WOODROW WILSON.

Born in 28th President of the United States.

THOMAS R. MARSHALL.

The New Vice President of the United States.

Slowly the chief justice repeated the oath as it is prescribed by the constitution:

"I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and will to the best of my ability preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States."

Word for word, in the same slow measure set by the solemn chief justice, the oath was repeated by Woodrow Wilson.

This was the transition from president-elect to president. The nation now had a new chief executive and the government had passed from Republican to Democrat.

With the closing words of the oath a presidential salute of twenty-one guns boomed out the news that a new chief executive had been inaugurated.

President Wilson at once began his inaugural address, again being roundly cheered as he stepped slightly forward to speak.

The presidential party were then escorted to the White House, where luncheon was served, shortly after which Mr. Taft said goodby to Mr. Wilson and left with Mrs. Taft for Augusta, Ga.

President Wilson Reviews Parade.

The army of inauguration, 30,000 strong, swinging with measured tread to the blare of a brigade of bands, marched in review from the capitol to the White House, a magnificent tribute of welcome to the administration of Woodrow Wilson.

High on either side of the avenue, its buildings and reviewing stands were packed with humanity, rising from the solid masses along the curbs to the dense throngs in balconies, windows and store tops. And through this valley of humanity and color a martial host undulated and rolled along with the steady sweep of a great river.

As the procession took up the march, the noted Essex troop, of New Jersey, swung in behind the carriage in which President Wilson and former President Taft rode. Then came Vice President Marshall's carriage and behind that the Black Horse troop, of Culver Military academy, prancing and bowing to the lively music. A roar of welcome opened up before this whole party as it started and swept along behind it.

Then came Major General Wood, chief of staff of the army, and grand marshal of the military bodies. Then the army contingent, headed by the West Point cadets: long straight lines of gray facing the avenue, each line stepping as one man, heads up, chests high, plumes aflutter, rifle barrels glistening. An ovation greeted them.

Tramping close behind came the First Battalion of Army Engineers, the Seventeenth United States Infantry and band from Fort McPherson, Ga., and a regiment of coast artillery from Fort Monroe. The crack Seventh, in full marching order, a solid column of full dress service blue, swinging easily to the lively music of their band, made a splendid appearance.

Commanding no less interest than the West Point cadets came the midshipmen from Annapolis. In their regulation short navy blue jackets and tan leggings, the young sailors were received with waves of cheers.

Then marched the second division, made up of national guard details, Delaware's troops led, headed by the governor and his staff, New Jersey—President Wilson's own state—sent its entire organized militia establishment, including its battalion of naval reserves.

In line came the state troops of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Maryland, Georgia, Connecticut, Virginia, North Carolina, Rhode Island, Maine, Michigan, Ohio and other states.

Indians a Striking Feature.

Gadets from the Carlisle Indian school in their uniforms of cadet blue, were a subject of remark in contrast with the remnants of their ancestors, who arched wrapped in multi-colored blankets and in full feathers about the parade.

Cadet battalions from the Virginia

Military institute and Culver Military academy brought up the rear of that section.

The third division, made up of veteran and patriotic organizations, was suggestive of the fast diminishing ranks of the veterans of the north and south. Both sections were represented, the nearby northern states and the District of Columbia furnishing the larger number of men in blue, with here and there the men in gray mingling with their former adversaries.

The fourth grand division, composed of civic bodies, was probably the most diverse of all. Two hundred cowboys and Indians from Maricopa county, Arizona, performed a perfect wild west show along the line of march, throwing lariats, giving exhibitions of trick riding and broncho busting.

Tammany Hall, 1500 strong, headed by two bands, each "brave" topped with a pure white silk beaver, and carrying a red, white and blue umbrella, accompanied by thirty-five "real" Indians in full tribal regalia, was marching at the inauguration of the first Democratic president in twenty years.
