OUR RALEIGH LETTER

By M. L. Shipman

Raleigh, June 20.—With administration circles rather quiet during the past week, the city of Raleigh had a slight breathing spell from a rather strenuous period which began before the recent city primary and election and continued until recently, with other events taking the spotlight as the election faded into the past. During this week the city heard that its union station case would be postponed, the debts of Wake county were funded as the county met requirements of the county finance act, the report of State finances showed a good condition, the Governor announced his vital interest from day to day.

Governor McLean's announcement that he would appear in person at the hearing of the interstate commerce commission at Charlotte on the request of the Piedmont and Northern to extend its lines to Lexington, Winston-Salem and possibly Greensboro and other points attracted considerable interest and presaged a warm fight. The Governor appeared at the hearing today. The other railroads traversing the state are objecting to the extension of the electric line as it will mean competition in a rich territory. The State is actively taking the part of the P. and N. and many business interests of the Piedmont section also have interested themselves in the matter.

Four Raleigh city policemen, indicted for splitting a fine assessed against a traffic violator, posted bonds for their appearance at the next term of court, following their indictment by the Wake grand jury. They will be tried in the next session of court. The charges were made by W. E. Wilson of State College, an Asheville boy.

The Seaboard Air Line announced during the week that it would seek the right to extend its lines from Ruthersfordton to Asheville by using busses and the bus owners association of the state immediately entered the lists against the permission being granted for such extension. The bus owners contend that the franchise for such a line already has been granted and there is no need of two lines. It will fight this encroachment of the bus held by the railroads as it is believed this will be the first of a series of encroachments.

The state corporation commission gave Raleigh bad news during the week when it was announced that the petition to force railroads to build a new station would not be heard for a long time. This is caused by the press of other business which will prevent the hearing. At the same time Raleigh will continue to use the ancient relic it now uses. The city has been trying for years to get a new station but the railroads appear to have the upper hand on the situation.

The debts of Wake county were disposed of during the week with the issuance of $200,000 in bonds. This is in line with the county finance act passed by the last legislature and the county is one of the first to follow the lead of the state in establishing a balanced budget. The bonds will have to be paid year by year out of current revenue.

The report of state finances showed the treasury was in good condition as there is a balance of well over a million and a quarter in the state treasury. The McLean administration has met with marked success in its efforts to establish the state on a sound financial footing and to put it in the position of handling its bills from current funds rather than by drawing on the future. Governor McLean has kept his campaign promises.

During the week Governor McLean paroled four members of the Great Tiger Klan of Craven county. These men, it was held, were given heavier sentences though they were more guilty than other members of the mob, which was sentenced wholesale to the penitentiary. The paroles brought the sentences in line with the punishment meted out to others who participated in the fogging which brought on the trial.

The state printing bids still have not satisfied the Governor and it is estimated that the work will be split up into component parts and let in lots. This plan may be followed and at the same time the State is investigating the methods used by other states in handling printing. There has been some talk of establishing a state printing but this does not appear to be a solution of the question which will satisfy.

The state has realized a half a million dollars in dog license taxes recently, it is reported. During the week the state began paying back loans made to the highway department by counties for road building.

William Y. Bickett, son of the late Governor Bickett, is to be named prosecuting officer for the city of Raleigh to succeed D. C. France, who has resigned. Young Bickett has been practicing law in the city during the last three or four years. Following an announced intention of having only men with clerical experience as desk sergeants, the Raleigh police department has transferred its desk sergeants to active duty and the new men from civil life are being appointed. It is felt that the clerical experience of these men will make for better office work and more efficiency in handling the police court records.

The preachers school at Meredith college this past week was so successful that steps have been taken to make it a permanent affair in the work of the Baptist denomination of the state. During the week just ended contracts were let by the Wake county school board for new school buildings with a total cost of $332,000.

Hugh Davis, who has been chauffeur to the last two Governors of North Carolina is a happy man now. Recently the council of state authorized the governor to purchase a new automobile, the one which has been in use the past six years having gotten in a run down condition. It had travelled

A surplus of labor exists in the state because of the large number of students released by the colleges and high schools. There is some demand for help but generally speaking the demand is over-supplied and the prospect is there will be some unemployment this summer. Two Raleigh doctors—W. B. Dewar and V. M. Hicks—have been named by the department of commerce to have charge of examining Tarheels who apply for medical examinations in order that they may qualify as pilots of aeroplanes. Opening of the Greensboro airport is expected to create enthusiasm for flying.

Many counties are taking kindly to the suggestion that county volunteer historians be named to aid in gathering the histories of the counties into permanent form. The suggestion came from Prof Newsome of the Historical Commission and many counties already have followed out the plan he suggested. The plan is to compile the history of counties while it is available as it is believed many facts now available will be lost in the next few years.

The new state association of life insurance men, formed at Greensboro during the week, has been approved by Stacey W. Wade, commissioner of insurance, who believes much good may come from the organization. The Raleigh Lions Club during the week held a memorial service for J. B.
