THE HORSE HAIR SOFA

Few young people of this day ever saw a horse hair sofa. They wouldn't know what to do with a fire taper, carpet stretcher or coal oil lamp. They couldn't braid rags into a rug or wind yarn without tangling it. But they know the how and why of typewriters, phonographs, radios, telephones, automobiles; what happens when the push of a button gives light, or a kodak's flash fixes their image on paper.

Their education is as modern as the advertisements they read. They have no more use for the lamp and chimney of yesterday than you have for the wick and tallow of the day before.

Advertisements induce such progress. They urge wide use that means improvement. They help you lift out of date into the attic, rid you of the water buckets and soap kettles of slaverydom. They bring late improvements within your reach.

Read the advertisements regularly. Keep alert regarding what is new. Without advertising, you would never know a product's worth until you had bought it.

Los Angeles' east side was shaken by a dynamite explosion and there wasn't a moving picture machine on the job to get it.
