CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

USE the better elements of life as medicine and feed on the sunshine.

TIME is never lost that is spent in leading any person into a better life.

DON'T neglect your children until they are grown and then complain because they neglect you.

GIVE your children good books—plenty of them and then help them understand what they read.

HABITS formed in youth are very apt to stick to you in after life. Young people who now spend every dollar they can raise are not apt to be thrifty in after life. Those who go in rude company and use rude language will naturally associate with the ruder class in years to come. Many parents never seem to think of those things, but allow their children to unit along just as it may happen.

SYMPATHY does not lighten a burden of sorrow, but it does help the burdened one to bear load. If therefore, you know of a sorrow which presses another's heart give expression to your sympathy with him, even though you understand that he alone must struggle under the weight of his burden. In one sense your words cannot help him, in another sense they can. Speak them out, therefore, for what they may be worth. He will be grateful for them and you will be the better for their speaking.

SOLOMONS description of a lady is complete: "The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her. She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life. She girdeth her loins with strength and stretcheth out her hand to the poor; yea, she strengtheneth aid to the needy. She maketh herself coverings of tapestry; her clothing is purple and fine linen. Her husband is known in the gates. Strength and honor are her clothing. She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness." Strength, honor, wisdom, goodness and virtue are her requisites. A woman strong and womanly in all her ways in whom the heart of a woman can safely trust—this is the perfect lady.

DON'T complain of your husband to anyone, not even your own mother. If she is the wise woman you think her she will respect you all the more. Did you think when you married your Will or your Harry that he was the one perfect man in all the world, and now you have found that he is very human, after all? That it does seem sometimes as though he loved himself a little better than you? That he can even bear to differ with you sometimes in matters that concern you very much? And, oh, dear little woman, that he will forget just what you want him to remember sometimes? Now just take our advice and don't tell anybody. He is your husband—your other self—and you ought to cover his fault just like you do your own.

PARENTAL love, conjugal love, filial love are the keystones to that arch that supports the pillars of government and keeps our social system secure. As a rule anarchists have no children. No nothing to love but themselves. As a rule the poor love their children better than the rich, for riches will in time absorb a man and absorb his best emotions. With the poor the children are first, with the rich they are second. The law of compensation comes into everything in his life. The good and the bad; the joys and sorrows are kindly mixed by a wise Providence. Then let us all be content with our lot. Let us not look over the fence to envy our neighbor, for we know not his secret sorrows. Let us not trouble our own house for fear we shall inherit the wind.

HONOUR the dear mother. Time has scattered snowy flakes on her brow, plowed deep furrows on her cheek, but is she not sweet and beautiful now? The lips are thin and shrunken, but those are the lips which have kissed many a hot tear from the childish cheeks, and they are the sweetest lips in the world. The eye is dim, yet it glows with the soft radiance that can never fade. Ah! yes, she is a dear old mother. The sands of life have nearly run out, but feeble as she is, she will go farther, and reach down lower, for you than any other upon earth. You cannot enter a prison whose bars can keep her out, you cannot mount a scaffold to high for her to reach, that she may kiss and bless you in evidence of her deathless love. When the world shall despise and forsake you, when it leaves you by the wayside to perish unnoticed, the dear mother will gather you to her arms and tell you all her virtues, until you almost forget that your soul is disgraced with vices. Love her tenderly, and cheer her declining years with holy devotion.

How IT WILL BE. If an authoritative bulletin were to be issued this moment from the court of heaven that in just seven days the earth would be destroyed, what passion do you think would survive the shock? Would it be hate, or envy, or ambition or the love of gain? Oh no; of all the passions that animate the human breast, the one to endure would be love. There would be a rush to grasp love's final opportunity. Mothers would gather children about them, and there would be no impatience, no putting aside of bothering little arms, no withholding of caresses because they disarrange hair or lace. There would be no lack of knowledge as to where the girls are in the evenings or at train time, when the depot is swarming with lovers. Indifferent husbands and nagging, bickering wives would forego their coldness and their quarreling to vie with each other to redeem the past during the brief time allotted them. Friends would be more faithful, lovers more true, associates more thoughtful of each other's comforts as the swift hours sped away. But we need no bulletin from heaven to acquaint us with the briefness of love's opportunity. The span of our day is already set, and we wonder if the thought of home to us may not quicken us to improve the chance to brighten our homes with the full and constant shining of love that is in our hearts, although dimmed and corroded by the sordid environments of life.

I desire to say to the readers of the Times that I have the LARGEST AND BEST STOCK OF GOODS,
I over bought, and I do not think I claim too much when I say that I have the largest stock that can be found in any country store. I haven't space to mention everything, in fact I have always thought that too much "thinness" was not the best. Seeing is believing, and I cordially invite all to come and see for themselves. Until Nov. 1st I will make some very low prices. Remember that I did not buy these goods to keep.
