

WILSON STANDS ON HIS RECORD

Josephus Daniels of Democratic National Convention Wants Voters to Make an Investigation.

WILL WIN LEGION OF FRIENDS

Slander is Not to Play a Part in Democratic Campaign, Declares Publishing Chairman.

New York, Sept. 6.—Josephus Daniels, Chairman of the Publishing Committee of the Democratic National Convention, said today:

"Eight years ago today, the presidential campaign of 1904 came to New York and being a member of the Democratic National Committee I dropped in at the headquarters of the committee. I found the literary bureau of the committee very actively engaged in preparing the volumes of Theodore Roosevelt. When I saw on every desk 'The Winning of the West,' 'The Life of Thomas H. Benton,' and a half dozen others of the works of the late republican nominee for President, I wondered whether or not I had gotten into the right place. I was immediately not right, however, when I was informed that the literary papers men were engaged in culled from these books some of the many denunciations and bitter criticisms and attacks made by Theodore Roosevelt upon white men and measures, and the Democrats upon great representative bodies of our people, such as Washington and Lincoln."

"I found them preparing to send forth throughout all over the land such excerpts from the writings of Theodore Roosevelt as:

"Whoever ever caught a negro follows and denounces a negro, is a small farmer or an agricultural laborer; nor are the mechanic and workmen of a great city to be mentioned in the same breath."

"The negro and his adherents have appealed to the basest set in the land,—the farmers."

"They (white men) who object to government by legislation are not in sympathy with the good things and sound ideas of the nation."

"They stood firm when it came about the Quakers, that those who would not fight were traitors to their country."

"They said that when the farmers and workmen and the Quakers came to know what Theodore Roosevelt had written about them they would rise up with wrath and indignation and bury Theodore Roosevelt beneath an avalanche of votes. They said that Roosevelt would not appear that exposure of his views, and, of course, he never did. I acted with them that it was the proper thing to do to herald these utterances through the country."

"As to whether or not that sort of campaigning had any effect, the result of the campaign eight years ago speaks for itself."

"The republican party is attempting to do to-day the same sort of thing that the Democrats did in 1904. The Democrats out-organized Mr. Roosevelt. They were eight years ahead of him in this sort of thing. It didn't work with us then and it will not work with them now."

Stands on Record.

"The attempt to attack Gov. Wilson because of certain statements which he made in writing history and in commenting upon events of history is an attempt to smear him as a historian, and will fail miserably. As one great metropolitan newspaper pointed out, Mr. Roosevelt and his kind are simply 'blowing against the wind.' Governor Wilson is standing for President on his record as a public man, and with that record the public is fully well conversant, and it will continue to learn more as the campaign progresses."

"It is wrong for President on his record as Governor of New Jersey, what he said and did in that capacity rather than what he wrote as a historian, chronicle, or newspaper editor, upon them as they appeared to an impartial observer whose duty it is to write of things as they are rather than as they should be or as he would have them."

"Our republican brethren are entitled to all the smears they can make out of Governor Wilson's writings. I hope they will send them rapidly and cheerfully. They will be able to get a great deal of valuable information and when the contest is read along with the accounts which have been taken from his words for the purpose of smearing him in a false light, I have no fear as to the result. All that is needed is a thorough understanding."

"Historians ought to disprove white truths and to show how they are by the same methods which the republicans are seeking to smear Gov. Wilson."

WOODROW WILSON Scholar and Statesman, Democratic Candidate for President.

TARIFF HAS NOT HELPED FARMERS

Senator Gardner Gives Reason For Supporting Wilson.

NOW IS TIME FOR REWARD

Too Long Have They Been Fought by Fading Gods—Clinging to Democracy's Banners.

The reasons why those engaged in agricultural pursuits should support Governor Woodrow Wilson for President are strongly set forth by Senator Obediah Gardner of Maine, in an address to farmers.

Senator Gardner is a practical farmer, one who farms his own farm, and he is probably in closer touch and sympathy with country life and its environments than any other man in public life.

For twenty-five years Senator Gardner has been actively interested in the National Grange and for ten years he was the master of the State Grange of Maine. A few years ago he came within a close margin of being elected Governor of the Pine Tree State.

A little less than a year ago, when Senator Frye, who had represented Maine in the Senate for thirty years, died, Governor Pleasant honored Mr. Gardner, and recognized the agricultural interests of the country by appointing him to the United States Senate, where he has made a most creditable record, devoting particular attention to the welfare of the great rural population of the country. He is now a candidate for re-election and will undoubtedly be successful.

