FARMERS WIN THE FIGHT

LOOKING AT THE COTTON QUESTION IN A DIFFERENT LIGHT.

The Cotton Association their Only Chance to Maintain a Fair Price for their Cotton—The Views of President Moore.

The farmers have again won the fight—the bears beat cotton down to 101-2 cents, farmers who believe in the cotton association would not sell up goes cotton, and up it should go.

With the great demand for cotton goods from all over the world and the excellent prices the goods sell at our cotton is cheap to the spinner at 15 cents.

Farmers all over the South are looking at the cotton question differently than they did in years past.

They begin to ask why it is that they must pay such a difference for cotton when they buy it in goods and sell their raw cotton for so little.

The farmer now unwinds a spool of cotton thread weighs it and with pencil figures the cost to him of a 500-pound bale of cotton sold to him at 5 cents the spool: he finds that he pays $2,000 per bale for what he sold at $75 the 500-pound bale.

Mrs. Farmer is interested also; she puts a yard of seven-cent unbleached domestic on the scales, figures out the cost to her of 500 pounds of cotton in that shape to be $135 per bale, then she tells her husband that 15 cents per pound or $75 per bale, is not too much for him to get for raw cotton.

Lead pencil sales are great here of late, many farmers who had no pencil now wears one inch or so from one every night.

Yes, our farmers are figuring and thinking, they are to believe from now on this cotton price question—they will have a say as to the price.

Our Southern cotton manufacturer are anxious to see the price of cotton advance, many of them tell me they make more on their finished product when cotton is high than when it is low.

Farmers are reading more and more of the cotton association, they are confident that through it is their only chance to receive fair prices for their cotton. I am often asked "In what paper can I find cotton association information?"

More farmers read daily papers now than ever before; our farmers are well informed, they see that 15 cents is not too much for cotton, they see, too, that to maintain a fair price, the 1906 acreage must be out one-quarter from the 1904 planting.

Why should they not see these things? Are they not aware that there is yet in the hands of patriotic men some four or five million bales of the 1904 cotton? If the South produces this year, over 11 million bales, there will be a surplus again and down will go the price.

Horse sense would say "don't put ten ears of corn in the trough, when there is already ten there the mule did not eat"; what is the use of raising cotton the world will not use?

HOW TO REDUCE ACREAGE.

This is not an individual question entirely, but one for the township club—the constitution of the Southern Cotton Association provides for the township club—to arrange among its members the acreage question.

An inventory of acreage on every farm in 1904 should be taken, call the roll of members and ask how much each will reduce; this may show 30, 40, or 50 per cent. reduction for the township, if so, then some man who wishes to do so, may increase his 1906 planting and yet the township in total, be 25 per cent. under 1904.

I do wish our farmers would read the constitution and become fully acquainted with its broad, liberal provisions.

Farmers should by all means attend meetings of their club this week and have the constitution read aloud by a distinct reader. Your association has put many dollars in your pocket, it will do so next season if you will loyally stand by its officials.

These officials are men like yourself—they can not work for you, write for you, print for you; yes, fight Wall Street for you, unless you support them.

Do you expect men to do the work that Jordan Cheatham and others do, all for your good, and you do nothing for them? Is it fair for you to pocket $20 per bale on your cotton and give nothing to sustain the association?

Pay your quarterly dues and your 10-cent per bale levy at once. I want to send money to the Atlanta office—North Carolina is behind all States in the support of the central office.

C. C. MOORE, President
N. C. Div., S. C. A.

LOVING MOTHER.

A father, talking to his careless daughter, said: "I want to speak to you of your mother. It may be that you have noticed a care-worn look upon her face lately. Of course it has not been brought there by any act of yours, still it is your duty to chase it away. I want you to get up tomorrow morning and get breakfast; and when your mother comes, and begins to express her surprise, go right up to her and kiss her on the mouth. You can't imagine how it will brighten her dear face."

"Besides, you owe her a kiss or two. Away back when you were a little girl, she kissed you when no one else was tempted by your fever-tainted breath and swollen face. You were not as attractive then as you are now. And through those years of childhood sunshine and shadows, she was always ready to cure, by the magic of a mother's kiss, the little dirty, chubby hands whenever they were injured."

"Of course she is not so pretty and kissable as you are; but if you had done your share of work during the last ten years, the contrast would not be so marked."

"Her face has more wrinkles than yours, and yet if you were sick; that face would appear far more beautiful than an angel's as it hovered over you, watching every opportunity to your comfort, and every one of those wrinkles would seem to be bright wavelets of sunshine chasing each other over the dear face."

