They travel eight miles an hour, gentlemen. I found it this on a small income, she must not mind having to do some of the and myself were making our way across one of the plains near Prescott to a claim some miles distant. Night came on before we re ched our destination, and we were compelled to build a fire on the trail and fix ourselves until daylight came. We had with us three sticks of giant powder, which, for safety's sake, we carefully laid on the trail about 100 yards from our fire.

"Toward 10 o'clock we began to be disturbed by a great number of those big Arizona crickets, which were following the trail across the plains. They came by thousands, solemnly walking in single file. "On the next day we kent along the trail and found it strewn with the legs and heads of dead crickets. The last corpse was found just eight miles from where we had camped. A Technique of Pen and Ink. . It is easy of course to understand how pen drawing should have come to be so largely employed and elaborated. It is a matter of reproduction for illustration. An etching will not print with type nor with a steel engraving. This led in the early part of the century to the imitation of steel engravings by wood engravers, who did the business most skillfully with immense labor. The drawings for them were mostly made in pencil. But photographic process rendered the intervention of the wood engraver needless if the artist made a pen drawing that would photograph and process well. A purely technical difficulty can be overcome by large numbers of crafts-men. Large numbers accordingly have learned to make pen drawings to supplant wood engravings. But it should be noted that to do this is itself a kind of reproductive process. Few elaborate pen drawings are made without a studious foundation in some other material. The pen line must frequently be traced or drawn over the pencil line, very much like the engraver's tool.

The point about the moderns and ancients, then, resolves itself into the imitation by the moderns in a new medium of the technique of an old. It is certain that the ancients could have performed this feat if they had chosen.—London Spectator.
