Patriot and Politician.

An evangelical contemporary makes the sweeping assertion that "a patriot uses his private influence for the public good; a politician uses the public influence for his private good."
There is no necessary distinction between a patriot and a politician. The most devoted patriot may be the most active politician. It has been recklessly asserted that "patriotism is the last resort of scoundrels." The character of a patriot is inconsistent with that of a scoundrel in public affairs. Love of country prohibits its possessor from advocating policies or performing official acts which, in his opinion, are inimical to the public interests. It is possible, however, for a man of vile private character to cherish an ardent affection for his country. Felons have died in defense of their country's flag. For the same reason that a bad man occasionally makes loud professions of religion, a scoundrel in office, or hoping to get in, will often set up the most conspicuous professions of patriotism.
It is impossible to be a statesman and not a politician. To be versed in the science of government and in the art of governing is to be a politician. To apply that knowledge to the advancement of state or country is to be a statesman. It is only the political knave who has no higher aspiration than to "use the public influence for his private good." But it is possible—and we hope it is also usual—for the politician to simultaneously advance the public's and his own "private good." A man in politics may be as conscientious, as faithful to his convictions, as earnest in his desire and efforts to do good as his fellow citizen in the pulpit or any other calling. And to achieve the largest measure of success such a politician will sometimes be constrained to make choice of evils because nothing better is attainable. When one of two evils is inevitable, the politician who is a statesman and a patriot will try to prevent the greater of the two from happening. Of course, he will be abused by fanatics, but he will have discounted all that before reaching the crucial point.—Washington Post.

Good To Know.

To keep flannels from shrinking, wash with good soap, rubbing as little as possible, and when clean squeeze out of this water and pour boiling water over them. Let stand till cool enough to wring. Repeat this till the water is clear; wring, stretch and hang out. This will soften flannels that have been shrunk and are hard and stiff.

If grease spots are found upon wall paper, they may be removed by laying blotting paper over them, and holding a hot iron against the blotting paper until the grease is absorbed.

To clean kid gloves with naphtha, pour the naphtha in a deep saucer, then put one glove on the hand and dip it in the fluid until it is wet all over alike; rub it quickly with a soft dry flannel before the fluid has a chance to dry out.

To clean brass bird cages, wash in tepid water and dissolve a tablespoonful of pearlina into the water. Rub gently, then wipe dry with a soft flannel, and to polish, rub with whiting and a chamois skin. You can preserve and keep your bird cages twice as long by following these simple directions.

Mildew may be taken out with a weak solution of chloride of lime, a teaspoonful of lime to a quart of water.

The Test of Love.

"Tom, you asked me to be your wife—to give you my heart, my life. Think well of what you say, and tell me if you will grant me one small favor."
"Then promise me that you will never smoke another cigar as long as you live."
"I promise, dear."
"And does it cost you a pang?"
"Not a pang. I'd rather smoke a pipe any day."—Collier's Weekly.

The Appetite of a Goat
Is envied by all poor dyspeptics whose stomach and liver are out of order. All such should know that Dr. King's New Life Pills, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, gives a splendid appetite, sound digestion and a regular bodily habit that insures perfect health and great energy. Only 25 cents at W. G. Thomas' drug store.

Sympathy.

