Champ Clark's Letter

Congratulations to the Emperor of Germany and Two Soldier Candidates For the Democratic Presidential Nomination

(Special Washington Letter.)

The present writing Republican opposition to the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt presents a disingenuous view. It seems to be fanning out. His friends are aggressive and know what they want, while those who are opposed to him are really in search of some one with nerve enough to tackle the job of beating him out of the nomination. Up to date they appear to be on a cold trail. There are lots of Republican statesmen, more or less conspicuous, who would like to enter the lists, but they cannot make the anti-Rooseveltians believe that they have any chance. Hence they are set aside. The strong men who are hankering after a four or eight year stay in the White House—such as Senator Marcus A. Hanna—are hesitating on the bank of the Rubicon. The indications are that they have loitered too long already, as delegates are beginning to be instructed for Colonel Roosevelt. He seems to have infused somewhat of his own strenuosity into his followers.

Congratulations.

Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany celebrated the forty-fifth anniversary of his birth the other day. The dispatches inform us that large numbers of the most eminent persons in his empire called to pay their respects and to extend congratulations, while a vast concourse assembled about the palace to show their interest in the event.

A man does not seem to be a monarchist in order to admire many qualities in Emperors, kings and potentates, and the Hohenzollerns are the manliest royalties in Europe. Of course over here we are all in favor of electing our presidents, and the chances are that we are always will be, but even among hereditary rulers a plain American whether Democrat, Republican or Populist, may have his choice.

Kaiser Wilhelm is growing in popularity both at home and abroad. Sensible persons everywhere have ceased to wonder at his popularity, and are now and have ceased to regard him as a menace to the peace of Europe. On the other hand, while he maintains the strongest, if not the largest, army in the world, he does not seem to be looked upon as one of the conservators of the peace of the world.

That he takes an intense interest in everything tending to promote the welfare of the fatherland is known of all men. He encourages by every means in his power the growing trade of Germany and is building up his realm in every possible manner. He is a laborious Kaiser. He perhaps works as hard as any citizen of his empire. Indeed, his hobbies, which have always worked indefatigably, Frederick the Great labored more hours out of the twenty-four than any other man of his time. The sons of the Kaisers in the capacity of kings of Prussia are compelled to learn history just as the sons of other Prussians—not that they are expected to follow those trades when grown up, but to develop their bodies, to set a good example and to be able, should necessity arise, to earn their living by carrying on those trades, for the Germans in general and the Hohenzollerns in particular are eminently practical folks, realize that this is a changeable world and propose to be ready for any fate. There is no prospect that Kaiser Wilhelm will be dethroned and driven into exile, but should that happen, and should he be hustled out of his empire without a dollar or change of linen, as was poor old Dom Pedro of Brazil, he could earn his living by working at his trade, and no doubt that is precisely what he would do instead of living on charity, as so many exiled royalties have done and are doing. After all he said that he could be said about the Kaiser being an autocrat, the fact remains that the Hohenzollerns are not drones, but they consider themselves as not only rulers, but also as the chief servants of their people. The present German empire is one of the wonders of modern times. Any man of intelligence can trace every rapid step by which it has grown from the smallest beginnings, to the first place among European nations in a comparatively short space of time. If the Kaiser lives long and continues to grow at the present rate, his history will rank him with his mighty ancestors, the great elector and with Frederick the Great. Whether he would be a successful soldier remains to be seen—indeed, may never be known—but "peace hath her victories no less renowned than war" and the Kaiser is doing his utmost to make the fatherland supreme in commerce and in trade, in science and in art.

Whatever his virtues or his faults, he holds the center of the stage among old world potentates.

Two of a Kind.
The evidences are accumulating that General Nelson A. Miles is pushing his candidacy for the presidential nomination on the Democratic ticket. There was method in his madness in making that astounding ride in Oklahoma last year.

of the civil war and really ought to be able to form a tolerably correct opinion as to what they will do or will not do in any given emergency, but the chances are that he would not be able to do so.

