The Home Circle Column

A HOME SNUGGERY.

There should always be one spot in the home sacred to the best interests of the family. A room full of comfort, where the sofa is made to lounge on, and the chairs to tilt back, and the carpet to dig the toes in; where bills and bickerings are alike forbidden, and the straight laced property of the dining room or parlor can be abandoned for romps and story telling; where the dust doesn't show and nothing is too fine to use, and at whose door all the burdens drop off as they will some time at the gate of heaven--a room whose speech is silver and whose silence is golden--where the tranquility of a summer Sabbath is broken only by sweet murmurs of love and confidence, where a happy cat curls herself to repose in blissful affinity with the peaceful house dog, a place where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest. A sort of moral lean-to which adjoins the house beautiful. Here Jacob's ladder is planted, and angels ascending and descending bring with them endless measures of peace.

Every home should have this one place of retreat.

It is no possible place. Love is the architect; content its atmosphere. We find it in our friends' homes, often where least expected, and are surprised because it is never a show place. It is simply a golden room in a wooden house.

Fashion kills more women than toil and sorrow. Obedience to fashion is a greater transgression of the laws of woman's nature, a greater injury to her physical and mental condition, than poverty and neglect. The slave woman at her task will live and grow old and see two or three generations of her mistresses fade and pass away. The washer-woman, with scarce a ray of hope to cheer her in her toil, will live to see her fashionable sisters die and be buried. The kitchen-maid is healthy and strong when her lady has been nursed like a sick baby. It is the sad truth that fashion-pampered women are almost worthless for all the ends of human life; they have but little force of character; they have still less power of moral will, and quite as little physical energy. They live for no great purpose in life, they accomplish no worthy ends. They are only doll forms in the hands of milliners and servants, to be dressed and fed to order. They write no books, they set no virtuous examples of rich and womanly life. If they rear children, nurses and servants do all save give them birth, and when reared, what are they? What do they ever amount to but weak scions of the old stock? Who ever heard of a fashionable woman's child exhibiting any virtue of power of mind for which it became eminent? Read the biographies of great and good men and women. Not one of them had a fashionable mother. They nearly all sprung from strong minded women, who had about as little to do with fashions as the changing clouds. The trite saying, "A man may say too much, even on the best of subjects," will answer here.

The sunbeam is composed of millions of minute rays; so home-light must be constituted of little tenderness, kindly looks, sweet laughter and loving words.

Stories first heard at mother's knee are never forgotten. It is the same with some other things received at our mother's knee which will readily occur to our readers.

Don't you see a good many pale girls in your stores, girls with bloodless, half baked sort of faces, whose walk, whose voice, whose whole expression is void of spirit and force? Those girls are in the green state. Send them out in the country; let them throw away their parasols and live out in the sunshine for three months, and we would give more for one of them in any work requiring spirit than for a dozen of the pale things who live in the shade. The girls with red cheeks and sweet smiles are only girls who become pale and bloodless, and those who are themselves fully in the sunshine.