The influence of sympathy in guiding children in the right way and in promoting their happiness is seldom appreciated until we notice the contrary effects of a want of sympathy. The child who has parents interested in his games and his studies, who exert themselves to make his life pleasant and useful and who by their sympathy encourage him in his studies and his efforts to improve, has every incentive to labor cheerfully in the effort to improve himself. Another child may be physically as well cared for and be given every advantage that schools afford, but if his parents are selfish and unsympathetic he leads a cheerless life at home and either becomes morose or seeks away from home the genial spirits who will minister to his natural desire for sympathy. Parents who really love their children sometimes exhibit toward them a fault-finding disposition or treat them with indifference. They do not realize the importance of demonstrations of love and sympathy or they have formed the bad habit of repressing exhibitions of kindly feeling. Young people are hungry for love, for sympathy, for admiration and, if they do not get these things at home, they may seek them elsewhere, sometimes in society that is not fitted to promote their welfare. Young girls suffer more perhaps from lack of sympathy than boys, for the reason that they are more closely held to home life. And they are exposed to special dangers when, after hungering for love and sympathy, they meet a stranger who treats them kindly. The ideal home is a little community made up of members who not only love each other, but take real interest in the hopes, aspirations and works of each; the place above all others where one is sure to meet with sympathy. Such a home is seldom neglected for the dance hall or the tavern. It is the pleasantest place in all the world to those who are members of the family, and there they gather as in a haven of rest after the day's work has been done. It may not be a very well-appointed home; the dinners may be coarse, the fare plain but it is a place where the heart may feed upon sympathy, where one may be happy. And such a home offers the best possible protection to the growing boy or girl from the evil influences that beset them. The best of homes cannot always hold them, for curiosity leads them astray, but they will return to it again and again if they know that there they will find cheerful love and sympathy. Not querulous complainings or cold indifference. The child who suffers from want of sympathy may not know what it is that makes home distasteful to him and leads him to seek companionship outside; he is perhaps well clothed and well fed, allowed a great deal of freedom and provided with spending money, but there is something lacking if he is not made to feel that in his own home he has the best and most sympathetic friends and counselors. It is the want of sympathy that sends him abroad to find it, and fortunate is the careless parent whose child excites the sympathy and care of a worthy person. He should not be exposed to the risk of falling in with evil companions, but should be made to feel and to know that in his own home circle he is assured not only of care and love, but of the wisest and broadest sympathy in all his trials and aspirations.

A Farmer's Hard Luck.

"I had sold a piece of land," said the old farmer, as a shade of sadness crossed his face, "and received $600 in cash. When I had the money in hand I said to the old woman: 'Mary, if you put this in bank the bank may bust.' 'But if we hide it in the ashes in the parlor stove there can't be no bustin' about it,' says I. 'That's so,' says Mary, and we hid it in the stove. 'Along in the fall I came up from the field one day and found that Mary had built a fire in the parlor stove. I didn't say nothin' for awhile, and then I kearily remarked: 'I see you've got a fire in that stove. You took them $600 out first, of course?' 'Sakes alive, but I didn't!' yells Mary, and up went her hands and she fainted dead away. 'I got the camphor bottle and worked over her and brought her up, and as she begun to cry and take on I bust out laffin'. When I had got over bein' tickled, I says: 'Don't worry about that money. Knowin' how absent-minded you be, I took it out of the stove a week ago.' 'Bless me, but did you!' gasped Mary. 'Yes, took it out of the stove and hid it in that old pewter teapot in the pantry,' I says. 'Oh! my soul!' screams Mary, and down she falls in another faint. 'What's the matter now?' says I, after I had brought her to again. 'Why, I sold that teapot to a tip peddler the other day for 7 cents and never looked inside of it!'"

There was a period of silence lasting four or five minutes, and then the old man sorrowfully said: "Banks bust—stoves bust—teapots bust, and if me and the old woman are found busted same day nobody need be surprised."

Tarred the Joke on Him.

A distinguished lawyer and politician of this city was traveling on the train near Winchester, when an Irish woman came into the car, with her big basket, bundle, etc., and set down near the aforesaid lawyer.

When the conductor came around to collect fare, the woman paid her money, and the conductor passed by the lawyer without collecting anything.

The good woman thereupon said to the lawyer: "An' faith an' why is it that the conductor takes the money of a poor Irish woman and don't ask ye, who same to be a rich man, for anything?"

The lawyer (who had a pass) replied: "My dear madam, I'm traveling on my beauty."

The woman looked at him for a moment and then quickly answered: "An' is that so? Thin ye must be very near ye journdy's end."

The lawyer, who is not noted for his beauty, but who is noted for his brains, enjoyed the joke too much to keep it, and so we give it to the public.—Ex.

