DEMOCRATIC ELOQUENCE.

Some Selections From the Address of W. R. Henry Before the State Convention.

Below we take pleasure in laying before our readers selections from the eloquent and thrilling address of Mr. Walter R. Henry, delivered before the State Democratic Convention. Among other things Mr. Henry said:
Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention.
I am thrilled by the spectacle presented by this magnificent body of North Carolina patriots. I thank you for the honor conferred by your call for me to address you. I shall detain you but a short time. On the eve of the great battle in which we are about to engage, no man who will not subordinate every personal grievance, hardship and disappointed ambition to the welfare and success of the Democratic party is worthy the name of patriot.

The Democratic party deserves the sympathy and support of all true men instead of reproach and denunciation.
Shakespeare, the reservoir of wisdom, uttered a sentiment that we may well heed in this hour: "It is better to bear the ills we have, than to fly to those we know not of."

Let us stand under the sacred emblem of our splendid brotherhood. I call the Democratic banner sacred, because upon it was written in the morning of our Republic, by the hand of the immortal Jefferson, that grand code of political principles, that has ever since challenged the admiration of the world, guaranteeing to us and to our children liberty and happiness.

"Equal and exact justice to all men, of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political; peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none; the support of the State governments in all their rights, as the most competent administrators of our domestic concerns, and the surest bulwark against anti-Republican tendencies; the preservation of the general government in its whole constitutional vigor, as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad; a jealous care of the right of election by the people; a mild and safe corrective of abuses which are lopped by the sword of revolution where peaceable remedies are unprovided; absolute acquiescence in the decisions of the majority; a well disciplined militia; the supremacy of the civil over the military authority; economy in the public expense, that labor may be lightly burdened; the honest payment of our national debt and the sacred preservation of the public faith; the encouragement of agriculture and of commerce as its hand-maid; the dissemination of education and the arraignment of all abuses at the bar of public reason; freedom of religion, freedom of the press and freedom of the person, under the protection of the HABEAS CORPUS, and trial by juries impartially selected."

These principles have been repeated in the various platforms of the Democratic party, and, as Mr. Jefferson declared "they form the bright constellation which has gone before us and that has guided our steps through an age of revolution and reformation."

The wisdom of our sages and the blood of our heroes have been devoted to their attainment; they should be the creed of our political faith, the text of civic instruction, the touchstone by which to try the services of those we trust, and should we wander from them in moments of error or alarm let us hasten to retrace our steps, and regain the road which alone leads to peace, liberty and safety.

I call the Democratic banner sacred, because it is the standard of the only organization in this country that has sufficient strength and patriotism to contend with the enemies of the prosperity and freedom of the people and the life of the Republic. I call that banner sacred, because as long as it floats in triumph above the homes of America, their inmates will gaze upon it as a symbol in the political heavens promising and guaranteeing a cessation of centralization, the gradual reduction and ultimate annihilation of the robber tariff, the destruction of trusts and monopolies, and such correction of the financial system of this government as that King Gold may not longer starve and render utterly wretched the suffering millions of this country, but that by his side, made his equal in every respect by proper laws, shall be enthroned the people's friend, King Silver.

To recover stolen beauty the legions of Greece besieged the citadel of Troy for a period of ten years. I call our banner sacred, because through an era three times as long it has inspired us in the contest not for stolen beauty, but for our plundered freedom; not for Helen of Troy, but for ten thousand thousand beautiful women of our fair domain; the re-establishment of our national honor and credit; and the disenfranchisement of the groaning masses of this Union, until we have reached such position that all these blessings must soon follow.

I call the Democratic banner sacred, because the inspiration of its presence saved us from the horrors of the Force bill which would have driven us to the ballot box like galleys slaves to their labor, and because, not until waved in victory above the Democratic host, were the shackles of political slavery stricken from our limbs by the repeal of the infamous Federal election law.

I call the Democratic banner sacred, because it is the only hope of the South. As stood the invincible legions of Caesar under the eagles of Rome, as stood the heroes of England under the great banner of St. George, as stood the men of the South impetuous, impregnable and immortal for four years under the Stars and Bars, so today the major part of the chivalry, beauty, wealth, character and intelligence of the South is marshalled under the great banner of Democracy.

