KEEPING UP THE BLUFF.

New York World.
When a woman goes out shopping with a high and mighty air, and a purse between her fingers, that would make an Astor stare, ten to one that she can carry off her parcels in her muff. Don't imagine she's been buying; she is keeping up the bluff.

When you see a third rate actor standing just outside of Tel's on a petty six per week, than the chime of many bells, don't imagine he's been dining. Where's he had to yield the "stuff." That's part of the profession, to be keeping up a bluff.

When the girl behind the counter tells you with a manner meek, that it's hard to keep on living on a salary of six per week, don't be fretted and wrinkle so rudely. Or laugh at her. She may wear a sea-skin under, but she's keeping up the bluff.

When the girl that you are courting tells you that it is not right to be always wanting kisses and squeezing her so tight, don't get scared about your manners. Rest assured they're right enough; she is not opposed to kisses. She's just keeping up the bluff.

When you're sitting with a party 'B' and the table is a ring, and your hand shows four good aces and a solitary king, don't neglect to bet your money. The "yon" he is running tough. For the chances are you'll win it just by keeping up the bluff.

Judge Not.

We have no right to judge others until we know all of the circumstances that influence their conduct. In many cases we might act like those we condemn under like circumstances.

A young man employed in a printing office in one of our large cities incurred the ridicule of the other compositors, on account of his poor clothes and unsocial behavior. On several occasions subscription papers were presented him for various objects, but he refused to give his money.

One day a compositor asked him to contribute for a picnic party, but was politely refused.

"You are the most niggardly man ever employed in this office," said the compositor, angrily.

"Stop," said the young man, choking with feeling. "You have insulted me."

The other compositors gathered around the excited man. The young man looked at them for a few minutes with a fanned look, and a strange fire in his large eyes.

"You little know," he said, "how unjustly you have been treating me and accusing me. For more than a year I have been starving myself to save money enough to send my poor blind sister to Paris to be treated by a physician who has cured many cases of blindness similar to hers. I have always done my duty in this office, and have minded my own business. I am sacrificing everything in life for another. Would either of you do as much? Could anyone do more?"

He had been judged without a knowledge of circumstances. Be slow to censure and condemn. We cannot read the hearts of others, and, in many cases, to know all is to forgive all.

"Judge not, that ye be not judged."—H. B.

An interesting insight into the ways of the ultra new woman was furnished by the testimony in a London court of Mrs. Beauclerk, a stock broker. Mrs. Beauclerk testified that she employed her husband in her office, but that she dismissed him from her employ last August because of certain derelictions of duty. Whenever she went out she used to lock the door of her private office. "Do you mean to say," asked the Solicitor-General, "that if you saw the man you had sworn to honor and obey writing in your private room you would be so hard-hearted as to say, 'Out you go'?" "I should, certainly," was the answer.—Ex.

Two Sides to the Medal.

Washington Post.
Everybody knows the woman who says society is such a bore. Few of us know her intimately, for, in point of fact, she does not go about much. I ran across her at a friend's house the other day and marked her languid air. The hostess was indiscreet enough to refer to it, and even the tea-cups shuddered with horror at the woman's reply.

"Yes," said she, "paying calls is so tiresome."
"Oh!" responded the hostess, "but think how much more tiresome it is to receive them!"
And the tea-cups stored one for the hostess.

AN ACCOMMODATING HOTEL.

The following example of American "humor" appears on the back of an elaborately ornamented card setting forth the merits of a "strictly first-class" hotel in California:

"For the information of the crowds who intend visiting this resort during the coming season we desire to say that the Lakeside Hotel is probably the most accommodating house on this mundane sphere. Cats, dogs, monkeys and parrots are allowed in the house without extra charge, and special cows are kept, so all pets may have fresh cream at all hours of the day.

"Guests have not to wipe their feet when they come in; they can figure their gain in flesh or the electoral vote on the walls, take cuttings from the rare plants outside, or some of the plants themselves, and get postage at the office free; can bring snakes, horned toads, lizards, and other such animals into the house, and the manager or clerk will skin and prepare them free of charge.

"If you don't pay your bill at the end of the week it makes no matter, as we are related to Rothschild. We furnish a piano, cork-screw, and sewing-machine to each guest. If your children dig holes in the plastering, or make flags out of the curtains, it's all right, as it doesn't cost anything for repairs.

"For ladies who want to wash and cook in the rooms, we reserve our best suits. Plenty of hot-water bags and medicines of all kinds, from pills to sarsaparilla, free to all. Our chamber-maids were selected in France for their beauty, and brought over in three ships. They are always willing to button the ladies' shoes, comb their hair, and mend their dresses for sweet charity's sake.

"Our waiters will serve meals at any hour in the day for a kind word and a smile. You can take all the glass and silver you want for your room, and the cook will fix you any kind of liniment or poultice, day or night.

"You can do, in fact, anything you want to; but not more than six guests are allowed to sleep on the billiard table at once.

"Anyone breaking the rules of the house can receive a free message treatment with a club by leaving notice at the office."

Where The Bad Eggs Go.

