Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER FALSE VANITY'S FORTUNES.

Master Thoughtfulness knew quite well that the boy and the girl adventurers would not let old Madame False Vanity fool them.

He sang to himself as he thought of what a joke it would be. She would soon see she couldn't.

"First," said Madame False Vanity, "I will tell the beautiful young girl's fortune."

She stopped looking at herself in the pool and looked at the girl, reaching out for her hand.

The girl gave Madame False Vanity her hand and looked at her. She seemed to look more artificial than ever, her hair looked as though she had dyed it, and her face looked as though she had painted it with a brush.

"Gaze into the pool," said Madame False Vanity.

The girl gazed into the pool and she looked quite different.

"Hear what she has to say," whispered Master Thoughtfulness, "but don't believe any of it, for she is a dreadful creature for not telling the truth. She likes everything that is false. And she does a great deal of harm. You'll see."

"Are you talking about me?" asked Madame False Vanity of Master Thoughtfulness. "You're such a thoughtful soul that you are probably warning this boy and girl not to believe me."

"Now, what is the use of that, Master Thoughtfulness?"

"Why not let them get all the fun they can by believing they're beautiful and lovely and fine, and that they will be rich and splendid and noble."

"Ah," said Master Thoughtfulness, "you have seen that you couldn't fool this boy and this girl, and so for one of the few times in your fortune-telling life you've been quite honest."

"You tell fortunes to people, and make false promises. You tell them they will surely be fine and splendid and beautiful and brave. You flatter them. You make them vain. You keep them from having any ambition. That is one of the worst things about you."

"I don't really look at all like I look in this pool," said the girl. "It makes me look different. Madame False Vanity has her pool into which she makes folks look away from the bright sunshine. She knows there is nothing false about the sunshine, and that she can't fool with it. Madame False Vanity looked at the girl and sighed. "You believe Master Thoughtfulness and you won't believe False Vanity, though I will give you lots of happiness and false delight over false and unreal promises. I will save you from doing anything that is hard. You need only think you are fine."

"Isn't it fine," said Master Thoughtfulness to himself, "that this boy and this girl can't be influenced by False Vanity? Sometimes, no matter what I say, her manner and her way makes folks do as she says, and then they go on through their days and nights putting themselves on the back and saying that they're wonderful, when they're not in the least, and when they're making no effort to improve themselves."

"Here, boy, let me tell your fortune," said Madame False Vanity. "I like boys, for boys will be great, successful men, and they will be popular and they will be handsome."

"Oh, ho," laughed the boy, "did I ever hear such nonsense in all my life."

"I don't believe I brought very good customers to you today," said Master Thoughtfulness.

"I do not mind," said Madame False Vanity. "I'm kept busy enough, and boys and girls don't make such good customers nowadays. They don't have much faith in me."

"Good-by, then," said Master Thoughtfulness, and the boy and the girl called out their good-bys, too.

He Should Be a Diplomat. Three boys were sitting on a fence. One was eating an apple. One of the other boys said, "Gimme a hunk of your apple." "I would if you hadn't asked me," replied the apple eater calmly.

In a short while the third lad spoke up hopefully, saying, "Well, I never asked you, did I?" "Nope," replied the owner of the apple, swallowing the last of it in one mouthful, "you didn't ask me for any, so I s'posed you didn't want any."

THE QUEEN OF MAY.

Just within the gates of the campus green, While the sun was drinking the morning dew,

Our eyes beheld a most lovely scene, It was the Queen of May passing thru.

In detail her raiment was most complete, And exceedingly pleasing to the eyes, Stylish, well fitted and extremely neat Yet not of the type called the butterfly.

Her visage eclipsed the clear rising sun, The tint of her cheeks, the flushing morn, Complexion, the lilies which never spun.

Her beauty, the fresh roses on the lawn.

She full blown yet in her tender spring With ease and grace hurried on her way.

The birds beheld and forgot to sing, So charmed were they with our Queen of May.

Perhaps St. Peter left ajar his gate, And she from just beyond its portals flew, The arch only reads Prohumanitate, Yet she though angel is welcome too.

We the lilies, roses and birds will wait For the morning post she may come again, We will welcome her at the campus gate, As ye do the sunshine which follows rain.
