most satisfactory. Speaking of his own chances, the Senator says that he believes that were the election of senators a popular one, he would certainly win, but with the holdover contingent in the state senate, he has little chance.

A Gentleman
How few people analyze the word gentleman, and see that it is a generic name? The sterner and more masculine a man is, the more sympathy he usually has for the weak and the dependent. He is mean and ungenerous when he takes advantage of his strength and independence, and he is making one of those mistakes which he will see after a while. He may seem to be having "more fun" if he neglects the little duties and courtesies which he ought to pay his mother and sisters and other girls who are not his sisters, but he is jumping rocks, climbing up the wrong path, when he does it, and when he gets farther along he will see it. He is putting himself out of the procession of gentlemen. He is not learning the little ways which make a nature lovable and respected by every one.

What can be accomplished by mere publicity can be judged by the example of the Steel Trust which has voluntarily made its affairs public, and which unobtrusively to aggregate profits of $64,000,000 during the past six months. According to Representative Babcock, chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, the Steel Trust is now taking out of the pockets of the people of the United States from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 more than it is entitled to annually, and it does this by the virtue of the monopoly secured to it by the tariff of 45 per cent. on its products; but it is announced, that Mr. Roosevelt does not anticipate "injuring the trusts by any reduction of the tariff" but will simply advocate legislation which will insure publicity of their affairs.

No better opportunity was ever afforded the President to demonstrate his fairness and consistency than is presented by the case of Senator Bailey of Texas and Judge Penfield, Solicitor General of the State Department. It will be remembered that a case in which the Texas Senator is interested was discussed with considerable acerbity by Mr. Bailey and Mr. Beveridge of Indiana during the closing hour of the session and resulted in an unfortunate personal encounter between the two, after the Senate had adjourned for the day. Subsequently Judge Penfield, in whose defense Senator Beveridge had engaged, made public a statement of his view of the controversy. While the Judge was doubtless within his rights in making public his side of the case, his statement was marred by the most intemperate language. After saying that Senator Bailey had stated on the floor of the Senate that "in substance and spirit untrue" and what he knew "perfectly well" was untrue, he concludes by saying "Senator Bailey is one of those men who go hunting trouble and this is simply one of those spasmodic displays of animosity in which he indulges at regular periods." Entirely apart from the merits of the case, the language is intemperate and insulting to a United States Senator acting in his official capacity and, moreover, gives evidence of a vindictiveness and an absence of judicial qualifications so necessary in a man filling the important position occupied by the Judge. A precedent has already been set by Mr. Roosevelt himself, in his reprimand of General Funston for a far less offensive criticism of Senator Hoar, and Mr. Roosevelt can materially benefit the public service, inspire the respect of the people regardless of party, and prevent further complications by promptly dropping the offending official from the rolls of the State Department.

Senator Harris of Kansas was among the national legislators who have been in Washington during the past week and he predicts the most encouraging results for his party in the fall elections. He does not regard his own return to the Senate as probable but believes that the democrats will carry the state elections and will make material gains in the congressional delegation. He states that the elements opposed to the republican party are more thoroughly organized than ever before, from which he argues the "vultures will be...

Republican Editorials Say

Mr. Littlefield attacks Babcock, Republican Editorials say. He attacked the editorials of the Washington Times and the Washington Post. Some Beauties of the Liqueur Habit
There is no end to significant denigratory stories, and to print them all would be impossible, but to have been brought to the attention of the reporter during the past few days that ought to go on record. One of them is told by a lady living on one of the streets leading out of town and it is true. The other is heresy, and the reporter does not vouch for it further than to say it is plausible. The lady's story is this: "While I was sitting on my piazza during Saturday afternoon, I noticed a negro woman going by followed by a boy, and in the road was a wagon in which there were several drunken negroes. The woman was in high temper, evidently because of her husband, and I heard her say to the boy, "Coulde'nt you get your a thing to day. That trifling dady yours promised me this morning that I could do some fradling, and he has gone and spent all the money he had for him and them other niggers to get drunk on."

Mother Always Keep It Handy.
My mother suffered a long time from distressing pains and general ill health due primarily to indigestion," says L. W. Spaid, King, Va. Mo. "Two years ago I got her to try Kodol. She grew better at once and now, at the age of seventy-two, eats anything she likes, and she has her appetite and her health. Don't waste time doctoring symptoms. Get right after the cause. If your stomach is sound your health will be good. Kodol restores the stomach and strengthens the body by digesting your food. It is nature's own tonic. A. P. F. Pills, King, Va.

He Fald the Bill.
Kansas City (Mo.) Journal.
A funny story about a physician at Monroe City, Mo., is going the rounds of the State press. A resident of the town set out four shade trees for the doctor. A short time later the physician was called to attend the mother-in-law of the man who had set out the trees. The old lady died, and the physician presented his bill. After paying it, the citizen thought of the trees, and made out and presented a bill for them. "But the trees died," protested the doctor. "So did my mother-in-law," retorted the other man. The doctor paid the bill.
No False Claim.
The proprietors of Foley's Honey and Turf do not advertise this as a "sure cure for consumption." They do not claim to cure this dread complaint in advanced cases, but do positively assert that it will cure in the earlier stages and never fails to give comfort and relief in the worst cases. Foley's Honey and Turf is without doubt the greatest throat and lung remedy before substituted. M. K. & P. Pills, King, Va.

The Man We Don't Pardon.
We can forgive the man who is ignorant, we can forgive the man who is weak, we can forgive the man who is stupid, but we cannot forgive the man who is dishonest. We can forgive the man who is ignorant, we can forgive the man who is weak, we can forgive the man who is stupid, but we cannot forgive the man who is dishonest. We can forgive the man who is ignorant, we can forgive the man who is weak, we can forgive the man who is stupid, but we cannot forgive the man who is dishonest.
