BANK OF WARSAW, "BUILT FOR SERVICE"

One of Strongest and Most Progressive Institutions in Eastern North Carolina—Capital and Surplus Now $45,000.

The progress and development of a town is usually gauged by the character and strength of its financial institutions, and the Bank of Warsaw is recognized as a great factor in the development of Warsaw as one of the most important trading centers in Eastern North Carolina.

Organized in 1903 with a capital of $10,000, the bank now has total resources of half a million dollars, with a capital and surplus of $45,000. Its policies are those resting on service, and its officers and directors are representative, progressive men of this section.

H. L. Stevens is president of the bank, J. W. Quinn, vice-president; J. K. Powell, active vice-president; W. T. Stillman, cashier, and Miss E. B. Loftin, assistant cashier. Directors in addition to the president and vice-presidents are: H. L. Stevens, Jr., attorney; R. L. Best, farmer; J. W. Frederick, merchant; J. J. Bowden, vice-president and cashier in charge of branch bank at Kenansville, which was absorbed by the Bank of Warsaw in 1924; J. A. Powell and H. H. Carlton, farmers.

Mr. J. K. Powell has been with the bank six years and for ten years was with the Union Savings Bank of Washington, D. C. as assistant cashier. He is a native of Columbus County, is a Mason and a Shriner, a director of the North State Canning Company and of the Eastern Carolina Chamber of Commerce. A man of strong personality, progressive and public spirited, Mr. Powell is a leading figure in this section, and is a banker of finesse and sound judgment who has the respect and confidence of the people of this section. He has just recently been chosen head of the American Legion in North Carolina.