In his address Senator Gardner says:

To the Farmers of the United States, Greeting: Being one of you and for the greater part of my life having been engaged in the practical every-day business of my own farm, having seen the results and actually been a member of the boards of agriculture and the National and State Granges, having served four years as second master of the National Grange and as master of the State Grange for ten years during which time the order is being reformed, and the details of agriculture and industry never held before, I feel as if in a position to speak from the standpoint of one who knows the facts and who is not supposed to address you.

For many seasons have I just complained of being required to pull at the short end of the rope because of unfair and unjust discriminations in taxation and transportation and at the present time the farmers are charged with being the cause of the high cost of living when as a matter of fact the world where the amount invested in their business, the hours devoted to hard labor, and everything connected with the raising of agricultural life—they are, as a whole, the poorest paid class of people in this country, while relatively the most important.

Farmers Have Been Deceived.

During all recent years farmers have been told that a great blessing had been their throats, the so-called protective tariff, and yet to find a market for their principal crops they have had to compete in the market of the world where the price is fixed. But suddenly it is discovered that the farmer is the sole cause for the high cost of living, and what happens? The President (Mr. Taft) with a total disregard for the interests of the farmers, attempts a plan to open up to competition with the products of the United States the products of Canada while being agreed to preserve the tariff, or more correctly speaking, to protect all the farmer has to buy, which as clearly as anything can, opposes the hypocrisy and "double-dealing" of the claims that the tariff is an essential to agricultural as compared with manufactured products.

Now, the farmers of this country have an opportunity to benefit themselves that has never appeared within my recollection, as the Democratic party has been compelled by the force of public opinion to nominate a man for the presidency who is best equipped for that high office of any that have been nominated or elected since Lincoln. A man that is free of from a personal acquaintance with and a knowledge of his fitness; a man of great natural ability, whose only education, not theoretically but practically, a keenness of intellect, remarkable for its grasp of every condition with which he is confronted; an insatiable courage to go right; and above all a great broad-sounding heart with an ever-all-dominant will make one of the most successful Presidents ever in the White House, and through whom none will be refused a hearing, however humble, nor fail to receive justice at his hands. He is truly a marvelous man and I wish every person in the United States could know him as I know him, and appreciate all the good qualities in the addition that his home is one of perfect balance.

None can meet the splendid Mrs. Wilson and her three refined, cultured daughters with their perfect naturalness, but must feel that the whole family of Woodrow Wilson was especially prepared to fill a great need in the present crisis in the history of our country, as were Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln, and I would advise the farmers upon my reputation as a man, if you want to protect your own interests and those of your families; if you want to render the greatest possible good to your country and future generations; if you want to contribute your part to the end that popular government under God shall not perish from the earth, then see that the Hon. Woodrow Wilson is elected President.

O. GARDNER.

MRS. MARSHALL.

In sympathy with hers. Ours is not a one-sided life. We have been partners, and that's the way it should be in this world."

Mrs. Marshall has watched over his administration of the affairs of Indiana with a jealous care. There has been nothing of the spectacular in his administration. It has been a sane, steady, and consistent.

Continued on Page 6.

MRS. TOM'S PART IN THE ELECTION

Governor Marshall's Wife Has the Memory for Names.

ROMANCE OF THEIR LIVES

The Notification of the Indiana Executive-For Democratic Vice Presidency Honors a Record Breaker.

By J. C. HAMMOND, Of Democratic National Publishing Bureau.

Indianapolis.—Just about the time that thousands of friends of Governor Thomas Riley Marshall were anxiously waiting to shake his hand in congratulation on his acceptance as candidate for vice president on the Democratic ticket, a smiling woman stepped before him, and if one could have heard what she whispered in his ear it would have been something like "Now, hurry in, Tom, and change your clothes."

And Tom Marshall forgot to shake hands with the enthusiastic friends until he had carried out the orders of Mrs. Tom.

Indiana has honored four of her sons as vice presidential candidates on the Democratic ticket, but the crowds that gathering on Tuesday were the greatest in the history of the party.

THOMAS R. MARSHALL greeted Governor Marshall in the big coliseum in the state fair grounds.

The spot wanted to show the east what could be done in notification honors, and while Mrs. Marshall was happy, of course, over the honors for her husband, she was also worried, for her husband comes mighty close to being father, husband, son and partner all in one. And when a woman has that combination on her hands to care for she has every right to be worried.

Governor Marshall will never gain any honors as a hammer thrower. His is not built that way.

While all the country was reading the vigorous words of Governor Marshall which told the voters what he expects Democracy to do in carrying out the pledges for the next four years it's worth while to know what part a woman is taking in the affairs of the campaign—how Tom Marshall happens to be in the position in which he stands today.

