President Harding and Cabinet have approved the treaty with Germany.

Information received in Louisburg yesterday stated that the quota for the sign-up of the Cotton Growers Association for North Carolina had been exceeded by over 30,000 bales and growers are still signing.

Sign-up today for Co-operative Marketing and get your neighbor to do likewise. The Campaign closes today. Get in the swim and be one of the Charter members of one of the greatest organizations in the world.

The ruling of Judge Bond in the Franklin County tax injunction case will no doubt be a surprise to some of the advocates who had their land values reduced below the forty per cent mark since this ruling will require all land brought up to as well as down to the forty per cent reduction.

The organization Committee of the North Carolina Tobacco Growers Association have given out the information that the point of uncertainty for the organization of this association has been passed and the organization is assured. Those growers signing the Tobacco Contract can rest assured that after this year they will not have to sell their tobacco again in an unbusiness-like way.

Doesn't it stand to reason that the manufacturers of cotton and tobacco will buy their stocks from the Associations where one man can buy their supply in a day, and where they can buy any day in the year, before they will enter into the open market at the expense of buyers at almost every little town? In that case the growers who are not members will have to carry the surplus or be last to sell.

For practically ten months that piece of road leading from Castalia via the old Sills place, Red Bud church, across Sandy Creek, on to Warrenton has been completed, but no progress seems to have been made in the erection of the bridge across Sandy Creek, thus putting this road in-use for the traveling public. Just why the State Highway Commission continues to delay the construction of the bridge is a matter much discussed by those who have been keeping their eye on the situation. -Nashville Graphic.

Judging from the above we assume that Editor Lincke of the Graphic has been misinformed. The real facts are the road through Franklin County including Sandy Creek bridge referred to, has been completed. This work has been done by experienced road and bridge men. The Warren end is now under construction, both road and bridges. It is the Nash end that needs attention. Our information is that the portion of this road leading into the road system in Nash county is being constructed by a farmer of Franklin County, whose knowledge of road building is limited to observation of other builders and is not being constructed in accordance with the State survey. This is intended as no reflection towards the Franklin county farmer, as we know him to be one of the County's most honest and straight forward men, however we don't think his knowledge of road building is sufficient for the job. The editor of the TIMES was at the Sandy Creek bridge over two months ago and the bridge was completed then and the road force was at work on the fills at the buttment. We would suggest to Editor Lincke to see what is the trouble with the Highway Commission and Nash county in regard to the Nash county end.

CEDAR ROCK HIGH SCHOOL.

The next session of Cedar Rock High School will begin on Monday, September 5th. Arrangements have been made for those who wish to secure room and board, and pupils from other districts wishing to enter High School will be welcome and admitted without charge for tuition. During the coming session the work of ten grades will be provided for.

Ralph: How about that $1,000,000 will case?
Gerald: Oh, they settled that to the satisfaction of the lawyers on both sides.

MERCHANT TELLS OF A REMARKABLE CASE

Writing from Maysville, Ga., A. J. Gillen, proprietor of a large department store at that place, says:
'I have a customer here who was in bed for three years and did not go to a meal at any time. She had five physicians and they gave her out. One bottle of Teacher got her up, on the second bottle she commenced keeping house and on the third she did all the cooking and housework for a family of eight.'
This sounds really incredible, but it comes attested from a highly creditable source and is copied verbatim from the paper.

FARMYARD PARTY.

"In the farmyard," said Daddy, "there was a party yesterday, because the day was so hot. And that party was a swimming party, as you may be able to guess."

"We went on a swimming party, too, yesterday," said Nancy. "And had swimming races," added Nick.

"Well, then," said Daddy, "you and some of the farmyard animals did much the same, though I suppose you swam differently from the way they did."

"Anyway, Sir David Duck was the one who got up the party."
"Quack, quack," he said, "this is mighty hot weather. I must do something about getting cool and I must invite the other animals to get cool, too, for I do not want to be selfish."

"Quack, quack, I do not want to be selfish."
"Sir David Duck invited all the other animals to his swimming party."
"He asked the Cows, and the Cows said, 'Yes, Sir David, we'll go wading. We're not so strong for swimming as we are for wading. Moo, moo, that is the truth.'"

"He asked the hens, and the hens said, 'Cackle, cackle, we thank you just the same, but we cannot accept. Swimming parties aren't parties that we care for, though we are grateful to you for thinking of us.'"

"He asked the roosters, and they said, 'Cock-a-doodle-do, We can't be with you.'"

"He asked the chickens, and their mothers called out quite excitedly, 'The little dears cannot go. They are too young. But it is good of you to think of them.'"

"He asked Porky Pig and Pinky Pig and Sammy Sausage and Brother Bacon, but they all said, 'Groot, groot, squeal, squeal, we don't care to be clean, and we will become cool if we take a nap in some cool mud which we have in our yard.'"

"If there are going to be refreshments, though, we will come in time for them."
"Well, you'd better come around later, then," said Sir David, "for there is no telling whether we'll have refreshments or not."

"It's worth a little walk to find out," said the pigs.
"We will be on hand or rather on foot, or rather on all feet, in plenty of time. And we will do justice to your food, so you had better have some."

"He asked Sir William Goat, but Sir William Goat said, 'Sorry, old chap, but I have an engagement with a linen waist that is hanging down too far from the clothes line.'"

"Whatever do you mean?" asked Sir David Duck. "Whatever do you mean?"
"I mean I expect to have a little party of my own," said Sir William Goat. "But I thank you for your kind invitation. Another time, perhaps, I may be able to accept."

"Sir David then saw Dash the dog, and asked him if he would come to the party, and Dash said, 'By all means, Sir David. Thank you kindly, how-how, I'll come gladly. I'll try not to get in the way, but will swim about and not interfere with anyone.'"

"So glad you can come," said Sir David, "quack, quack, I am so glad you can come," he said again, very politely.

"He asked Mrs. Indian Runner Duck, but she said, 'I'll try it for a bit but not for long, Sir David. I am grateful to you for the invitation, but I won't stay very long at the party. You know my family is different from yours in this way.'"

"He asked all of the other ducks then and there was the greatest noise after he had given his invitation ever you did hear!"

"Quack, quack, quack, quack, quack, quack, quack, quack, quack, quack, quack," said all the ducks, "why, Sir David, we would be delighted to come."
"Is it so good of you to give a party?"
"And the swimming party was a huge success, if some of the animals had refused their invitations!"
