A Story of the Mind Cure Docand the second s

"Not at all, Dr. Smith. I have not a bad cold. These symptoms are merely the externalizing on the physical plane of improper thought." This was in reply to Dr. Smith's comniseration on the lamentable appearance of the patient. Mrs. Hollis was a member of the local ethical society. who had lately absorbed some leading features of the mind cure doctrine, but who had not advanced so far as to discard all medical advice. In minor allments she adhered to the school, but her courage failed when disorders were more ominous; hence her presence in the consulting room.

"The resemblance was so extraordinary as to mislead me," replied the doctor. "I have never seen a more perfect simulation. I now perceive the power of thought to produce phenomena in matter. Your thought must be very bad," he added reflectively, gazing again at the reddened face and streaming eyes of the sufferer.

Mrs. Hollis winced a little at this. Not as bad as if I shad pneumonia," she returned, with a touch of asperity. "But how are you going to treat me?" "With thought pills," safd the doc-

"Thought pills!" exclaimed Mrs. Hol-

"Yes," said he, "with thought pills. should not feel justified in stopping at anything short of them." "I never heard of them. Are they to be taken internally?"

"Of course," replied the doctor Your thoughts are inside of you, and so must be the pills. We have got to go to the root of the matter. And now," he went on, "I will ask you to be long. Do not give a thought to the pills while I am gone. That will come later on."

the pills were to be excluded from Mrs. Hollis' mind, but this was soon found an impossibility. Struggle as she might no other topic could be maintained. She tried to think of the children's dingown, but in vain. The pills swept everything before them, so to speak compounded, what was the rationale of their operation, these were questions Hollis' brain and excited thrills of pills had certainly effected a lodgment A slight misgiving did for a moment was too evidently serious at the time for the misgiving to enlarge into suspicion. It was at this moment that he

"I will explain to you exactly what you must do," said the doctor, as he seated himself by the patient and opened a little box. It contained four pills, three of quite ordinary size and color, but the fourth much larger and very dark. "The three smaller pills are not to be taken until bedtime, but their action begins at once. The great point is that you are to follow unhesitatingly any course to which they prompt. They are thought pills, remember. At dinner, for instance, you will find no quantity of fruit, but the instant any other dish is before you and you think ent it. Before going to bed take the three pills and put your mind upon breakfast. Probably you will be unable to go beyond coffee and fruit. Come and see me late in the afternoon." "But what is the philosophy of the pills, doctor?" asked Mrs. Hollis. "They have a twofold aspect," he reolied. "I should not like to use the word duplicity"-this with a hardly perceptible twinkle of the eye-"we will call it duplexness. They project into the concrete objectivity the essences and powers of the supra-physipole of the immaterial. But it is the reflex action on which I lay most stress. They, as it were, restore the concrete to the abstract. Thought is everything; matter is mere nothing If the universe can be mirrored in an atom, much more so in a pill." This certainly had the orthodox The ring of the true mind cure doctrine was there. Even unintelligibility was fairly well preserved. Mrs. Hollis was to some extent reassured. She hardly liked to ask the doctor whether he also was a disciple but it was clear that to was a student. "But how about the rest of the time?" she inquired. "Am I to think of the pills all the while?" "I should not consider that essential," said the doctor after a moment's reflection. "But thought at meals and at night is vital."

"I am not quite sure whether I kind," Mrs. Hollis remarked as she held the box irresolutely in her hand. the doctor.

"Oh!" sald she. Dinner turned out precisely as Dr. Smith had foretold. The soup was certainly palatable, but thought of the pills was a bar to fish. "Are you not well, my dear?" asked Mr. Hollis as she declined it.

"Yes," she said; "I am quite well, but I have a dreadful co-; that is, I mean, no, not any fish."

Mr. Hollis observed that every dish went untasted save the berries, of which his wife consumed three plates. But he was wise with years of matri-mony and knew that the mystery sleep overcame her. Her slumbers were not continuous, and she awoke far earlier than was customary, but certainly improvement had begun. The fourth pill was more difficult to swallow, and she had to blte it. It had a very slight taste, not unlike that of Boston brown bread, by no means unpleasant. Nor was the doctor's provision less accurate respecting breakfast. The thought pills did seem to efface all wish for everything beyond coffee and fruit. As the day went on the symptoms steadily bettered. The head was less choked, the cheeks were not so red and swollen, eyes and nose were palpably on the mend. It was in far more pleasing condition that she repaired to the consulting room late in the afternoon. Little of moment, however, occurred. Dr. Smith expressed great satisfaction at her rapid recovery, and she was cordial in attestation of the merit in thought pills. "But tell pills or I?" "The powers of nature often interpenetrate," said the doctor, "and we accept the outcome of causative action while unable to assign proportionate value to each."

Mr. Hollis was no less gratified at the quick improvement in his wife and in the library after dinner led the way to an account of the treatment. As the and more interested and intent, though at times a faint twinkle of the eye was perceptible. But hardly had Mrs. Hollis concluded her exposition of the therapeutic process when he dropped his newspaper, threw back his head, clasped his hands behind it and emitted a loud and long guffaw.

"Henry, what is the matter with you?" cried his wife in astonishment. "My dear," said he when calmnes returned, "I could have prescribed diet and jalap as well as Dr. Smith."

"But what about the thought pills? she asked, with open eyes. "Pills work irrespective of thought," Mr. Hollis replied sententiously.

> Paris Beggars' Children. Professional beggars in Paris hire children to help them win money from the charitable. There are certain recognized centers for this abominable traffic, and a regular tariff is in operation at these child markets. The trade is by far the briskest in winter. In ordinary times, when no special holiday is in progress, a child of from 5 to 10 years may be had cheaply, the current charge being 18 pence a day, or 2 shillings if the weather is very cold. Babies in arms or those who can only just toddle are more expensive > fetching double and treble this sum. On Christmas day and New Year's day, when beggars are practically not interfered with by the police and reap their richest harvests, the prices are much higher. As much as a sovereign has to be paid on these special occasions for a baby only a few months old, and even this sum is exceeded in the case of the hapless little creatures who are ill and who are thus likely the more readily to move the passerby to oity. Older children on these holidays may be hired for 8 shillings. If the beggar continues at work throughout the evening, he has to supply the child with supper. He also has to undertake to pay for a doctor if his victim should fall ill from exposure.-Pall Mall Gazette.
