TO KILL BUS SERVICE. WHOSE FROZEN WASTES? YES SIR, RATHER FIGHT. HINDENBURG'S ELECTION.

Massachusetts considers a proposition interesting to other States. The idea is to oblige railroads killing competition annoying to them, but useful to the public, by interfering with omnibus passenger lines. The scheme is cleverly worked out.

First, owners of omnibuses using public roads would be compelled to get certificates of public necessity and urgency.

That isn't so very dangerous, because public opinion which would demand a convenient omnibus service could bring pressure to bear on the Legislature.

But it would also be necessary for an omnibus line to get a permit from the local authorities of every little town and village through which it might pass. With such a law in force it would only be necessary for the railroad to buy one or two little local bodies—and that wouldn't be difficult.

The railroads need something to wake them up, and they ought to be grateful for mild omnibus competition. By and by they will have real competition in the airplane routes. And even railroads will hardly suggest that the people haven't a right to fly through their own atmosphere without special permission.

The omnibus line as a medium of long-distance transportation is an established fact. You may ride by bus all the way from San Diego to Seattle, the whole length of our Western coast.

If buses wear out the roads, part of their earnings should be used to keep the roads in repair. But omnibus lines should be encouraged everywhere.

Four nations are racing to reach the North Pole. MacMillan hopes to arrive first with the American flag and his two airships.

Anyhow, whatever happens in this race, the United States reached the Pole first.

As to "owning" that territory, there need be no quarrel. There is all there, within the Arctic. The Rockefellers have actually proved it and produced it, although they do not mean to bring it out.

And as the Pole shifts, the different stars one after another become our Northern star, which is not at all "fixed and unchanging." Today's Polar lands will lose their carpet of ice, men will live there, on fertile fields, and "Polar night" will be located elsewhere.

But what, by that time, will have become of the nations now claiming Polar lands? They will have vanished more completely than the 22 separate kingdoms that met the Conqueror when he landed in Britain.

And what we call civilization will then be part of a disagreeable past, studied, as we now study the Bushman, African pygmies, and the "head hunters" of Borneo.

Man by nature delights in struggle. At Columbia, South Carolina, beside the railroad track, four barefoot colored boys from fifteen to six years of age called out, "Thrown a nickel in the air and we'll fight for it."

The suggestion that the smallest boy would have little chance found a favor. All four boys were disappointed when each received his nickel without a struggle. Even the smallest boy said, "Yes, sir, I'd rather fight for it."

There is a moral for employers. Give your men no salary advance to make something extra by "fighting" for extra business and extra profit. Only profit-sharing gets the best out of a man, salary, no matter how big, seems to an insult after a few months.

The French declare the election of Van Hindenburg to be Germany's challenge to the world and to France especially. But the French could be the last to criticize the Germans in this election.

When Napoleon was shamefully beaten and ran home from the Germans to save his skin, as the Kaiser ran away from Germany to save his skin, the French elected as President Marshal MacMahon, the best imitation of a military hero within reach.

Senator Willis denies the United States is isolated. Quite so. It is surrounded by good, bad and indifferent liquor.