There are reasons for this with which we are all familiar. God grant that that glorious company may never be broken, and that that banner of light may never be trampled in the mire by its foes.

Men think differently, and are at liberty to think as they please, provided they obey the admonitions of reason and the dictates of conscience; but as for me, I would no sooner think of deserting the Democratic party under existing conditions and going over to its enemies, than I would have thought of deserting the Army of Northern Virginia in front of Cemetery Heights, or on the blood sodden plain of Sharpsburg.

The Republican party in its whole history is as a starless night. The Populist party is as a rapidly vanishing comet, insubstantial, gaseous and deceptive, which good men have been persuaded to believe a pillar of fire to lead them to a promised land of reform, while the Democratic party is as the orb of day which though it has some spots on its face, illumines the earth with its splendor, imparting life and light and happiness to all.

The Democratic party composed of human beings and not of gods nor arch angels, may have made mistakes, may now and then have staggered and faltered under the burden of thirty years of Republican rule, a bankrupt Treasury, a paralyzed financial system, and a policy of national taxation that robs the masses to create, and to still further enrich trusts, monopolies, and millionaires, but even as Aeneas bore on his broad shoulders his father Anchises through the flames of Ilium, so will the Genius of Democracy, hurling the coterie of Senatorial traitors into oblivion, bear the people, the suffering millions of this country, through the fires of Anarchy and the darkness of Republicanism, to prosperity.

In no generation has greater duties devolved upon patriots than now devolve upon us. Let us show ourselves worthy descendants of the men whose blood stained the snows of Valley Forge, and of that immortal band who in the name of liberty and principle poured out their hearts' tide upon the crimson fields of Virginia.

Let us be just. Let us unhesitatingly applaud the patriotism and courage of Grover Cleveland in resorting to the Napoleonic method of crushing Anarchy in Chicago, thus teaching a great principle of constitutional law to the American people, to-wit: "That when the police and militia fail to preserve order the United States Regulars can be called in. That in order to succeed in an organized attempt to arrest all trade, the lawless element must have on their side the President of the United States. And that as long as we have such a President as Grover Cleveland, such attempt as the recent one of the American Railway Union must necessarily fail."

Let us endorse him for standing against recreant Senators, for the people's welfare, and a proper tariff; for the repeal of the Federal election law, and for his just and impartial recognition of the South.

Just after the Treaty of Amiens, a distinguished English orator regarding that Treaty as disgraceful to Great Britain said, "If King William could know its terms he would turn in his coffin."

I commend these words to every old soldier of the South, and to the son of every old soldier, who contemplates deserting the Democratic Banner. Time can present no more pitiable sight, none more calculated to rouse the spirits of our great dead, than that presented, when veterans of the Confederacy, who once loved, and offered their lives for principle, fraternize with their former foes, and meet to concert means and measures to destroy the only bulwark that protects North Carolina, and the South, from bankruptcy and dishonor.

A Frenchman once saw a poor man spend his last cent for a lottery ticket. He asked him how he could commit such folly. In order to have something to hope for, he said. Becoming impatient, and animated by the same delusive sentiment good men have gone to the Third party, who, surrounded by hardship, have listened too quickly to the rosy promises of Populist leaders. But when they discover that that party is but a wing of the Republican party, or is rapidly being made so, and they are expected to vote for life-long Republicans, thus endorsing the record and principles of the Republican party, they will return to the Democratic ranks. There is nothing else for them to do.

They say the Democratic party has not given the party the promised tariff. If we have to wait until the next session of Congress for a proper tariff law, it will be outrageous and there will be no attempt to conceal that fact. But honest men will place responsibility where it belongs. Certainly Republicans cannot complain, for the policy of their party, is unalterably opposed to reduction, and it has been for thirty years playing the tariff highwayman, burglar, and thief of America. To such an extent indeed, as forced the Supreme Court of the United States to declare, that "to lay with one hand the power of the Government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals, to aid private enterprise, and to build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law, and is called taxation." Republicans are wedded to the McKinley inquiry.