"She will leave you one of these days. These burdens, if not lifted from her shoulder, will break her down. Those rough, hard hands that have done so many necessary things for you, will be crossed upon her lifeless breast."

"Those neglected lips, that gave you your first baby kiss, will be forever closed, and those sad tired eyes will have opened in eternity, and then you will appreciate your mother; but it will be too late."—EX.

WOMAN'S LOVE.

Woman's hope and confidence in her husband, touched by the inspiration of love and fidelity, has raised many a man from adversity and given him new life and determination, says the Lantern.

Woman is by nature as true to her rightful lord as the needle to the magnetic North—as faithful to her marriage vow as the stars to their appointed courses. Whenever you find a woman who has gone astray you will find a husband who has no manhood; his life been a lie and a shame to her. Love is the every life of woman. It is as essential to her as the warm kiss of the sun to the lily or rose. Her love is a flame that must find an altar upon which to blaze and that altar must be pure and uncontaminated. We've often thought in studying human nature that perhaps the best place to find a man out was to go into the secrets of his home life. If he is assiduous in his attention to his wife as when she was his sweetheart, makes the same sacrifices to serve her, shows the same appreciation of her efforts to please him, truthful, kind and good to her, the sphere and circle of his manhood is unbounded and she will cling to him as the ivy to the oak.

Folly and failure root on the same perch.

Trying to avoid trouble will keep any man busy.

Whenever the world is scattered the people gather.

Much that passes for love wouldn't stand the test of curl papers.

Marriage is the only thing that will take the conceit out of some men.

Anyway, there is more or less originality about the man who sides a hobby.

Looking out on the bright side of things never caused anyone to become lopsided.

JAMES THEODORE CHEATHAM.

This Good Citizen Passed Away Last Thursday Morning.

In contrast to the rule of primogeniture, which prevails in England, it has often been said the land in this country rarely remains in the same family for three generations. A striking exception to this rule is the beautiful Cheatham homestead, situated four miles east of Oxford on the waters of Poplar Creek, which was settled by James Cheatham in the 18th century and has been owned by the family for nearly 150 years. From this house have gone out men and women who have exerted an influence for good in church and state, not only in this state but in far distant states. Of all those none were more worthy than James Theodore Cheatham, son of James Cheatham, the second, and his wife Rebecca Crews. He was born the 10th day of August, 1844. Of a bright, sunny disposition, under the teaching of a wily mother amid the happy surroundings of his ancestral home he grew up to manhood with high ideals and with a full appreciation of the duties and responsibilities of life.

At the age of seventeen he volunteered for the defense of his country in the great civil war, and enlisted in Co. G, 30th Reg. N. C. T. which was considered one of the best regiments in all the gallant land of Southern heroes. Being a splendid shot he was soon assigned to the sharpshooter corps of the brigade. Firm of purpose, cheerful under privation and hardship he was never known to complain; brave as the bravest he made an ideal soldier. He participated in the battles around Richmond, Sharpsburg, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, and on the fateful field of Gettysburg was severely wounded by a piece of shell that had already passed through the body of his Lieut. Colonel. As he could not be moved he was captured by the enemy and taken to Elmira, New York, where so many Southern boys, unable to stand the rigors of a northern climate and the hardship of prison, yielded up their lives.

But his temperate life, cheerful disposition and good constitution brought him up and enabled him to withstand all privations until the war ended. He reached home in June 1865, and found conditions greatly changed since he marched so gallantly away in 1862. But nothing daunted he went diligently to work to help build up the waste places, and make a support for the loved ones, and soon became known as one of the best farmers in the country. His intelligent conduct of the farm shows what can be done with Granville county land, and is an incentive to all young men who may wish to make their living by cultivation of the soil.

On the 1st day of December, 1868, he married Miss Elizabeth Hamlin, of Petersburg, Va., and their lives certainly furnished a complete refutation of the latter day slander that marriage was a failure. No more shining exemplification of the beauties of a christian home can be found than that furnished by the lives of Mr. Cheatham and his devoted wife. Hospitable, kind and generous, a warm welcome was extended to friend and stranger alike and all who came within the benign influence of that happy home could see and feel that their lives were guided by some fixed purpose, and that their vision was not circumscribed by earthly things.

In their children they were peculiarly blessed, never having had a case of serious sickness in the family, and all ten of them living today useful citizens of the State and members of the church.

Virginius and Charles Hamlin, both excellent farmers; Clifton B., a remarkably successful dealer in tobacco in Louisville; James Theodore Cheatham, Jr., is equally successful in the growing market of Apex; and Sarah, wife of Samuel W. Eberle, merchant and farmer of Pamlico county; Miss Mary L. Cheatham, of Norfolk; Miss Olivia B. Cheatham, of Clyde, and Missie G. and Tassie being with their mother at the old homestead.

