WHERE LOVE IS.

A maiden asked if I could tell Where love is, Ah, me, said I, that's hard to say, Where love is, Then on her way she went perplexing, The question gave her soul was vexing, Shine out, bright star, attend and guide her Where love is.

A youth then begged me just to say Where love is, Ah, no, said I, you'll find the way Where love is, Away he went his heart rejoicing, The song of birds his courage voicing, I know kind fate will lead him Where love is.

They met, this youth and maiden fair, There love is, And ask no more, nor doubt nor care, Where love is, And now with hands and hearts united Their vows to Heaven have truly plighted, May kindly power protect and keep them Where love is.

A SHORT LAY SERMON.

SUDDEN DEATH COMPARED TO A THIEF THAT COMES IN THE NIGHT.

The Dread Messenger Treads Softly Until He Is Close at Hand—We are Admonished to be Ready When the Summons Comes, in Whatever Form It May Appear.
New York Herald.
As a thief in the night—II Peter, iii., 10.
This is a vivid, almost a startling, illustration of the way in which the inevitable sometimes steals upon us. After what manner does the thief come at night? Is it not with exceeding stealth that he may cause no alarm, and with slipped feet and bated breath and cunning silence?

In like manner death treads softly until he is close at hand. In many cases it is not known that he is in the immediate vicinity until he lays his hand on some one's shoulder and whispers "Come!" Sometimes he clasps the heart with his icy fingers and it at once ceases to beat, just as the old clock ceases to tick when you lay hold of the pendulum. At other times a loved one lies on his couch for a few days, never dreaming that his work is done, but rather hoping that the morning will find him ready to take up his task. Then all at once there are anxious faces and tearful eyes, and before he can realize his situation his soul has broken away from the bonds of mortality and he begins his flight into the air.

How would you wish to die, if the matter were left to your personal decision? It is a subject on which every one has bestowed more or less thought though few of us, perhaps, have reached a definite conclusion. With another and a better world in constant view; with the full consciousness that on the further shore you will have an environment far superior to that afforded by the present life; with a profound faith that dear ones over there are waiting for you, what seems the most desirable means of exit from the present and entrance into the future?

The ideal death is undoubtedly that of old. If we had perfect bodies, unhampered by inherited weakness, we should not die in youth or in middle life, but should retain our faculties to the last and take our leave as the sun does when he sinks behind the hills. If the laws of nature were triumphant, if our ancestors had not left their diseases as well as property to us as heirs, we might be hale and strong until the machinery gave way. This is the kind of life and death indicated by the plan of God, but that plan has been sadly interfered with. Such a life, rich and healthy to the last, and such a death, simply falling asleep through weariness and waking up in Heaven, are rarely seen.

Many people bewail the sudden departure of loved ones and regard it as an addition to the bereavement but this is a mistake. We must think of ourselves less and of them more. If one is to take a journey and the preparation for it is painful, then the quicker the preparation is made the better for us all. When we must say goodbye to a handshaker is better than a prolonged farewell. If one is called away by a voice which cannot be disobeyed, why should we selfishly hold him in a lingering embrace when lingering means suffering for him?

To enable us to endure the death of some member of our household we need a stronger faith in two facts. After that death is a mere incident in the career of a soul, and though we may weep, we shall also rejoice at the good fortune which has come to the dear one.
First, we must be sure that the end has not come and never will come; that all that has occurred is a change of residence, nothing

GRAND JURY AFTER JUDGE NORWOOD.

News and Observer.
As stated in the Wilmington Messenger, Judge W. R. Norwood, a fusionist who was elected at the last election, was gloriously drunk when he turned up at Lumberton Monday to hold court. Yesterday several gentlemen who have friends in Robeson received letters, giving particulars of this "Honor's" jag and the subsequent action of the grand jury, which has presented him to the sheriff for drunkenness.

When the judge came in Monday he was tight; by the time court should have convened "tight" was not a proper word to express his condition, "drunk" was the only word that would do. So all day long the judge lay in his room at the hotel while the lawyers and solicitor were idle and the witnesses, who had assembled, drew their pay from the county.

All that night Judge Norwood was in the hands of his friends, and Tuesday morning he was sitting, unsteady it is true, but nevertheless there in the judicial chair. Court business grew mottonous, however, and large was the head of the judge. So after an hour's rigmarole, court adjourned for the day. That afternoon the Judge drank again and on Wednesday the court was again idle.

