ROT RUINS POTATOES LEFT LATE IN SOIL

Raleigh, Oct. 4.—Sweet potatoes growing in clay and loam lands take longer to ripen than those in sandy soils but even then the grower should not allow the frost to push along the natural ripening process if he wishes to keep his crop through winter. "In order to increase ripening, and sometimes to allow frost to aid the harvest by killing the vines, some growers leave their potatoes in the soil so long that rot producing fungus diseases gain entrance through injured roots and stems," says Dr. R. F. Poole, research worker with truck crop diseases at State College. "In addition to opening up tissues for the diseases to enter easily, frosting also causes an undesirable bitterness and is the cause of many complaints. When once mold-producing fungi enter the potato tissues, only prompt and effective storage will offset heavy losses. Slight frosting may not be feared; but, when the vines are killed, the potatoes should be harvested immediately. If this cannot be done, cut off the vines. This will offset the frosting but will not prevent freezing."

Dr. Poole states that it may be possible to leave potatoes in the ground until the first or fifteenth of November in some sections but for a year after year practice, the crop should come out of the ground by October 15. Chilling of the soil causes many injuries to the roots and opens up the potatoes to diseases which later develop rapidly in banks and storage houses. The high temperatures used to cure the roots also favor the development of diseases.

It is always advisable before storing potatoes to clean the storage houses thoroughly. Destroy all rubbish and wash the walls and floors with some disinfecting solution to kill the disease spore, suggests Dr. Poole. The first forty-eight hours in the house is a very critical time for the potatoes. In addition to the heat, there should be excellent ventilation which will help to kill the fungi before they gain entrance to the potatoes.

A few fruit trees set out about the place this fall will assure the owner of a fresh supply of this valuable and necessary food.

Headache dizziness

"I HAVE headache once in a while, usually coming from constipation or torpid liver," says Mr. L. A. Morphis, of Pottsville, Ark., "and the very best remedy I have found to correct this condition is Theodor's Black-Draught. It acts quickly and easily, and it just can't be beat. "Black-Draught is the very best laxative I have found. I always feel so much better after taking it. "My wife takes Black-Draught, too. For dizziness, constiveness and any little stomach disorder, we find it most satisfactory, and consider Black-Draught a family medicine." "Constipation, with an inactive liver, locks up poisons in the body and allows them to do their dangerous work. Being purely vegetable and containing no harmful drugs, Black-Draught acts gently, helping the system get rid of impurities and preventing serious sickness. Get a package today. Sold everywhere, 25 cents."

Child (ending prayer):—"And please make Ireland independent."
Mother:—"Why do you ask that?"
"Because that's the way I had it on my examination paper."

Another good reason for storing sweet potatoes in well constructed houses is that the price declines rapidly in the fall when there is a flooded market.

Too many women place their husbands in the accessory class.