Considerably over 1,000,000 dozen decayed and pungent eggs reach New York City every year. What becomes of them? If you ask a man he will smile and say that he does not know, but that nothing is wasted. That is true. All the bad eggs are sold. Some go to the tanneries to help put an extra polish on leather. A larger number of them are sold to the great coffee roasting establishments. There the odoriferous contents are used to put an oily gloss on the roasted coffee bean. Thus eventually the egg that is cast out by the exchange jobber finds its way into the stomach of the consumer. Probably the unsuspecting consumer, judging by its looks, congratulates himself on getting a pound of coffee of extra strength and richness of aroma and flavor. Probably he has.—Ex.

Getting Shot of a Bore.

Richard Brinsley Sheridan, while visiting, feeling rather weary and wishing to rest, was asked by a fellow-guest, whom he did not admire, if he did not wish to accompany her for a walk. Glancing out of the window, Sheridan replied: "It is very cloudy. We shall be caught in the rain." The other waited awhile. Shortly the sun came through the clouds. "Shall we go now?" she asked; "it has cleared up." "Why, yes; so I see," said Sheridan; "it has cleared up enough for one, but not enough for two. You go."—Argonaut.

Japanese Proverbs.

The ignorant are never defeated in any argument.
A woman with a three-inch tongue can slay a giant.
Doubting minds will ever bring a swarm of demons.
Patience is the rope of advancement in all lines of life.

THE ROSE AND THE THORN.

She was no longer a rosebud. Indeed she was in full bloom and had been so through several seasons.

But she had money, and he loved her. How often men do that way! Oh, money, thou art a honey! So as time wore on and she grew no younger his heart throbbed more and more, until he stilled its throbbing by proposing to her.

He was so sure of her, at her time of life, that anything but a prompt acceptance never occurred to him.

What was his intense, nay painful surprise, then to hear her say she was very much obliged to him for his kindness, but really she must decline.

"Oh, why, why?" he pleaded in heartbroken tones.

"Because I do not love you," she answered.

"But you can learn to love me," he said coaxingly.

"I think not," she persisted.

"Oh, yes, you can," he exclaimed, grabbing at her lily white hand. "One is never too old to learn, you know."

How he ever escaped alive it is no part of the chronicler's business to explain.

This is no detective tale.

Driving a Bargain.

The mean man occasionally overreaches himself in a way that is delightful to those who have no use for stingy people. A journal tells a story of one of this class of persons, which is most amusing. The man went into a butcher's shop, and inquired the price of a soupbone.

"Oh I'll let you have that for nothing," replied the butcher, a more or less generous person.

The customer was slightly deaf, and missed the answer.

"Can't you take something off that?" he asked, never supposing that the butcher had offered to give him what he wanted.

"Oh, yes," replied the butcher, with a smile. "Call it twopence."

And the mean man paid the twopence for the gift, and departed, thinking how clever he was.

The Foundation Stone of Success.

The one great rule of business is that of honesty, absolute and unqualified honesty, writes Edward W. Bok in the May Ladies Home Journal. All the rules of business are worthless if they are not founded on that one and only foundation stone to true commercial success. Honesty is not alone the best policy in business; it is the one and only policy. Upon it, and upon it alone can a good reputation be built, and a man in business without a reputation for honesty might just as well stop. Any deviation from the rule of honesty in business may bring temporary gain, but it invariably means permanent loss. On the other hand a strict adherence to an honest policy may mean a temporary loss, but it is sure to result in a permanent gain.

COURTESY AT HOME.

No pleasanter sight is there than a family of young folks who are quick to perform little acts of attention toward their elders. The placing of the big armchair in a warm place for mamma, hunting for a footstool for aunt, running up papa's spectacles, and scores of little deeds, show unsuppressed and loving hearts. But if mamma never returns a smiling "Thank you, dear;" if papa's "Just what I was wanting, Susie," does not indicate that the little attention is appreciated, the children soon drop the habit. Little people are imitative creatures and quickly catch the spirit surrounding them. So, if when the mother's spoon of cotton rolls from her lap the father stoops to pick it up bright eyes will see the act and quick minds make a note of it. By example, a thousand times more quickly than by precept, can children be taught to speak kindly to each other, to acknowledge favors, to be gentle and unselfish, to be thoughtful and considerate of the comfort of the family. The boys, with inward pride of their father's courteous demeanor, will be chivalrous and helpful to their own young sisters; the girls, imitating their mother, will be gentle and patient, even when big brothers are noisy and heedless. In the home where true courtesy prevails, it seems to meet you on the very threshold. You feel the kindly welcome on entering. No angry voices are heard upstairs. No sullen children are sent from the room. No peremptory orders are given to cover the delinquencies of house-keeping or servants. A delightful atmosphere pervades the house—unmistakable, yet indescribable.

Hugging Societies.

Over in Missouri, it is said, they have introduced hugging societies to swell the church treasuries, and a Missouri paper gives the following scale of prices: Girls under 18, 15 cents for a hug of two minutes or 10 cents for a short squeeze; from 18 to 20, 50 cents; from 20 to 25, 75 cents; school marm, 40 cents; widows, according to looks, from 20 cents to $1; old maids, 3 cents a piece or two for a nickel and no limit of time. Editors pay in advertising, but are not allowed to participate until everybody else is through.—Ex.