A Life And Death Fight.

Mr. W. A. Hines of Manchester, Ia., writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble, which ended in consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed night and day. All my doctors said I must soon die. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and I was completely cured. I would not be without it even if it cost $5.00 a bottle. Hundreds have used it on my recommendation and all say it never fails to cure throat, chest and lung troubles." Regular size 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. G. Thomas' drug store.

University Notes.

Work is progressing on the new athletic field; it will replace the old field when it is completed.

The interior of Smith Hall (the Library) has been repainted. An addition of several hundred of the latest books was made to the library last week.

Dr. K. P. Battle delivered a very entertaining lecture on "The Bench and Bar of Raleigh 1854-64," on Thursday evening. His inimitable witticisms charmed his hearers.

The first game of foot-ball for the season was played here on Saturday afternoon, between the "Varsity and the A. and M. The resulting score was: U. N. C. 34, A. and M. 0.

Our foot-ball eleven is in fine shape; they practiced every afternoon last week and some good work was done. Coach Reynolds has the men trained well. Among other teams they will meet Princeton, and the Universities of Maryland, and Georgia, later in the season.

As you are aware, perhaps, Tulane University of New Orleans, during the summer months, conferred the degree of LL. D. on President Alderman. The honor is highly appreciated by the student body here.

On Saturday evening at their regular meeting candidates for the Freshman class, for admission into the Dialectic and Philanthropic Literary Societies, were initiated. There were quite a large number of applicants.

The system of water-works has not yet been put in, as was intended, on account of the rise in the steel market and the meagreness of the appropriation for the purpose. However we hope to have them at an early date.

A little negro boy was killed here one day last week. He was driving a wagon when the mules becoming frightened, he was thrown off. In falling his foot caught in a trace, and he was dragged down a long hill. When picked up he was dead; his head crushed into a pulp, his legs and thigh broken in several places, and his body horribly mangled.

Glorious News.

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows that thousands have profited by Electric Bitters—the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, piles, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by W. G. Thomas, druggist. Guaranteed.

When a man has a great deal on his mind he generally has very little on his stomach.

No Cure—No Pay
This is the way all druggists sell Grove's Tasteless Chilli Tonic for Chills and Malaria. It is simply Iron and Blood Purifier supplied the needed help and will soon restore the body to a healthy, vigorous condition. It exercises a stimulating influence over the organs of digestion and assimilation, strengthens the appetite, brightens the eye, and imparts the rosy bloom of health to the cheek. Price 50 cents and $1 a bottle.

Lies are apparently justified in some funeral orations.

During the winter of 1898 Mr. James Reed, one of the leading citizens and merchants of Clay county, Va., struck his leg against a cake of ice in such a manner as to bruise it severely. It became very much swollen and pained him so badly that he could not walk without the aid of crutches. He was treated by physicians, also used several kinds of liniment and two and a half gallons of whiskey in bathing it, but nothing gave any relief until he began using Chamberlain's Pain Balm. This brought almost immediate relief and in a week's time and he believes that had he not used this remedy his leg would have had to be amputated. Pain Balm is unequalled for sprains, bruises and rheumatism. For sale by W. G. Thomas, druggist.

Matrimony may be a lottery, but melons are more of one.

Joseph Stockford, Hodgdon, Me., healed a sore running for seventeen years in a cured his piles of long standing, by using De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. It cures all skin diseases. W. G. Thomas, druggist.

Rising young men are more appreciated in street cars than anywhere else.

He Fooled The Surgeons.
All doctors told Renick Hamilton, of West Jefferson, N. C., after suffering 18 months from neuralgia, that he would die unless a costly operation was performed; but he cured himself with the boxes of Eucalypti Arnica Salve, the surest pile cure on earth, and the best salve in the world. 25 cents a box. Sold by W. G. Thomas, druggist.

There are some individuals who will give currency to rumors, but never put a cent in the collection basket.

Land in England is 800 times as valuable now as it was 200 years ago.
