MRS. HETTIE GREEN.

THE RICHEST WOMAN IN THE WORLD.

Lives a Cheerless and Miserable Life Despite Her Millions of Money.

Our esteemed contemporary, the New York World, on last Sunday devoted a page to an account of Mrs. Hettie Green, whom it styles "the richest woman in the world." According to this account, no one ever lived a more cheerless life than this woman. Whether she has a hundred millions or a hundred and twenty-five millions, as the estimates run, she has at her command everything that money can buy. Yet she is greedy to be pined for she lives friendless and alone and is apparently oppressed with the sordid cares which sometimes embitter the lives of those who have scarcely the means to provide food. Man, says the Psalmist, walketh himself in vain shadow and disquieteth himself in vain: he heareth up riches and cannot tell who shall gather them. Mrs. Green thinks she knows who will gather the riches she is heaping up. But in this even she may be mistaken. It is said that she is saving and denying herself of all the necessities of life in order that when she dies her only son may be the richest man in the world. The son has now reached middle life. He may live to inherit his mother's millions and he may not squander them when they are his. But who can tell? In the meantime he lives in Texas, while his mother in her old age is living alone, with nothing to comfort her or give her pleasure except the ceaseless gathering of dollars. According to the World's account, this rich woman has an office in New York in which she toils more hours daily than the poorest clerk. At night she crosses the Hudson and takes refuge in a mean apartment house, where she lives incognito, having no friends and no social life, wrangling with the grocer over the price of the few purchases of food she makes. She actually, it is said, washes her own clothing and saves cents more earnestly than an organ grinder.

And what is the purpose of this life of toil, of loneliness, of penury? Simply, it would seem, that her son may be as unhappy as she is. Compared with such a life, the life of the man with the hoe is beautiful and attractive. Mrs. Green is living the life of King Midas. Everything he touched turned to gold, but of Jehovah, King of Judah, the terrible sentence was written after his death that "he departed without being desired." His life was useless, he helped none, and when he died there was not a friend to mourn his loss, not one tear shed upon his grave. He departed without being desired.

Mrs. Green's money, according to this account in the World, and it is to be hoped it is not accurate, gives no one employment, makes no one happy, lightens no man's burdens. It is loaned to Wall street speculators at a high rate of interest.—Baltimore Sun.

AN INSIDIOUS FOE.

The famous Matthews case which is attracting so much public attention in Greensboro and throughout the State, but serves to show the awful results that often follow from the misuse of powerful and insidious drugs.

For there seems to be little if any doubt that it was the habit-taking morphine which has cost one life, and wrecked another—which has put a wife in the grave and sent the husband to a cell to await trial for her murder.

The evils of drunkenness are surely bad enough, but they pale almost to insignificance, if drunkenness can ever be insignificant, when compared with the terrible body-wrecking conscience destroying morphine or cocaine.

Those who are in a position to know say that the public would stand aghast if it knew the widespread prevalence of the pernicious drug habit, and the most regrettable aspect of the case is that the habit is said to be on the increase.

The law in regard to the sale of deadly drugs has of late been made much more stringent than it formerly was, but the subject should never be dismissed from the attention of either lawmaker or public-spirited citizen; for so long as human nature is weak, and nerves throb and ache and pain—maddened minds seek for a means of forgetting. Men and women will do this, unless prevented, slip by degrees into this most fearful of all evil ways. Legislation, public sentiment, a careful watch and scrutiny by physicians and druggists must all co-operate to minimize the evil.

"The wages of sin is death," and one of the growing and threatening sins of the age is the excessive use of pain-alleviating drugs which little by little

WHY THE SMALL MERCHANT SHOULD ADVERTISE.

Many Very Important Arguments on Advertising as an Investment Cleared Up.

Having read a good many articles on advertising, dealing with it in many various ways, all of which being good arguments, as it is impossible to find an argument when treated with justice, reason and common sense that will present it as invaluable, and having had a good deal of experience in soliciting the same it is really strange to see how many people who pose as among the leading business men that do not even understand the principles and claims of advertising. And even more absurd are the reasons "why they should not advertise" presented by the small business man.

NORTH CAROLINA.

News Gathered From Every Section of the State.

Steps are being taken to erect a Y. M. C. A. building in Raleigh during the coming year.

The Secretary of State finds the total number of corporations chartered this year to be 697.

The town of Roanoke Rapids held an election on dispensary or saloons. Dispensary won by 29 majority.

The State Labor Commissioner finds there are 299 more miscellaneous factories in North Carolina this year than there was last year.

The State Auditor says that of the Confederate pensioners the total number who are entirely blind, or have lost both legs or both arms is eighty.

There are now 256 orphans, of both sexes, in the Oxford Orphan Asylum. Remember them during the Christmas holidays, and if you can't send them money, send clothing, &c.

The Corporation Commission this year for the first time received returns of the incomes listed for taxation and reports the total amount given in $2,798,895. Last year it was $2,454,504.

State Horticulturist Hume is preparing a new bulletin on the propagation of North Carolina fruit plants, including grafting, budding, the making of cuttings, etc., including apples, peaches, pears, plums, etc.

It is stated that the Raleigh & Pamlico Sound Railway is to be thrown open for traffic to Wendall, a point eighteen miles from Raleigh not later than April 1st. This road is now owned by New York and Ohio men, who are said to be pushing the work quite rapidly, they having secured the local stock.

It is said that half of the fourth story of the new building for women at the hospital for the insane at Raleigh remains to be completed, and the work will now be pushed so rapidly that it will be completed by the first of April. The greatest expedition will be used, and Governor Glenn is behind the movement with all his strength.

President Winston announces that the baccalaureate sermon at the Agricultural and Mechanical College will be preached next year, Sunday, May 27th, by Right Rev. Robert Strange, of Wilmington, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of East Carolina. The annual address will be delivered May 29th by Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief of the fruit division of the United States Agricultural Department, who conducted during the past few years remarkable experiments regarding human foods.

State Labor Commissioner Varner says there are no children under twelve years old in the cotton mills in this State unless their parents have lied as to their ages and that mill men will not take children under twelve. He says that this child labor law has caused a very great number of children to go to school, and in fact has filled many school houses by keeping the children out of the mills. He says that it has done a good deal of good. No complaints from the employees of the mills have been received in a good while, Commissioner Varner says.

THE FIRST REQUISITE OF BEAUTY.
The first requisite of beauty is a clear complexion. Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup clears a sallow, blotched complexion, it stimulates the liver and bowels and the eyes become bright and clear. G. L. Aycock.

Some men merely select the lesser of two evils as a sample.

The Key that Unlocks the Door to Long Living.
The men of eighty-five and ninety years of age are not the rotund well fed, but thin, spare men who live on a slender diet. Be as careful as he will, however, a man, past middle age, will occasionally eat too much or of some article of food not suited to his constitution, and will need a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets to cleanse and invigorate his stomach and regulate his liver and bowels. When this is done there is no reason why the average man should not live to old age. For sale by All Druggists.

Listen to What H. T. Beasley & Co. Have to Say to His Friends.
Now we don't think we have ever given you any bad advice and are as far from it as any man, but we believe it is a good time to sell all the common tobacco you have on hand as we are bound to admit that these grades of tobacco are selling well, and Louisa is the market to bring your tobacco to, and Ford's Warehouse is the place to get the best accommodation and the best prices when you get there. If it is a little inconvenient to get in and out you will always be taken care of after you do get inside.