The Kansas Situation.
That "Jordan is a hard road to travel" in Kansas Republican politics is demonstrated by the retirement of Governor W. J. Geary from the gubernatorial race to succeed himself. Geary's political career has been strenuous and disappointing. Some years ago he was elected representative in congress at large. He could have been re-elected and re-elected and re-elected, but he had made up his mind to retire. He had made up his mind to retire. He had made up his mind to retire.

When he was elected representative in congress at large, he could have been re-elected and re-elected and re-elected, but he had made up his mind to retire. He had made up his mind to retire. He had made up his mind to retire.

A Russian Heart Breaker.
Russian feminine society is all broken up over the untimely end of Prince Lorkipradze, the great dancer and most renowned heart breaker of St. Petersburg's winter season for many years. His high social position was a very hard case. He had a very hard case. He had a very hard case.

It has percolated through the brains of Republican leaders that American taxpayers are growing weary of the riotous totals of appropriation bills. Mr. Hemenway, chairman of the house committee on appropriations, has sounded the alarm, and consequently the Republican leaders have issued a pledge to the effect that appropriations must be reduced for the purposes of the campaign—but they do not inform the public honestly that the object of such economy in the Republican camp is to save the pockets of the taxpayers.

A lady long resident in Washington, wife of a distinguished ex-senator, told me the other day that she did not like the idea of a Democratic candidate, including all said above. She is an intense Republican, but she is not a fanatical one. She is not a fanatical one. She is not a fanatical one.

That veteran statesman and soldier, General Daniel E. Sickles of New York, rises to suggest General J. C. Black of Illinois, now head of the G. A. R. He is a suitable person for the presidential candidate on the Democratic ticket. He says that General Black would have a million men working for him, and that he would have a million men working for him, and that he would have a million men working for him.

Some queer things happen in these latter days. Dr. J. C. Black of Illinois, now head of the G. A. R. He is a suitable person for the presidential candidate on the Democratic ticket. He says that General Black would have a million men working for him, and that he would have a million men working for him, and that he would have a million men working for him.

King Peter of Serbia perhaps comprehends better than any other living man the old saying, "Uneasy rests the head that wears a crown." He hasn't much of a crown, but he has a crown. He has a crown. He has a crown.

HIS POSTHUMOUS JOKE.

When the will of M. Philippin of Rouilly, France, was opened the other day, it was found that he had left aside a certain sum of money for a funeral banquet. According to the will, the sum had been deposited in a local savings bank and after the funeral it would be paid to the town officials, who alone were invited to attend the banquet.

When they heard this good news, the officials instructed a hotel proprietor to have an excellent feast ready on the evening of the day on which the funeral was to be held, and as soon as the funeral was over they went to the savings bank to a body with the intention of drawing out the money.

Great, however, was their surprise when the cashier informed them, with a smile, that M. Philippin had not deposited any money in the bank, and they did not venture to disagree with him when he had stated the comparative that the deceased had simply been playing a practical joke on them.

All that remained for them to do was to notify the hotel proprietor that there was no money for the banquet, and that they promptly did.

King Albert of Belgium, who died recently, was a very kind man. He had a very kind man. He had a very kind man.

At last it can be said that the man who was the most kind of all men, King Albert of Belgium, who died recently, was a very kind man. He had a very kind man. He had a very kind man.

Needed Good Help.
Summer work. I wish you'd look up your money and pretend to fail. There's a good old dear. It needn't last more than a week or two, and there are so many failures now no one will fail.

The serious life expenses should be simplified.

Character is the one thing without which is development.

What God demands is an ability to do what he desires.

It is a good deal easier to drag a rut than to rise out of it.

A day without a good deal leaves you in debt.

When you have a fault, the first thing you should do is to get it out of your mind. The first thing you should do is to get it out of your mind.

Helpfulness is never picked up by the bargain counter.