Thursday morning there was still no sign of the Judge, and the lazy atmosphere of the court room grew oppressive. So Thursday afternoon the grand jury concluded that it at least would do some work. The first business was to present Judge Norwood for drunkenness. And still the Judge is jagged and no court is held.

A Glimpse at the New Woman.
One of our citizens who has just returned from a trip to New York, contributes the following interesting observation:

"I saw a combination of the new woman and her various accompaniments at Central Park Sunday, the like of which it has never been my misfortune to behold. She came upon me on a wheel, and as she pedaled along the driveway I saw that she had on garments of the bloomer make. The air had gotten under them in some way, and swelled her out like a balloon, which threatened to burst at every fresh gust of wind.

"While I was still gazing at this spectacle of femininity, I noted the size of her feet, and the shape of her ankles. Now I don't usually notice such details, but I defy any man, no matter how modest he may be, to pass over that girl's feet and ankles without a second glance. My modesty forbids my giving a description of either, but I will say that her ankles may have been mistaken for bicycle spokes but for the color of her stockings.

"Then I cast my eye upwards. Horror of horrors! Here, indeed, was the climax. A pair of glasses were perched on a snub nose, which, like her cheeks, was tanned and freckled from the sun, and a mass of flaming red hair was made to look more fiery under a small white cap. Here was a new woman—a woman of the period. God help the period, and give me a woman, old in ways, old in dress, and, if necessary, old in years, but spare me this monstrosity, whom some charitable soul has dared call "woman."

English Women at the Forge.
All the Year Round.
There was a long shed, with eight or ten forges in it, a worker and a blower to each forge. Toil was being carried on with feverish energy under the eyes of the master, who promenade as up and down. There were as many women as men. The heat was great and the smell badish and suggestive of its extreme badness in mid-summer.

At one forge one woman, aged about 22, used the hammer with her hands, worked the oliver with her feet. I tried to do as she did. She settled a nail in two or three blows. It cost me seven. The force necessary to make the oliver do its duty is very great. The whole power of the body must be concentrated upon the leg muscles. At one forge a man and a wife were at work, both just over 20. I wondered what their home life must be after such a day's work. A more jaded couple one could hardly imagine.

The Discovery Saved His Life.
Mr. G. Gaillouette, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with a Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use, and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at Aycocke & Co's Drug Store.

THOUGHT IT WAS GABRIEL.

An Old Colored Woman Saw Miss Nolan In Her Parachute.
A good one is told by the Record of an old colored woman living out near the Greensboro water works who didn't know anything about the balloon ascension Saturday afternoon.

She went out in her yard, when she happened to glance up towards the sky and saw Miss Nolan coming along but she was still high up in the air and the old woman could not distinguish the parachute.

Placing her arms akimbo she surveyed the thing a moment and remarked, "If yonder don't cum a yumbrelly sailin' along in de air. Wunder whur in de name of God it cum from?"

She turned around as she spoke to one of her children, and then again took a look at it. This time she saw the daring aeronaut.

"Good God-a-mighty, Moria," she exclaimed, "if dar ain't a angel in it. It's Gabriel shore's you born and he's gwine to blow his trumpet, and when do, children, somethin' gwine to happen—somethin' dreadful. You all git ready 'an' when he sou'n's de horn we'll all pray, for judgment day am right har."

About this time one of the "children" took in the situation and said: "Shucks, mam, it's a cöman in a bl'un 'an' she am gwine to lite rite on you if you don't git outen de way. Taint no Gabriel and taint no horn dar."

The old woman realized the situation and was greatly relieved, but she says she will never grow any more. "Fore God," she said, "I t'ot it wxz de angel Gabriel and de end of de world had cum."

A Puzzler.
"I see a monkey up a tree. He sees me and gets behind the trunk of the tree. I start to go around him and he keeps going around as I do, keeping the trunk of the tree between him and me. I reach the place I started from, with the monkey still opposite on the tree. Have I also been around the monkey? A Boston woman is quoted as saying: "I tried it on my husband. I had him for the monkey, and I took a whisk broom and went around him, brushing his clothes. He kept turning around just as I did, and when I had been clear around I had only brushed one side of him and one leg of his pantaloons. Now, all the professors of Harvard University couldn't convince me that I had been around that man, and neither had the man been around the monkey in the tree."—Ex.
