THE THIRD PARTY WEAKENING.

The Third party primaries were held throughout the county last week to appoint delegates to the county convention yesterday, 4th. From what we have been able to learn the party is weakening all through the county.
In Weldon township we learn that only three persons attended the primary, in Halifax 2, in Scotland Neck 12; and in Littleton township, which is reputed to be the strongest Third party township in the county, we learn that not more than twenty persons attended the primary. These things prove conclusively that the party in this county is growing weaker; and this is the report that comes from other counties.

Now, the Democrat has no disposition to say anything ill of our friends who have gone to the Third party. We simply make the observation that the poor attendance at the primaries shows that many who have been counted as belonging to the party have no faith in its future, and are therefore unwilling to give their time and attention to it.

It all demonstrates the fact that many persons who have thought the matter over have wisely reached the conclusion that the demands of the Democratic party, being so nearly what those of the new party are, it is better to remain in the party that has proved itself a friend to the people than to join a new party that has not enough strength to show what it is a friend to. And if the Democratic party, with its long and honored record before the people of this country, can not relieve the people, how can an untried and experimental organization do it?

These are the wise conclusions which we believe many have reached, who two years ago were enthusiastic Third party advocates.

And it is the height of folly for the citizens of this beautiful and highly blessed Southland to allow petty differences to alienate them from each other and thus clog the onward march of that progress and development which not only awaits us in the near future, but which is already making us among the most independent people of the land.

The great mass of Democratic voters have taken on back bone enough to say a thing does not suit them when it does not. And so this manly difference among ourselves, and yet in the spirit of harmony, concerning the President's policy and the interests of the people is to be considered as a sure sign of reformation in our own ranks, and the Third party people are seeing it.—Scotland Neck Democrat.

A Boy's Composition on Breathing.

"Breath is made of air. We breathe with our lungs, our lights, our liver and our kidneys. If it wasn't for our breath we would die when we slept. Our breath keeps the life agoing through the nose when we are asleep. Boys that stay in a room all day should not breathe. They should wait until they get out of doors. Boys in a room make bad, unwholesome air. They make carbonic oxide. Carbonic oxide is poison than mad dogs. A heap of soldiers in a black hole in India, and a carbonic oxide got in that there hole and killed nearly every one before morning. Girls kill the breath with corsets that squeezes the diagram. Girls can't holler or run like boys, because their diagram is squeezed too much. If I was a girl I'd rather be a boy, so I can holler and run and have a great big diagram."—Yankee Blade.

Any kind of habitual borrower is objectionable; but a newspaper borrower is past description. Suppose when a man starts his children to school he should undertake to borrow books for them all the time? Well, it would not be long before his neighbors would get tired of lending him books. So it is with newspapers. Borrowing newspapers is a very small thing—look at it as you may, and is especially small on the part of the borrower.—Scotland Neck Democrat.

Cooke for Congress.

YOUNGVILLE, N. C., July 11th.
It is a foregone conclusion that for our next Representative in Congress, Chas. M. Cooke is the man, but Mr. Editor, having no axe to grind, or being asked to make any statement whatever in regard to Mr. Cooke, yet having known him so long, and knowing so well the situation of everything in this, the Fourth Congressional District, I feel constrained to offer just a few suggestions to the Democrats of the district. Mr. Cooke, gentlemen, is one of those men who is in possession of the full confidence of his countrymen. No man can bring aught against him as a Christian, as a citizen, as a friend, or as a neighbor. He is one of those men, while not perfect, yet he is fully up to the standard in every point of view.

Now, in our county the Populists have considerable strength, which we all know emanates from what they term mismanagement of national affairs, and to this end they clamor for good men for office, and indeed we all agree with one accord that the day is at hand when we must put forward for office only men whose characters are unimpaired. Why, Mr. Editor, I am in a position to know the sentiments of the people, and it is the wish of every Democrat in our county that Chas. M. Cooke should be the representative of the 4th District in the next Congress. Above mentioned, we have a considerable number of Populists, and they knowing Capt. Cooke to be such a man as they can bring nothing against, in order to rally their forces against him at the polls would much prefer to see some one else named for Congress, in order that they may be able to array their full strength against the Democratic nominee.

In conclusion, Mr. Editor, let me say that while our delegation will all appear in convention for Franklin's honored son. Still I feel like saying in advance of the occasion to the voters of other counties in the district that I believe that if they name Hon. Chas. M. Cooke of Franklin, for Congress, in the ides of November we will all rejoice together, because North Carolina's much loved son has carried the district with even a larger majority than even the most sanguine could expect.

Respectfully,
J. W. DUKE.

Who Emptied the Treasury?—Figures that Tell the Story.

Baltimore Sun.
A correspondent sends a cutting from a contemporary, in which the "cash in the Treasury" at the beginning of the Harrison administration is compared with the "cash in the Treasury at the end of that administration"—no mention being made of liabilities—with the result, according to the editor, that there was "nearly $10,000,000 more cash in the Treasury when President Harrison left office than when he entered." The fact is that when Mr. Cleveland went out of office in March 1889, he left a cash balance, over and above liabilities, according to the form of statement afterward adopted by Secretary Foster, of $185,000,000 while Mr. Harrison left no balance at all, but left the Treasury bankrupt. Secretary Foster in the spring of 1893 wanted to issue $50,000,000 of bonds to fortify the Treasury, but Mr. Harrison would not agree to it, since it would make too plain the extravagance of his party. In Mr. Cleveland's first term the total expenditures were $1,077,629,097; in Mr. Harrison's, $1,412,315,001. In Mr. Harrison's last three years the revenue was $1,133,368,830; the appropriations $1,496,295,741. These last figures tell the story.

