COLORED GRADED SCHOOL.

Since taking charge of the school it has grown in number and interest.
We have enrolled up to Nov. 23rd, 318, with an average attendance of 185.
I feel very grateful to my white and colored friends for the interest they have taken in me and the school.
Our Supt., Prof. Mills has been very kind to us in every way.
I am teaching the children to be polite, industrious and studious.
We are very anxious to have cooking and sewing for the girls and some industrial training for our boys, that they may have some special aim in life and prepare themselves to make real men and women and at the same time to be useful citizens. I often say to the boys and girls under my care, always have some work to do and stay off the streets. I don't know anywhere in North Carolina that the white people have any more interest in the colored people than right here in Louisburg, and I want our white friends to know that we know our place and always appreciate what they do for us.

CHAPTER X
In Which the Hun Nation Decreases
by One.

ONE
Drummond had yielded to impulse the blind, all-powerful impulse of any man who is a man to get to the woman he loves if she wants him. As he had dashed across the lawn to The Elms, with the American's warning cry echoing in his ears, he had been incapable of serious thought. Subconsciously he had known that, from every point of view, it was the act of a madman, that he was deliberately putting his head into what, in all probability, was a carefully prepared poose; that, from every point of view, he could help Phyllis better by remaining a free agent outside. But when a girl shrieks, and the man who loves her hears it, arguments begin to look tired. And what little caution might have remained to Hugh completely vanished as he saw the girl watching him with agonized terror in her face, from an upstairs window, as he dashed up to the house. It was only for a brief second that he saw her; then she disappeared suddenly, as if snatched away by some invisible person.

"I'm coming, darling." He had given one wild shout, and hurled himself through the door which led into the house from the garden. A dazzling light of intense brilliance had shone in his face, momentarily blinding him; then had come a crushing blow on the back of his head. One groping, wild step forward, and Hugh Drummond, dimly conscious of men all around him, had pitched forward on his face into utter oblivion.
"It's too easy," Lakington's sneering voice broke the silence, as he looked vindictively at the unconscious man.
"So you have thought before, Henry," chuckled Peterson. "And he always bobs up somehow. If you take my advice you'll finish him off here and now, and run no further risks."
"Kill him while he's unconscious?" Lakington laughed evilly. "No, Carl, not under any circumstances whatever. He has quite a lengthy score to pay, and by God he's going to pay it this time." He stepped forward and kicked Drummond twice in the ribs with a cold, animal fury.
"Well, don't kick him when he's down, gov'nor. You'll 'ave plenty o' time after." A hoarse voice from the circle of men made Lakington look up.
"You cut it out, Jim Smith," he snarled, "or I might find plenty of time after for others beside this young swine." The ex-pugilist muttered uneasily under his breath, but said no more, and it was Peterson who broke the silence.
"What are you going to do with him?"
"Lash him up like the other two," returned Lakington, "and leave him to cool until I get back tomorrow.
But I'll bring him round before I go, and just talk to him for a little. I wouldn't like him not to know what was going to happen to him. Anticipation is always delightful." He turned to two of the men standing near. "Carry him into my room," he ordered, "and another of you get the rope."

And so it was that Algy Longworth and Toby Sinclair, with black rage and fury in their hearts, watched the limp form of their leader being carried into the central room. Swathed in rope, they sat motionless and impotent, in their respective chairs, while they watched the same process being performed on Drummond. He was no amateur at the game, was the rope-winder, and by the time he had finished, Hugh resembled nothing so much as a lifeless brown mummy.
Only his head was free, and that lolled forward helplessly.
Lakington watched the performance for a time; then, wearying of it, he stroiled over to Algy's chair.
"Well, you puppy," he remarked, "are you going to try shouting again?" He poked up the rhinoceros-hide riding-whip lying on the floor, and bent it between his hands. "That wale on your face greatly improves your beauty, and next time you'll get two, and a gag as well."
"How's the jaw, you horrible bit of dreg?" remarked Algy insultingly, and Toby laughed.
"Don't shake his nerve, Algy," he implored. "For the first time in his filthy life he feels safe in the same room as Hugh."
The taunt seemed to madden Lak-ington, who sprang across the room and lashed Sinclair over the face. But even after the sixth cut no sound came from the helpless man, though the blood was streaming down inside his collar. His eyes, calm and sneering, time."

For a moment it seemed as if Lak-himself; then he controlled himself, and, with an ugly laugh, flung the whip into a corner.

"I forgot," he said slowly. "It's the leading dog we want—not the puppies that run after him yapping." He spun round on his heel. "Have you fin-

The rope-artist bestowed a final touch to the last knot, and surveyed his handiwork with justifiable pride.
"Cold mutton," he remarked tersely,
"would be lively compared to him when he wakes up."

LIVED YEARS ON BREAD AND MILK

For More Than Decade Malady Of Alabama Woman Was Continually Sapping Her Strength.

Mrs. H. P. Barrett, of Republic, suburb of Birmingham, Ala., gives the facts of her remarkable experience with Tanlac as follows:
"During the past fourteen years I have spent more than one thousand dollars trying to get rid of a complaint that was gradually sapping my strength, but until I got hold of Tanlac nothing helped me. For the past four years I have lived almost entirely on milk and bread, and finally even that went against me.
"Before I had finished the first bottle of Tanlac I got so I could eat anything, and I certainly bless the day I first got this medicine for I believe it has added years to my life. The people in my neighborhood were so surprised at the change in me that fourteen of them by actual count are now taking Tanlac."
