A BLESSED FAITH.

New York Herald.
And the voice which I heard from heaven spake unto me again.—Revelations, x. 8.

Before the first voyage of Columbus this whole hemisphere was to the people of Spain a myth, a dream, a possible everything but a practical nothing. It was a very agreeable subject for discussion among scholars, and they perhaps found good reasons both for believing and for disbelieving in its existence. As a theory this western land occupied a more or less prominent position in all the universities of Europe, and a good deal of serious thought was devoted to it by the learned. But if one of the merchants of Madrid had been asked to invest his money in some commercial venture the profits of which depended upon the discovery of what is now known as the two Americas he would have laughed at the scheme as the financial operation of a madman.

When, however, Columbus returned from that voyage with the trophies he had gathered, and proved beyond the reach of a doubt that there was a great stretch of territory on this side of the Atlantic to balance an equal extent of land on the other side, scholarship was pushed into admiring silence and merchants were eager to invest whole fortunes in speculation.

It is impossible for a cautious man to make practical use of a statement which may not be true. This rule, which is so constantly illustrated in our everyday business life, is equally applicable to what concerns us spiritually. Do you have grave misgivings as to whether there is any heaven from which a voice can come to your soul, or believing in some remote region where the spirits of the departed dwell, do you doubt their ability either to communicate with you or to influence you? Then you are in the position of the Madrid merchant who could not invest money in a country whose existence he knew nothing about. Speaking with perfect frankness, we may declare that this life is all you have, practically, for you neither realize the future nor are you in any way affected by it.

On the other hand, suppose you are convinced—as firmly as Columbus was when he lifted his eyes from the acres of seaweed that floated by and saw the thin line of land on the horizon's edge—that heaven is literally within an arm's length; that Jacob's ladder is not a myth but a fact; that in every man's life there is just such a ladder, and that messengers are constantly ascending and descending, what results would naturally follow? You would be as willing to make use of these truths for your spiritual comfort, sustenance and encouragement as the Madrid merchant was to invest his money when the Spanish caravels came to anchor with their treasure in the hold.

What you need, therefore, to make you in every way larger and happier is a strong faith in God's actual nearness. So long as He is an inaccessible possibility, a Being who thunders from Sinai's hoary summit, a taskmaster who has given you a day's work to do and will damn you at eventide unless it is wholly done and done as ordered, so long will your soul be lonely and your love of holy things burn like a flickering taper; so long will your religion have in it a demoralizing element of fear, and so long will your prayers represent a perfunctory service, without heart, or peace of mind, or the ecstasy of a blessed communion.

But when God is to your soul what the sunshine is to the wheat field, or the dew drops are to the flowers; when you not only know that he is, but that he is your refuge and strength in time of trouble; that his love for you is beyond all other loves; that his sympathy and pity are deeper than those of your closest friends—then you know what the peace that passeth understanding means,

STRANGE, BUT TRUE.

Four Drummers Tell the Nature of Their Business.
Evening Mirror.

The following true story is related by one of the participants in the remarkable incident:
Not long since in a certain New England city, four commercial travellers met for the first time, at the table. With that genial bonhomie peculiar to the craft, they were soon engaged in conversation. In a few moments one of them said:

"Gentlemen, suppose we begin, being all strangers, with the gentleman opposite me, to introduce ourselves and our firm's business."
This was unanimously agreed to.

Said No. 1: "I am —, and I represent the house of X. Y. R., selling glass bottles."
Said No. 2: "Well, gentlemen, perhaps it is no chance that I come next, for I represent P. D. Q. I am —, and I sell the stuff that goes into the bottles. I sell wines and liquors."

There was a moment's silence as No. 4 said: "That, gentlemen, does seem a little strange, but perhaps there is a fatality about this. I am —, of the firm of W. U. S., dealers in undertakers' goods."
No. 4 now remained silent and suggested that it would be well not to pursue the subject further, and that it had been well never to have started it.

After much urging to complete the chain he said: "Gentlemen, it is indeed a fatality. I am —, of D. E. B., and I am taking orders for grave stones." Was there ever a temperance lecture compressed into so few lines as this?

Cigarette Smoking.

Dr. C. A. Clinton, of the San Francisco Board of Education, has made a special study of the effect of cigarette smoking among the public-school children of that city, and expresses himself in the following unmistakable language:
"A good deal has been said about the evils of cigarette smoking, but one-half the truth has never been told; I have watched this thing for a long time, and I can say calmly and deliberately that I believe cigarette smoking is as bad a habit as opium smoking. I am talking now of boys, remember. The effect upon grown men is, of course, not so marked."

"A cigarette fiend will lie and steal just as a morphine or opium fiend will lie and steal. Cigarette smoking blunts the whole moral nature. It has an appalling effect upon the system. It first stimulates and then stupefies the nerves. It sends boys into consumption. It gives them enlargement of the heart, and it sends them to the insane asylum. I am physician to several boys' schools, and I am often called in to prescribe for palpitation of the heart. In nine cases out of ten it is caused by the cigarette habit. Every physician knows the cigarette heart. I have seen the bright boys turned into dunces, and straight forward honest boys made into miserable cowards, by cigarette smoking. I am not exaggerating. I am speaking the truth, that every physician and nearly every teacher knows."

A Short-hand Joke.

Lawley (expert shorthand reporter)—I say, James, the boy from the newspaper office has called for the report of that lecture. Is it finished?
James (a novice)—All but a short sentence in the middle of it, and I can't for the life of me make out from my notes what it is.
Lawley—Oh, just put in "great applause" and let it go.
James acts on the suggestion, and the lecture is sent for publication with the doctored part reading:—"Friends, I will detain you but a few moments longer. (Great applause)."—Tit-Bits.

In Smoky Chicago.

"Uncle George," said the little boy from the country, "are those the building they call skyscrapers?"
"They are, Tommy," answered his city uncle.
Tommy took a comprehensive look over-head.
"The sky does need scraping here pretty bad, don't it? Uncle George?" he rejoined.—Pittsburg Bulletin.
