N the long ago out in the great historic county of Pike, in the imperial state of Missouri, where I cle, a sad spectacle, for men and unnow reside, there lived a man gels. One night, being in St. Louis, he bucked the tiger in his lair and lost every cent he had. Next morning about sun-up Sid, dead broke and chopfallen, ventured forth in quest of breakfast. He met a friend, who, noting his weebegone expression of countenance, said, "Sid, what on earth's the matter?" In lugubrious accents Sid replied: "Oh, the deuce! I have been playing the fool and have nothing to show for it!" That is precisely the condition of those Colorado Republicans, headed by ex-Senator Edward O. Walcott, who endeavored unsuccessfully to rob Henry M. Teller of a re-election to the senate of the United States. Teller is an honor to the human race. He is the one great historic personage given to the world by Colorado. He was a Republican so long as he could be and at the same time retain the approval of his own mind and conscience. When that could no longer be done, he, with tears in his eyes and anguish in his heart, left the party to which he had devoted the best years of his life. As a Republican he had not only held, but had honored, the positions of senstor and cabinet minister. That he changed his political affiliations be-cause of the purest motives nobody Republican press has pursued him with a rancor that disgraces it and not Henry M. Teller.

do resorted to methods that would which is perhaps the easiest and most have been a revelation of violence the toughest ward meeting held in the Tenderloin district of the toughest city in the world, yet Republicans claim to be the apostles of light, sweetness and purity; but in spite of all their machinations, in spite of Senator Marcus A. Hanna's brazen and impudent telegram begging the Colorado Republicans to elect a Republican senator when he knew that a Democratic legislature had been elected honestly and fairly, in spite of all the skulduddery to which his foes resorted, Teller and truth and right and justice have triumphed. The grand old man who bravely stood by his people in their darkest hour gets another term in the senate, and Edward O. Wolcott, who deserted them when their need was the sorest, is once more relegated to the rear.

Indeed this Colorado election muddle is not the only senatorial imbroglio inthat his supporters claim the senatorship for him pecause he has paid it! "O tempora! O mores!" How however, by those who have paid any are the mighty fallen! How would attention to our early history that in and Wolcotts could they return to more amendments to the constitution earth? Endeavoring to steal a senstorship in Colorado, endeavoring to buy two senatorships in Delaware! Fine record, surely!

All the big bore statesmen in the country have been frying, or have been pretending to try, to devise some plan to circumvent the trusts. The president has suggested one remedy: Attorney General Knox has suggested another; nearly every senator has suggested another; nearly every senator has suggested one of his own; ditto in the house. It has all ended in suggestion use. It has all ended in suggestion and smoke as was intended in most cases no doubt. While all these high and mighty functionaries have been pestering their pulsaant and august heads in hatching schemes and in keeping up a deafening racket as to what dreadful things they were meditating against the trusts a plain, level headed Missouri farmer, Hon. M. R. K. Biggs, who is one of my constituents and the state senator from the senatorial district in which I live, has done more to throttle the trusts than all the big bore statesmen in Washington. He has introduced a bill into the Missouri senate appropriating money enough to start a state binder twine factory. Senator Biggs, who has investigated the twine subject thoroughly, declares that his plan will save to the farmers from 3 to 5 cents per pound on binder twine, which means a vast saving to Missouri farmers in the aggregate. They will rise up and call Senator whose good opinion is worth having biggs blessed. If the binder twine has ever doubted. Nevertheless, the project is successful—and from the figures colleted by Senator Biggs it must be so-the same plan can be extended to other articles, and in this way, one The Wolcott Republicans of Colors- by one, the trusts will be starved out.