● The Modern Curriculum.
Lipper: I understand you have given up the idea of sending your boy to college.
Chipper: Yes.
Lipper: Don't you think you're doing him an injustice?
Chipper: Not at all. You know, of course, that they have started both rowing and football organizations here, and these, together with the base-ball club and school for boxing, give us all the advantages of a college education at home.

SLANDER'S WORK.

Dr. Pritchard in Charlotte Observer.
A great many persons are guilty of bearing false witness against their neighbor who do not know it. The principle wrapped up in this commandment is this: "Thou shalt in no respect injure thy neighbor's reputation." All false testimony, whether in a court of justice or elsewhere is forbidden by this law.
The law of man says that slander consists in originating or circulating a report that is false to the injury of the character of another, but the law of God goes further, and prohibits the originating or circulation of a report to the injury of another, whether true or false, unless silence on our part might damage the interests of individuals or society. If it be objected that the words of the commandment forbid only the circulation of false reports, I reply that if you circulate any report to the detriment of your neighbor's character, you are in great danger of bearing false witness against him, and this for three reasons:

First, there is about us all a moral obliquity which makes us ready to believe evil of our neighbor rather than good. Mean and ignoble and even infamous as this is, it is nevertheless true of poor human nature. It is this unfortunate trait in man, doubtless, which originated the adage, "A lie will travel from Maine to Georgia while Truth is putting on its boots." And if a lie is once started, who is to stop it? Suppose, for instance, it should be published in some Charlotte paper that I, Thomas H. Pritchard, a Baptist minister, was drunk at such a time and place? The next paper might bear a statement, signed by a hundred of the best men and women of Charlotte, that I was not drunk at the time and place named. Do you suppose that the denial would correct all the harm done to my reputation? Not a bit of it. Some people would believe it who might see the correction; but many who would see or hear of the damaging report would never hear of the denial, and ten or twenty years after, that infamous lie would pop up somewhere, it might be after I was in my grave, to defame my good name. It is a dangerous thing to circulate stories which reflect on personal character.

In the second place, every one knows that a great proportion of rumors, prejudicial to the character of individuals, are false, either wholly or in part, and that we are too ready to accept any such report as true, without ascertaining whether it be true or not. The story of the man who was reported, upon good authority, to have thrown up three black crows, when he had only vomited up something black as a crow is a fine illustration of how a story grows as it travels.

And in the third place, a substantially true statement is in great danger of making a false impression. If it does make a false impression, then, in repeating it, we are guilty of slandering our neighbor. This is a very serious matter and I beg every one who reads this article to weigh well these words of Dr. E. M. Goulburn, a distinguished minister of England:

"The bare fact alleged may be true enough, but if none of the extenuating circumstances be alleged, side by side with the fact, we violate truth in the general effect of our words upon the hearer, though the particular details of them may be correct. If we exhibit a man's sins only and conceal the proportion which those virtues bear to his virtues, we culminate him as effectually as if we ascribe to him a vice he does not possess. A man may have a defective feature or features, and yet the general proportion of his person may be so good and the general cast of his countenance so pleasing that the ill effects of the features which are awry are modified, or entirely away. It is an untrue representation of that man merely to say he has too prominent an eye, or too coarse and thick a lip; that may be the case, but it is not fair, because it is not a complete description of his personal appearance. And similarly, if my neighbor has been overtaken in a fault, perhaps, by surprise, and if I want for matter to entertain my company without, blaze abroad this fault of his, but am wholly silent as to his good character up to that time, as to his prayers and struggles against that particular sin which he may have made, my witness against him becomes as certainly false in its general impression, and therefore, as mischievously injurious as if I had stated of him what was not matter of fact.

"In a word, if a fair account of a man's faults and sins is to be given in conversation, the common rule of justice must be attended to, that evidence shall be heard for defendant, which, if it were done, a true verdict might be arrived at by the company. But such evidence never is advanced and no one appears in the interest of the defendant, so the verdict never can escape being false, and the evidence by which it is arrived at is to all intents and purposes false witness."

This view of the subject makes it a serious matter with us all, for there is not one of us who has not violated the Ninth Commandment, and thus shown ourselves the legitimate children of Satan, who is called in the Scriptures the accuser of the brethren."

APPEARANCES DECEIVE THEM.

A. R. Presbyterian.
There are not a few who are living in luxury and style, apparently rolling in wealth, and yet really as poor as the very poorest. Living in great style yet sinking deeper under debts which they cannot pay. Nothing but a settlement used to show that they are dead poor.

This describes the condition of many in temporal things, and the condition of far more in spiritual things. Apparently they are making a wonderful success of life, laying up treasures in abundance, and yet when the great day of settlement shall come, it will be seen that they have succeeded only in laying up debts; debts to the law and debts to the gospel; debts of ingratitude, debts of open rebellion, debts of neglect. The claims of justice not met, and the gifts of God's goodness squandered without any return. Not a little of the pleasures and enjoyments of the present are obtained by making debts for the future. Is this prosperity? He who is succeeding in worldly business is one who has something that an honest settlement would not sweep away. So in a broader sense he who is making a success of life is the one who is laying up possessions that will not be swept away when the day of final settlement comes, not the one who is only piling up debts for the future.

Electric Bitters is especially adapted to cure all of kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c. for large bottles.
