NEBRASKA NEWSPAPER PRAISES CONGRESSMAN POL

Praise of the highest kind is be ing heaped upon Congressman Pou on the adjusted compensation bill which is now the law. Congressman Edgar Howard, Representative from Nebraska, is the president and edi-tor of the Daily Telegram, of Colum-bus, Neb., and he frequently sends his newspaper an editorial letter. In his issue of May 22, Mr. Howard has one of these which he devotes to Congressman Pou's speech, incorporating the entire speech as part of his letter. From that there is quoted concerning Congressman Pou and his adjusted compensation speech following:

"There were several fine speeches in favor of passing the soldier bill over the veto when it was laid befor the House. I rather believe the intense moments of the occasion appeared while Congressman Pou of North Carolina was speaking. He lost a son in battle in France. lost a son in battle in France. His fine face was tense while ie talked. His lips were all a tremble, and tears listened on his cheeks. And yet he spoke with a quiet dignity not to have been expected from one who was resenting what he regarded as a Presidential insult to all of the splendid ex-service men who were associated with his fine boy in the late World War. Most of the memoers of the House knew that Pou would speak a mesage as if from the lips of his own sacrificed boy, and that knowledge appeared to have been mysteriously communicated to the multitudes in the raileries because when Pou arose to speak the silence in hall and galleries was proceed. Mrs. Thomas W. Bickett, on being asked, "Who is your choice for governor?" replied, "Mr. A. W. McLean."

On being asked further if she mind-appeared to regret into around the galleries, but quickly everybody appeared to regret into around the silence in hall and galleries was profound. Twice during his brief talk a wave of applications asked further if she mind-appeared to regret. to regret interrupting splendid father who was pleading for justice in behalf of the millions of mates of his own lost soldier boy.
The speaker was allowed only five brief minutes, but he made the most of that brief period. ## JAPANESE EXCLUSION A HUMI-LATION FOR SECRETARY HUGHES

Humilation for Seccretary Hughes has been one definite outcome of the fight for Japanese exclusion in the fight for Japanese exclusion in the imigration bill, no matter what the consequences may have been to any other member of the Coolidge administration. The decision of Congress not to let the question of imigration become a subject of diplomatic negotiation has been taken in spite of the views, if not the recommendations, of the work and the cooperation of the work and the cooperation of the work and the cooperation of the work and the men in this effort. Mr. Mask was followed by Mrs. T. H. Dickens who made a most interesting talk. She urged and and predicted the full cooperation in this effort. Mr. Mask in the men in the men in the mask in the men in the tiation has been taken in spite of the work and the cooperation views, if not the recommendations, of Mr. Hughes that the problem should

Mr. Hughes that the problem should be adjusted by treaty.

There recurs in Washington as an explanation of the position occupied by Secretary Hughes the story that he was eager for a triumph for himself in the settlement of the controversy with Japan by diplomatic exchanges rather than by Congressional legislation even though this would have countered and offended public opinion in California. California is not a name that summons pleasant recola name that summons pleasant recol-lections for Mr. Hughes, for it is re-called that it was in that State that the bors of the provided Hughest Program of the collection of his hopes of the trampled in 1916. presidency

One of the tramplers was Senator Hiram Johnson, the same who was among the champions of Japanese ex-clusion. It would have hurt Johnson personally and politically if Japanese exclusion had failed of ratification by Congress. It would have been equally painful to thousands of Californians who rejected Mr. Hughes in 1916. There are many who have seen in Mr. Hughes the diplomant also Mr. Hughes the disappointed politician.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Miss Jessie Taylor Harris, at her beautiful home on Main Street on Saturday evening, May 24th entertained at eleven tables of bridge and rook. The house was elaborately decorated in daisies and cut flowers with the color scheme of yellow and white prevailing. Misses Lonie and Susie Meadows, Ida Mae Yow and Alice Harris met the guests at the door and pre sented each with an attractive score card hand painted in yellow and white. After the guests were seated a lively and interesting game ensued. After four progressions the hostess assisted by her sister Miss Alice Harris and Miss Bettle McIver served yellow and white block ice cream with angel cake and yellow and white mints. The hostess next brought in a very attracive waiter piled high with dainty little boxes wrapped in white tissue paper and tied with yellow ribbon. To each guest she presented one. In opening the box a tiny jumping jack darted out throwing out a card bearing the following announcement:

Lynwood Bryan-Sallie Taylor June 25th

Miss Taylor is the attractive and complished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Taylor of this city. Mr. Bryan is an enterprising and young business man of Oxford, N. C. The young couple have a host of friends throughout this part of the state who wish forthem very happiness.

WHAT ARCHIBALD JOHNSON SAID ABOUT BAILEY

Some of the newspapers opposed to Mr. J. .W. Bailey's candidacy have given the public a wrong idea of his attitude in the campaign he is making. attitude in the campaign he is making. He is reported as breathing out threat enings and undermining "the party" and trying to play smash with things generally. The impression he made on a fine audience last Friday evening in the auditorium of the graded school was quite the opposite of this spirit. He made a calm and logical argument. was quite the opposite of this spirit. He made a calm and logical argument wholly free from personalities and with perfect courtesy and fairness toward his opponent. His views so far been received in Louisburg:

The faculty and Graduating class of Coker College invite you to be present at the Sixteenth Annual Commencement, June first to third, nineeither for or against him, who did not in their hearts endorse every propo-sition he made. The three points he developed with tremendous force and clearness were the reform of our elecdoption of the Australian ballot, the breaking the power of railroad domination in our political affairs and the equitable adjustment of our taxes. Those who came to see the "fur fly" weere disappointed. There was not one word of villifica-tion or abuse in the whole address of more than an hour. The appeal was entirely to the reason of his hearers, and every statement he made was backed by incontrovertible facts There was no playing to the galleries no appeal to passion nor to prejudice, no oratorical flourishes to tickle the no oratorical flourishes to tickie the the fancy of shallow minds, but a calm, straight, candid, earnest argument for straight, candid, earnest argument for reforms in our political system that the speaker believes with all his heart are vital to the welfare of the common wealth. We have rarely listened to a political address so free from buncombe and so elevated in temper and Archiblad Johnson in Charity and Children.
