ONE IMPORTANT WAY TO GET MOST ECONOMICAL CROP YIELDS

C. B. Williams, Chief, Division of Agronomy, N. C. Experiment Station

The three factors under the direction control of the farmer for increase production per acre of crops and most economical cost of production are in-telligent fertilization, cultivation and good seed. One cannot possibly hop to get the best returns in the produ tion of any crop without due consideration to all three of these factors.

At this time, it is necessary for those who are planning to sow fall crops and a larger number, than have ever done so before should give careful consideration to the question of what is the best variety of different crops to use on each of their individual farms. For there is no question but what increases of 20 to 25 per cent or more might be secured by better suit-ed seed over what has been secured heretofore with seed of a nondescript character. It can be seen, therefore, that this is amatter of tremendous ecothat this is amatter of tremendous eco-nomic importance to all of our North Carolina farmers. From high yield-ing strains of farm seed, one may se-cure these greatly increased yields with about the same amount of labor and expense that has been given the crops heretofore. Everyone should exercise every precaution possible be-fore baying seed of any crop from any source of being assured that the seed are of the variety or strain best adapare of the variety or strain best adapted for growth in his particular locality. One cannot be guided always in buying seed by extravagant claims or buying seed by extravagant claims or extensive advertising. The North Car olina Experiment Station will be glad to help those who wish information along this or any other line. It has been studying the varieties of differ-ent crops for warns were and condient crops for many years and feels it is insa position to know what is best for sowing in different sections of the with reference to the best strains and however, in this connection that where terfly Sets a neighbor farmer is growing a well-adapted strain by all means purchase the seed from him rather than to send off at a distance to someone who lew Style . is not known and who has seed not is not known and who has seed not best adapted to your conditions. This is not only a good precaution to ob-serve in the buying of small grain but for all other crops, provided the neigh-bor is practising proper methods of seed selection and care, and is thereby producing a strain which it is known is well adapted to the local communi-ty.