The good people of Columbia City, Ind., never thought Thomas Riley Marshall was a "marrying man." For forty years he had lived with his parents, nursing both his father and mother, who were invalids, which was the reason Governor Marshall was not a marrying man. He felt his first duty was to his parents.

Meeting Mrs. Marshall.

After the death of his parents Governor Marshall dived deeper into his law practice, and one day an urgent case took him to Angola, Ind. His duties called him to the county clerk's office, and there he met Miss Lois Kinsey, daughter of the county clerk, who was assisting her father in the office.

From that day Governor Marshall had more business around the county clerk's office in Angola than any lawyer in half a dozen nearby counties.

Governor Marshall was forty-two years of age when he was married, Mrs. Marshall being nearly twenty years his junior.

The Marshalls had been married only a few weeks when the future vice president was called to an adjoining county on a case that would consume some five or six weeks of his time.

"Now, I did not want to be starting off like that," Governor Marshall explained to a friend one day, "so I just told Mrs. Marshall that I thought she should go along. And she did."

Since then Governor Marshall has never made a trip without Mrs. Marshall going along. They have traveled all over the country together; they go to banquets and political meetings together until the friends of the Indiana executive refer to him, and his wife as the "parade."

not of the most vigorous type.

"When he gets into a political battle he forgets his weakness. He gives all that is in him, and that will tell on any man. Mrs. Marshall soon discovered that the governor would become heated in making a speech and the next day his voice would be hoarse. She decided that he had better give up some of the handshaking and take care of his health first. So when you find him making a speech, when he has finished he does not stay around to hear the applause of the audience. Rather, he hurries to his room and changes his clothing.

"Some people have said that Tom Marshall is not a handshaking politician. He is not. His wife thinks it is more important to guard his health than to carry out the old time policy, and she is correct, as she is in most all other things."

"Home Air" Prevails.

The Marshall home is typical of the mistress. It is a home of books, and still one does not feel "bookish." One of the Marshall friends said he always felt like eating when he entered the Marshall home in Columbia City or the executive mansion at Indianapolis.

Mrs. Marshall believes in a home first, and the "home air" prevails.

"If Governor Marshall ever occupied the White House people would not know that historic institution," declares an admirer. "Mrs. Marshall would have it a real home. People would feel comfortable even in the midst of the gold and glitter."

But it is not only as a wife and the mistress of a home that Mrs. Marshall shows her ability. She is a politician and a clever one. She also has a remarkable memory.

Governor Marshall has earned the reputation of being in a class of story tellers all by himself. He can remember stories, but he forgets names. A name is something to be cast aside with Governor Marshall, and this is one of the regrets of his life, if he has any regrets. The governor is not a worrying man. He is somewhat a fatalist, but if he could he would like to remember names; but, not having that ability, he does not worry, for Mrs. Marshall is the name rememberer of the family.

She has a peculiar ability along this line. Not only does she remember the last name, but any combination of names comes as second nature to her, and she carries this ability on down to the children and cousins of any one seeking the governor.

While the governor is shaking hands and trying to remember whether his caller is Jones or Smith, Mrs. Marshall is busy supplying the information and asking about all the relatives.

Ideal Partners.

Governor Marshall has two brothers or sisters, and his parents being dead leaves him somewhat business of activities.

Governor Marshall's friends are enthusiastic over his home life. When he has started on talking of his wife a new light in the Hoosier executive comes to the surface.

They come near being ideal married partners.

"I was talking to Tom one day," explained one of his most intimate friends. "We were leaning back, and Tom had been telling some of his good stories to illustrate various topics of our conversation. We were waiting for Mrs. Marshall to come back from a shopping tour, and I happened to remark that I liked Mrs. Marshall better every time I met her."

"Well, now that's the way she strikes me, Jim," he said, "We have been married some sixteen years, and as time goes that is a long or short period, just as you think. To me it is but a fleeting day. Then I think back over my married life and find I have grown to know Mrs. Marshall better every day. A man must not only love but he must also respect his partner in this life—respect her in all things. She must have wonderful qualities to make the love and respect grow deeper and better each day. That's been my history."

"The fact that Mrs. Marshall has been in sympathy in my work, my play, my life, is good. But I have been

MRS. MARSHALL.

In sympathy with hers. Ours is not a one-sided life. We have been partners, and that's the way it should be in this world."

Mrs. Marshall has watched over his administration of the affairs of Indiana with a jealous care. There has been nothing of the spectacular in his administration. It has been a sane, steady, and consistent.