need of directed play and companionship that the school could meet by opening the primary room for the children's use each morning and providing a play leader, preferably a trained kindergarten teacher to direct their activities. To this room the children could bring their picture and story books and their toys for cooperative play, and by the use of paper, cardboard, scissors and paste they could learn to make scrap books and toys for use during the winter. Under such leadership they would take excursions to see birds, flowers, trees, and the farming process in operation. The companionship of other children of their own age would mean much to the younger children since such companionship is often lacking on the farm.

How can this idea be carried out? One of the most effective ways would be through an organization of the mothers, but others will suggest themselves. How can a play leader be secured? One way would be to apply to the nearest teacher-training institution. Often a new graduate would be glad of an opportunity to spend some weeks in the country and gain such an experience. Why not try the plan?

THE MONEY VALUE OF A HIGH SCHOOL EDUCATION TO A FARMER

Many parents living in rural communities are doubtless debating whether they should send the boys and girls who completed the courses in the small district schools last spring to high schools this fall. One question they probably ask is: "Will it pay in dollars and cents?"

The United States Department of Agriculture and the various State agricultural colleges have made a number of investigations of the differences between the incomes of educated and uneducated farmers. All of these studies show that in the majority of cases the better trained farmers receive the better incomes. The results cited in the following studies are typical of the investigations:

The Department of Agriculture reports a survey of three representative areas in Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa, which shows that tenant farmers with a high school education receive an average annual labor income of $526 a year more than the men with only a common school education. A college education will add to this average $453 a year making the income of college graduates $979 more a year than the labor earnings of the men with only a common school education.

Cornell University has estimated that a high school education is worth as much to a farmer as $6,000 worth of bonds bearing five per cent interest, and that a college education is worth twice that amount.

The summer is a trying time for children of kindergarten and primary age since the older members of the family are too busy to give them attention, and being unable to be of help they do not know what to do with themselves. It is the
