Vocational Education in the Schools. In the May issue of Lippincott's, Colonel Willard French pleads for the establishment of regular courses in agriculture, in mechanics, and in home economics, in the lower grades of our public schools. The article entime." Common Sense in Education."

"There is an more serious problem before the America: people than that of maintaining the " !! !! brium betweer urban and rural Me. including as i. does the maintenan e of equilicon umption." says Colone' French.
'We have been nugging the delusion that we were producing unto d weeking from the never-falling resources of our great farme, while in reality we were only taking nature stimulants from virgin soil and selling them in the form of cereals. Our farmers, paying no attention to the science of farming, which requires the restoration of the ingredients of which they have been so prodigal, find production less and less profitable. They pronounce farming a failure, and it is little wonder that their boys flock to the cities.

"Other nations have long since taken the matter in hand and have not only vied with us in our Agricultural department to solve the mysteries of the science of agriculture, but have forced upon the farmers the information obtained and placed it in the curriculum of the schools. In Germany, for example, with an area no larger than the States of Iowa, Minnesota and Missouri, and where the land has been under forced civilization for centuries, the farms produce more than half as much oats, almost as much bops, almost as much barley, three times as much sugar, six times as many? potatoes, and nine times as much rye as we produce in the entire United States. In 1907 Germany had 43,000,000 acres planted with wheat, rye, oats, barley and potatoes, and harvested three billion bushels. The same year we had 88,500,000 acres, more than twice as much land, planted with the same crops, but we harvested only one billion five hundred and seventy-five million bushelshardly more than half as much. Now, if our farmers had obtained the same yield per acre as was obtained by the German farmers, we should have been better off by one billion four hundred million dollars in the yield of 1907. In Germany every boy, even the sons of the Emperor, must learn a trade as a part of his education. "France is the size of our three great wheat-producing States-Kan-Minnesota and North Dakota. In 1907 these three States and France sowed, each 16,000,000 acres to wheat, The French farmer harveste 040,000, bushels our farmers 188,000,000 hly a little more half as much. One hundred and ty-seven million dollars m same amount of land and the same crop! There are forty-five thousand agricultural schools in France.

"There is no better soil in the world than ours. There is no better agricultural climate than ours. But the nations of Europe raise from two to three times more per acre than we do, because the most productive thing in the world is practical intlligence properly applied.

"It rests with us 's supply the necbring between food production and land truly prosperous. We take Lettle more unoccasion and to exploit. We must increase the yield of our present acres or become a food-producing notio".. The slipshod, wasteful methods which we have been following must te stopped or the high cost of living will overwhelm us-and the remedy can come only through practical education. Agriculture is but one of the branches which we should introduce. The benefits from the rest are just obvious.

"We are taking excellent care of 1.71 per cent. of our children, in colleges and universities. We take tolcrable care of 5.31 per cent. who go through high schools. But there are left 92 per cent. who never pass beyond the elementary grades, the very ones who must quickly depend upon what they know to begin earning a living, who are practically deprived of any possibility of obtaining hints for vocational o industrial lives. They are deprived of what the nation owes them in self-defense, anud our standard of citizenship is lowered as the result.

HAUNTED.

Sounds Funny.

A writer in Mother's Magazine de clares "a man cannot put his best energies into business all day and care for the baby even part o fthe night." That sounds funny to middle-aged men who pleasantly recall about ten miles per night and twelve hours of hard work the following day. The young fathers of this time must be sissified.—Houston Post.
