear in mind that the value of time and labor is the same, whether devoted to the growing of a good quality of product or a poor one; and with stock, the value of the feed and of the time required to care for the animals is nearly or quite the same, whether the animal is a good or poor one.
