With living costs seventy-five per cent above the pre-war level, a lot of people may well wonder where is their share of the profits that the United States is reputed to have made out of the war.—Boston Transcript.

The cost of living is still 75 per cent higher than it was before the war, according to the Department of Labor, but it isn't worth any more so far as we have been able to judge.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

COMBINED FABRICS SERVE THE THRIFTY SEAMSTRESS

FABRICS have traveled in pairs this season, and there are rumors that this vogue is to continue. Dresses and blouses, especially, reveal a happy union of two materials. Where there is not a combination of two different fabrics, there are likely to be two varieties of one fabric, or at least two contrasting colors used together. We find georgette crepe and pussy willow crepe in one frock—canton and crepe in another; taffeta, dotted Swiss, the crepe weaves and many other materials have all sought the companionship of organdie as a life partner—and so mated have called the summer vogue of fashion with great success.

It does not take thrifty seamstresses long to see the advantage in this vogue for combined materials and their wardrobes are amplified accordingly. Taking example from their rich relations, gingham have associated themselves with organdie and voile, cotton crepe and ratine take unto themselves mates, and two old dresses become one new one or a little new goods makes it possible for last year's dress to begin life anew. The two smart costumes pictured show combinations of two materials that may be carried out in either silk or cotton goods.

For the dress at the left, cotton kasha or plain gingham or fabrics of like character can be used for the plain underdress and ratine for the sleeveless jacket. One can imagine it in white or tan, with the jacket in blue, green, yellow or red. It could be prettily developed in white crepe de chine with black canton crepe.

Black and white, in the model at the right make a distinguished dress, but almost any color with white makes an ideal midsummer costume. White organdie, voile or crepe de chine, invite any of the light-weight materials in a color to bear them company and narrow braid in the same color is chosen for decoration.

Pretty Things that are made at Home

HOME makers and hostesses are making more and more use of paper for household decoration, as a substitute for linen and in many other ways. The list of things for which paper serves grows longer; even fancy dress costumes and military are made of it and recently there has been much experimenting with paper toys. Its place is established as a medium for making table decorations—lump and candle shades, social pieces, place cards and centerpieces. The summer hostess finds frequent use for these paper things, especially in the circles which concern the members of the younger set.

Centerpieces, nut cups and place cards, lamp and candle shades usually reflect the time of year and the occasion. A bluebird table set, as pictured here, is recommended for a birthday table, although it is appropriate for many other occasions as well. It includes a centerpiece covered with pink rose petals and having wire handles wound with pink crepe. They intersect at the top and are tied at this point with a big bow of pink gauze ribbon. Little "bluebirds of happiness," cut from printed crepe paper, are pasted to the ends of short lengths of pink baby ribbon and suspended from the handles.

The foundation for the centerpiece is made by cutting out a circle 10 inches in diameter, from cardboard. A band of cardboard 3/4 inches wide is cut long enough to go around this circle and one edge of it is fastened to the circle with short pieces of gummed cloth. The petals may be pasted or sewed to the cardboard and basket lined with pink crepe paper.

Little paper nut cups are provided with wire handles (wound with crepe paper) and covered with petals. A bluebird is pinned on each handle. The place cards are supported by standards of the covered wire to which they are tied with baby ribbon and a bluebird finds his flight arrested by each of them.

The comic spoon dolls are made of picnic spoons, wire and crepe paper and dressed in any costume the hostess chooses—as in college garb for the luncheon table of a home-coming student.