Mr. Cheatham never aspired to political honors, but he was well informed on all matters of public interest, and had positive convictions upon the issues. He believed it the duty of all good citizens to take an active interest in politics, and could always be found at his township and county conventions advocating men and measures that he believed would conduce to temperance and good government.

About Christmas, 1905, he was taken sick, and soon realized that his days were numbered. He lingered for many weeks and gave an exhibition of patience and christian fortitude we have never seen surpassed. Though at times suffering severely, he never gave to repining, but bore up bravely, and was always tender and considerate towards his devoted wife and children who did all that human love and affection could suggest for his comfort praying a divine father to spare him to them a little while longer. Death had no terrors for him. Early in life he had made his peace with God and when about 16 years of age he joined the Methodist church at Hermon, where he was for many years a steward, and about 20 years ago moved his membership to the Oxford church, of which he was soon after elected a steward and remained so up to the time of his death.

With that same quiet nerve with which he had faced the King of Terrors on the battlefield he calmly awaited his approach and at 8:45 o'clock on Thursday morning, March 29, 1906, with his loved ones around him he "fell on sleep," assured of the rest that remaineth for the people of God.

On the afternoon of the 30th the funeral services were held at the home by Rev. F. M. Shamberger, his beloved pastor, amid a large assemblage of relatives and friends, and his body was laid to rest at the side of his father and at the feet of his grandfather in the family burial ground.

The honorary pallbearers were Prof. F. P. Hobgood, A. W. Graham, M. H. Heister, George W. Wright, W. A. Parham and James B. Belcher, and the active pallbearers were: Dr. E. T. White, L. B. Turner, John H. Bullock, R. L. Brown, W. T. Davis, James T. Coart, James A. Belcher and W. Z. Mitchell.—A. W. G., in Oxford Ledger.

An interesting bulletin has just been issued by the Census Bureau showing the remarkable decline in the bicycle industry since 1900. In that year there were 312 factories in operation, in 1905 there were but ninety-seven. The capital invested shrank from $29,788,659 to $6,847,803, and the production from nearly 32,000,000 bicycles to a little over 5,000,000. It is an astonishing falling off, and quite as unexplainable as it is astonishing.

GETTING AROUSED.

Many people seem to think that ambition is a quality born with us; that it is not susceptible of improvement; that it is something thrust upon us which will take care of itself, says the editor of Success. But it is a passion that responds very quickly to cultivation, and it requires constant care and education, just as the faculty for art or music does, or it will atrophy.

If we do not try to realize our ambition, it will not keep sharp and defined. Our faculties become dull, soon lose their power if they are not exercised. How can we expect our ambition to remain fresh and vigorous through years of inactivity, indolence or indifference? If we keep letting opportunities slip by us without making any attempt to grasp them, our inclination will grow dull and weaker.

"What I most need," as Emerson says, "is somebody to make me do what I can." To do what I can, that is my problem; not what a Napoleon or a Lincoln could do, but what I can do. It makes all the difference in the world to me whether I bring out the best thing in me or the worst—whether I utilize ten, fifteen, twenty-five or ninety per cent of my ability.

Everywhere we see people who have reached middle life or later without being aroused. They have developed only a small percentage of their success possibilities. They are still in a dreamy state. The best thing in them lies so deep that it has never been awakened. When we meet these people we feel conscious that they have a great deal of latent power that has never been exercised. Great possibilities and achievements are, all unconsciously, going to waste within them.

If you interview the great army of failures, you will find multitudes have failed because they never got into a stimulating, encouraging environment because their ambition was never aroused, or because they were not strong enough to rally under depressing, discouraging or vicious surroundings. Most of the people we find in prisons and poor-houses are pitiable examples of the influence of an environment which appealed to the worst instead of the best in them.

Cured Hemorrhages of the Throat.

"Several years since my lungs were so badly affected that I had many hemorrhages," writes A. M. Abt, of Wood, Ind. "I took treatment with several physicians without any benefit. I then started to take Foley's Honey and Tar, and my lungs are now as sound as a bell. I recommend it in advanced stages of lung trouble." Foley's Honey and Tar stops the cough and breaks the lungs, and prevents serious results from a cold. It's a sure substitute. Sold by G. L. Aycocks.

FIFTY CENTS

IN some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion is very rapid. For this reason we put up a fifty-cent size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children. In other conditions the gain is slower—health cannot be built up in a day. In such cases Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment, a food rather than a medicine. It's a food for thin and weak digestions.