Populists cannot complain, because the non-enactment of a tariff law at this session, will be chargeable to the action of a coterie of Democratic Senators, who have betrayed the Democratic party, by joining the Northern branch of the Republican party, while the Populists are endeavoring to join its Southern branch.

A Populist leader, a recent convert, declared that one of his principle reasons for leaving the Democratic party was, "that a Northern Democrat was no better than a Northern Republican."

Certainly he could not foresee that his first convention would nominate Republicans and thus develop the fact, that a Southern Populist is no better than a Southern Republican.

Men of sense will not think of deserting the Democratic party, if a few bad men temporarily prevent tariff reform. And especially will they not leave, when they see the Wilson bill, reducing the tariff sixty-five millions directly, and hundreds of millions indirectly, passed by a Democratic House, supported by thirty-seven Democratic Senators, pressed with patriotism and courage by a Democratic President, demanded by five hundred and eighty-five million Democratic voters, and only prevented by the treachery of six Democratic Senators combined with all the Republicans. Has any party any guaranty against such conjuncture?

Within a few steps of victory, with the monster robber of the country almost throttled, men would be worse than weak to cease the struggle, and to deliver contest over to an infantile party, destined to an early grave.

There are dissatisfied men in North Carolina. Many are mad with the Administration, because matters have not gone as they wished. Some even talk of leaving the Democratic party. Is that common sense? Is that patriotism?

Go out into a garden redolent with the perfume of flowers of every hue, luxuriant with foliage, and luscious with fruit, golden, rosy and purple under the kisses of the summer sun. "I know there is some bad fruit in the garden, some weeds that ought to have been thrown over the fence. Some crab-apple trees that ought to have been cut down, some wild grapes that ought to have been uprooted, but are you going to destroy the whole garden because of a little gnarled fruit? There are worm-eaten leaves in Fountainbleau, and insects that sting in the fairy groves of the Champs Elysees."

If part of the crew prove mutinous, throw them overboard, but don't sink the ship.

A Revised Version.

It happened in Sunday-school. The subject under discussion was Solomon and his wisdom. A little girl was asked to tell the story of Solomon and the women who disputed the possession of a child. She timidly rose up and answered: "Solomon was a very wise man. One day two women went to him quarrelling about a baby. One woman said, 'This is my child,' and the other woman said, 'No, this is my child.' But Solomon spoke up and said: 'No, no, ladies; do not quarrel. Give me my sword and I will make twins of him, so each of you can have one!' — From the 'Editor's Drawer,' in HARPER'S MAGAZINE for April.

Wise Sayings.

A worldly hypocrite cannot approach where the man high in church goes and is consequently not so dangerous, though he may be as despicable.

The Georgia Farmers Alliance has formally disbanded.

Hogs are starving in South Dakota for lack of grain to feed them.

California's fruit crop beats all previous records, and canneries cannot begin to handle it.

A thirteen-year old colored girl in Norfolk, when arrested, Monday, confessed to having robbed twenty residences.

Possibilities of Surgery.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The extent to which the human body can be mutilated without causing death is beyond what most people think. Of course the removal of the largest limb is a familiar fact, but the successive removal of all the limbs would in most cases result in nothing worse than inconvenience. In the same way the internal organs may be extirpated. This is facilitated by their quality. One kidney may be removed, and the other will make up for the loss by doing double work. One eye may be taken out and the sight remain practically unimpaired. Large portions of the brain may be removed with no injury to life or intellect. A portion of the intestines has been cut out and the ends sewed together, and their normal action and functions have not been interfered with.

Knights of the Maccabees.

The State Commander writes us from Lincoln, Neb., as follows: "After trying other medicines for what seemed to be a very obstinate cough in our two children we tried Dr. King's New Discovery and at the end of two days the cough entirely left them. We will not be without it hereafter, as our experience proves that it cures where all other remedies fail." — Signed E. W. Stevens, State Comd'r. — Why not give this great medicine a trial, as it is guaranteed and trial bottles are free at Ayoocke & Co.'s Drug Store. Regular size 50c and $1.00.

There is no more dangerous an individual in any community than the church hypocrite.

It May Do as Much For You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c. For large bottle. At Ayoocke & Co.'s Drug Store.
