OUR RALEIGH LETTER

By M. L. Shipman

Raleigh, Nov. 14.—The capital city joined the rest of the State on Friday in heaping eulogies upon heroes of the World War and right well did her citizenship enter into the spirit of the occasion. While Governor McLean was talking to the veterans at Lincolnton, former Secretary Joseph Daniels at Greensboro, and Attorney General Brummitt at Benson, Col. Albert L. Cox, Commander of the North Carolina Division of the American Legion, found little difficulty in "keeping the home fires burning" in the "City of Oaks." All are agreed that it was the biggest Armistice Day celebration Raleigh and Wake county has ever experienced. Veterans of the sixties and those of 1898 graced the occasion with their presence, taking their places in the parade alongside the khaki-clad troops of Flanders field and marched to the tunes of wartime days under the Stars and Stripes, halting at the city auditorium long enough to hear a masterful plea for everlasting peace by Colonel Cox, himself a giant leader in the struggle to make the world safe for democracy.

Governor McLean left early in the week for a tour of the western part of the State after discussing plans with representatives of publishing houses and the State Board of Education for the distribution of text books to school children at a less cost than they are now required to pay. The Governor opened the Southeastern Flower Show in Asheville on Thursday and delivered the Armistice Day address in Lincolnton on Friday. Tomorrow he will be host to the Governor of Arkansas who comes with a party of his fellow citizens in quest of information and to pay his respects to the Chief Executive of the State. Governor McLean issued during the week a proclamation endorsing the forthcoming eleventh annual roll call campaign of the American Red Cross in which he invites the cooperation of religious and educational agencies. Beginning last Friday the roll call will continue until Thanksgiving day on the 24, to which the Governor directs attention in a special proclamation. Many State papers are prepared at the Mansion and at the executive offices in the basement there are being enlarged and ventilated for the transaction of important business away from capital routine. While busy a plenty all the time Governor McLean will probably accept an invitation to address the Jackson Day dinner guests in Washington on January 12th, or thereabouts.

In a statement given out in Asheville Wednesday night Governor McLean started anew the controversy over the public printing by rapping the newspapers and former contractors whom he intimated were responsible for the long delay in settlement. Former contractors countered with a spirited reply and the next move is up to the Printing Commission.

"The victory meeting" of the Baptist Centennial workers of the Greater Raleigh District held at Meredith College during the week heard heartening reports of progress and resolved to carry on until the entire sum of $1,500,000 is raised in cash and pledges. $7,553.50 was reported in addition to the amount already promised. Total reported for the Central and Raleigh Associations and the Raleigh Civic Division was $116,261.50. Reports from the seven other associations in the Central District are expected to swell the amount to at least $250,000.

Raleigh has been host during the major part of the week to the 91st annual session of the North Carolina Methodist Conference meeting in the Edenton Street Methodist church on Wednesday morning with Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, of Charlotte, in the chair. Representing the State in the absence of Governor McLean, Chief Justice W. P. Stacey, the son of a Methodist minister, delivered the address of welcome in which he touched on the center of the important faith of Methodism and recounted the progress of its mission in the world. Concurring in the suggestions of the Chief Justice, Bishop Mouzon reminded those who are more interested in theological systems than in righteous living that Methodism is interested in the Christ-like life and in keeping faith sound by keeping men safe in the faith. The visiting ministers and laymen, numbering several hundred, were entertained in the homes of Methodists and their many friends here.

Assistant Director Dixon, of the Department of Conservation and Development, calls the attention of sportsmen to the exemption of Currituck, Albemarle, Roanoke, Croatan, Pamlico, Bogue and Core sounds from the provisions of the State-wide game law in its application to migratory wild fowl and warns them that the four upper counties of Currituck, Dare, Hyde and Tyrrell are protected by special game laws, leaving all territory south of Hyde county, subject only to State licenses. In another statement Mr. Dixon hands out the information that North Carolina streams will probably have around three million trout for stocking purposes next year. 550,000 rainbow trout eggs are expected from the United States Bureau of Fisheries for State fish hatcheries and for distribution in North Carolina waters, while brook trout eggs are likely to number 2,500,000.

State Pardon Commissioner Edwin B. Bridges found scores of applications for clemency awaiting consideration on his return to the office recently but lets it be known that his actions will not be governed by sentimental appeals usually made during Thanksgiving and Christmas periods. He proposes to consider every case on its merits.

Collector Gilliam Grissom has filed his answer to the complaint of representatives of the Cannon estate in the suit brought for recovery of $657,778.39 the amount claimed to have been in excess of the late Mr. Cannon's indebtedness to the Federal government on income taxes for the year 1926. The case is expected to come to trial in the Federal Court here early in the new year, with Chas. E. Hughes, of New York, acting as one of the attorneys for the plaintiffs. A $202,971,843.66 turnover in the State's business for October is reported by State Auditor Baxter Durham. Debits $12,846,393.85, capital assets $163,093,600, railroad stocks $5,173,580, State warehouse investments $175,950, public school building fund securities $82,379,000, State loan fund investments $1,815,960.50, sinking fund $22,585.51, sinking fund investments $5,383,000, cash in county trust fund $60,310.40, county loan fund investments $1,652,587.25. Credits:
