STATEMENT OF PRESIDENT ON REQUEST OF SHOPMEN

 cess or failure, it will of course be necessary to accept the higher costs of living as a permanent basis of adjustment, and railway wages should be readjusted along with the rest. All that I am now urging is, that we should not be guilty of the inexcusable inconsistency of making general increases in wages on the assumption that the present cost of living will be permanent at the very time that we are trying with great confidence to reduce the cost of living and are able to say that it is actually beginning to fall.
 I am aware that railway employees have a sense of insecurity as to the future of the railroads and have many misgivings as to whether their interests will be properly safeguarded when the present form of Federal control has come to an end. No doubt it is in part this sense of uncertainty that prompts them to insist that their wage interests be adjusted now rather than under conditions which they cannot certainly foresee. But I do not think that their uneasiness is well grounded. I anticipate that legislation dealing with the future of the railroads will in explicit terms afford adequate protection for the interests of the employees of the roads, but quite apart from that, it is clear that no legislation can make the railways other than what they are, a great public interest, and it is not likely that the president of the United States, whether in possession and control of the railroads or not, will lack opportunity or persuasive force to influence the decision of questions arising between the managers of the railroads and the railway employees. The employees may rest assured that, during my term of office, whether I am in actual possession of the railroads or not, I shall not fail to exert the full influence of the executive to see that justice is done them. I believe, therefore, that they may be justified in the confidence that hearty co-operation with the government now in its efforts to reduce the cost of living will by no means be prejudicial to their own interests, but will on the contrary prepare the way for more favorable and satisfactory relations in the future. I confidently count on their co-operation in this time of national test and crisis.

Come to see us before buying. We have it—"Everything for Everybody."
THE ALLEN BROTHERS COMPANY.

FIRE ALARM.

The fire alarm Wednesday evening was caused from a pile of trash burning in the back yard of Mr. W. N. Fuller on West Middle Street. The fire department answered promptly, but found no real trouble.

MILLINERY

The Allen Brothers Company is much pleased to announce in connection with the Fall Season's Display that Mrs. Julia Scott will be in charge of the Millinery Department and will show New York's latest in chic millinery.

We are having specialized hats at specialized prices, for there is Millinery Luxury without Extravagance. We have the very smartest new conceptions in snappy shapes and color combinations that strike an absolutely new note. Isn't it natural that the store selling the most hats would carry the largest assortment? Then REMEMBER, that we will certainly show you just what you wish.
