SIDELIGHTS OF THE GREAT WEST

The Vancouver Hotel with 488 guests' rooms, with every convenience and elegance of the modern Eastern Hotel, was our headquarters.
The great wonder of this northern center is its equable climate, on the same parallel on the Atlantic slope we find the eternal frozen hills and valleys of Labrador, but Vancouver is not only a summer but a winter resort. It is tempered by a great warm ocean current running North from the tropics of the Pacific, while Labrador is kept frozen by the icy current flowing south from Greenland and Exains Bay. Another feature we observe, that the further North we go, the longer the days are in the summer and longer the nights are in the winter, until we get so far North that we have the land of the midnight sun, where it is shining virtually six months and when night comes it is dark for six months, except for the Northern Lights or the Aurora Borealis.

No party was ever more hospitably entertained than we were by these sturdy and manly Scandinavians and Scotchmen, and English descendants from all parts of Canada, with now and then a French descendant from the eastern provinces with all the polish and manners of a Parisian.

Filled with delight, a Rooseveltian phrase, and recollections of Canadian hospitality, and some of the baggage filled with booze, we took our Pullmans at bed time, to make our first start homeward, the next morning at 7:45 o'clock, August 17th, the 19th day since we left Chicago.

We began our days journey homeward, up the Fraser River, with an all day trip through the wildest mountainous section in America, six hundred miles across and through them. And traveling this distance our itinerary was so arranged that we stopped and rested on the siding at night, so we could enjoy the scenery by day. All day we were passing thru canyons on one side, and snow capped mountains on the other, with an occasional tunnel thru the mountains. Nearly in sight all the time, of snowy peaks, glaciers, rugged precipices, waterfalls, foaming torrents, lakes, like jewels set in the pine clad mountains. Most of the day up the canyon of the Fraser river, such wild scenery was never before seen by the outlanders from the middle west and the Atlantic slope. The skies rare blue, the snow on the mountains whiter than sea foam, or summer cloud, with a glistening untouched whiteness that can not be described. We reached Sicamous at 10 o'clock P. M. and rested for the morrow's journey, right in the midst of the mountain slopes by the side of a crystal lake. The next morning we resumed our travels and the mountains seemed higher and grander than the day before, in fact were just getting into the heart of the Rocky Mountains from the coast range and the river canyons. We stopped half an hour at Rivelstoke, the last storage town in British Columbia, where we were given our last opportunity to recruit our desert grips.

A very prominent lawyer from a state bordering on North Carolina got left standing in line to be waited on, but he caught up with us at the next stop, Glacier station. After viewing all the morning, mountain peaks from 8 to 10,000 feet high. With the timber line 7,000 feet well marked and defined, and above the timber, perpetual snow and glaciers.

We stopped at Glacier at 2 o'clock for a stay until the next morning. We all went to the Glacier Hotel, 1.2 miles from the station up a ten per cent grade. Your scribe started the walk with Mr. and Mrs. Holding, of Pennsylvania, and at the end, the lady was 400 yards ahead of us. On this the 18th day of August, the temperature was about 40°. The Glacier Hotel of about 100 rooms, beautifully located in the heart of the Selkirk Mountains 4,000 feet above the sea level, surrounded by snow capped peaks a mile and a half higher, right beyond it the great Illecillewalt Glacier as large as Franklin County and supposed to be several hundred feet deep. On one side was Mt. Sir Donald 10,806 feet high, and in the distance could be seen a dozen peaks around 10,000 feet high. The Glacier seemed a few hundred yards from us, but a party of us walked two hours and then it seemed a mile on.

The climate like Sen. Zeb Vance said about that of Maine. He spent some time making speeches up there and on his return some one asked him about the climate, and he said it was nine months of winter and three months of dam cold weather.

A white stream of ice water poured down the gorge forming a river. This Glacier is a receding Glacier that is melting a foot or two each year. Glacier Park is a government reservation containing about 4,000 square miles with about 50 snow capped mountain peaks from 8 to 12,000 feet high. Hotel so crowded with tourists that we lunched and dined in the train. Many thrilling incidents long to be remembered occurred this day. Your scribe after climbing up hill about five miles, the trail, part of the way, zigzagging up the steep mountain sides, reached the end of his journey about a mile from the foot of the Great Glacier, concluded that mountain climbing was not one of his accomplishments. As he started his retreat to the Hotel, he helped a young lady who was as dizzy as he was, across a narrow bridge. She proved to be an amateur palmetist from an eastern city, and read his palm and told many things she didn't know, and some he wouldn't believe. Your scribe with Judge Fitch of Indiana, about dusk started to walk back to the train, when about half way, a wild bear crossed the road within 100 feet of them. Needless to say there were no casualties. Thus ended one of the wildest, weirdest and most wonderful days of our whole trip.
