A CASH RESERVE

Like a good-business man, the farmer must keep his surplus money in such shape that it will be available when wanted in his business.

A most satisfactory plan is to invest surplus funds in Interest Earning Certificates of Deposit, to earn a safe rate of interest for a stated number of months.

Thus, farm profits and surplus funds are in the form of an invested reserve, that can be turned into one at a moments notice.

Interest Earning Certificates are issued at any time for the amount you wish to invest, and the money begins to earn interest from the date of your deposit.

It is a good plan for every farmer to keep in reserve some capital that is instantly available when needed for times when ready money will close a deal with profit, or otherwise advance his interests.

We would be glad to talk over with you in detail this plan of building and maintaining a farm reserve profitably invested.

Our crop of presidential possibilities are becoming wonderfully solicitous of the welfare of the people. If we thought it would only last we'd recommend that every dabbled citizen get into the race.

This is the time of year when the overly economical young man quarrels with his best girl—until after Christmas.
