man Hiram. He had money in the bank. He was decently dressed. People had begun to respect him. Every day, Hiram was being nudged and worried by a new thought. It persisted in telling him that respectability was like the Fourth of Julya very dull thing unless it was cele-brated. He had been greatly pleased with his own growing respectability. He felt as if he wanted to take a look at it, from a distance, as it were. That inoney in the bank was nudging and calling him. It seemed to be lonely and longing for companionship, "Come, Hiram Blenkinsop," it used to say. "Let's be off together and get a slik hat and a gold-headed cane an' make 'em set up and take notice. Suppose you should die sud-den an' leave me without an owner?"

The warmth and joy of the springtime had turned his fancy to the old So one day, he converted his bank balance into "a roll big enough to choke a dog," and took the early morning train to Hazelmead, having left Christmas at the Widow Moran's. In the mill city he bought a high silk hat and a gold-headed cane and a new suit of clothes and a boiled shirt and a high collar and a red necktie. It didn't matter to him that the fashion and fit of his g were not quite in keeping with the sllk hat and gold-headed cane. There were three other items in the old dream of splendor-the mother, the prancing team, and the envious re-marks of the onlookers. His mother was gone. Also there were no pranc-ing horses in Hazelmead, but he could hire an automobile.

In the course of his celebration he asked a lady whom he met in the street, if she would kindly be his mother for a day. He meant well but the lady being younger than Hiram and not accustomed to such familiarity from strangers, did not feel complimented by the question. They fled from each other. Soon, Hiram bought a big custard pie in a bake-shop and had it cut into smallish pieces and, having purchased pie and plate, went out upon the street with it. He ate what he wanted of the pie and generously offered the rest of it to sundry people who passed him. It was not impertinence in Hiram; it was pure generosity-a de-sire to share his riches, flavored, in some degree, by a feeling of vanity. It happened that Mr. J. Patterson Bing came along and received a tender of pie from Mr. Blenkinsop. "No !" said Mr. Bing, with that old hammer whack in his voice which aroused bitter memories in the mind of Hiram.

That tone was a great piece of im-There was a menacing prudence. gesture and a rapid succession of footsteps on the pavement, Mr. Bing's retreat was not, however, quite swift enough to save him. The ple landed on his shoulder. In a moment, Hiram was arrested and marching toward the lockup while Mr. Bing went to the nearest drug store to be cleaned and scoured.

A few days later Hiram Blenkinsop arrived in Bingville. Mr. Singleton met him on the street and saw to his deep regret that Hiram had been drinking.

Just as an example of the time and money the LALLEY LIGHT will save you: -

> A milking machine operated by the power from the LALLEY will milk seven cows in the time it takes you to milk one by hand.

We could go right on down the line and show you how the LALLEY Plant is a money making plant, as well as a lighting plant.

For instance: It supplies power in plenty to pump water, beat the irons, run the washing machines, sewing machine vacuum sweeper, cream separator, churn, fanning mill, grind stone, emery wheel, etc., etc.

So, if the old saying, "time is money" is true—if this old "saw" means anything, the LALLEY LIGHT means real dollars and cents in your pocket.

And we want to impress upon your mind the fact, that the LALLEY LIGHT does all this money-saving work better because it has been tested and perfected through ten year's of actual owner use.

We want the opportunity to show you personally just how and why the LALLEY "Does More—Does it Better."

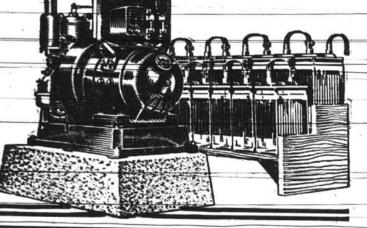

We know that if we could demonstrate to you these facts there never uld be any doubt in your mind as to "Which Plant." Come in-make a point to estas and The First Noel, which Miss Betsy Singleton had taught him at Christmas time.

All this is important as showing how a poor lad, of a lively imagination was wont to spend his lonely hours. He needed company and knew how to find it.

Christmas day, Judge Crooker had presented him with a beautiful copy of Raphael's Madonna and Child.

"It's the greatest theme and the greatest picture this poor world of ours can boast of," said the judge. "I want you to study the look in that mother's face, not that it is unusual. have seen the like of it a hundred times. Almost every young mother with a child in her arms has that look or ought to have it-the most beautiful and mysterious thing in the world. The light of that old star which led the wise men is in it, b sometimes think. Study it and you may hear voices in the sky as did the shepherds of old."

So the boy acquired the companionship of those divine faces that looked down at him from the wall near his bed and had something to say to him every day.

Also, another friend-a very humble one-had begun to share his confi-dence. He was the little yellow dog, Christmas. He had come with his master, one evening in March, to spend a night with the sick Shepherd. bristmas had lain the foot of bed and felt the loving caress of the The heart of the world, that boy. loves above all things the touch of a kindly hand, was in this little creature. Often, when Hiram was walking out in the bitter winds, Christmas would edge away when his master's back was turned. In a jiffy, he was out of sight and making with all haste for the door of the Widow Moran. There, he never failed to re cove some token of the generous woman's understanding of the grad need of dogs-a bone or a doughnut or a slice of bread soaked in meat gravy-and a warm welcome from the boy above stairs. The boy always had time to pet him and play with him. He was never fooling the days away with an ax and a saw in the cold wind. Christmas admired his mast er's ability to pick up logs of wood and heave them about and to make a great deal of noise with an axe but, in cold weather, all that was a bore to him. When he had been missing, Hiram Blenkinsop found him, al-Produce.
