dies. The last one is full of them, but of all the defeat of Missouri's grand old man, her well beloved chieftain, General Francis Marion Cockrell, for re-election to the senate of the United States for a sixth term is the saddest and clearly demonstrates the inadequate rewards of political life. Here is a man venerated by all his people, his name known and honored as a Ga., close to Augusta, is the habitat of household word in every home betwixt Thomas E. Watson, and only a few the two oceans, turned out in his old miles distant in South Carolina is that adorned for thirty years, supplanted by some obscure politician whose name France and other foreign countries and does not matter, some Republican Tom, write one about Georgia and Georgia Dick or Harry. Missouri was the first state to keep a senator at Washington for thirty consecutive years. Thomas Hart Benton beld her commission for that length of time, or for "six full Roman lustrums," as he pompously put it. He was one of the greatest men of reason of the marvelous headpiece his era, an era exceptionally rich in which he carried around on his royal great men. Among Missouri Democrats it had become a sort of mania to have him electing him to the full sixth term, for which Benton strove eagerly and fought valorously, but which he failed to get. There are many capable and ambitious Missouri Democrats, men anxious and fit to sit in the senate, but not one of them dared to hint that he would like to tackle "Old Frank Cockrell," as the good gray general is affectionately called. It would have meant sure po-litical death to the Democrat who triedt. It is not the language of flatters out of truth and soberness, to say that housands of Missouri Republicans prefer General Cockrell to any Repulican as senator, for he has been faithful a public servant as any state ever sent to Washington. A Confederate soldier himself, he has been the best friend the Union veterans of Missouri ever had. If they had understood his peril, enough of them and to spare would have voted for Democratic mem ers of the legislature to have made the legislature Democratic on joint ballot to have insured his re-election. Had he sent 20,000 letters or even 10. 000 to Union Republican soldiers whom he has served so well, asking them to vote for Democratic representatives because they would vote for him, he would have secured his sixth term.
