HERB PENNOCK AND THE PITCHING ARM SOME FEAR IS WEAKENING ARE TAKING THINGS EASY—WATCH THE CUBS NEXT YEAR WITH HORNSBY

BY PHILIP MARTIN

PERHAPS those wise minds controlling the destinies of the New York Yankees stop and think every now and then during these cold months about the greatest left arm in baseball. No doubt they worry some about that great left arm, for the Yankees are sorely in need of good pitching arms.

But the owner of that great left arm is not worrying any. The arm that went on the blink the last few weeks of the recent pennant campaign is not causing loss of sleep to Herb Pennock, the gentleman, farmer of Kennett Square, Pa., who goes about his life daily on his farm, indulging in the things he likes to do—ride and hunt and raise silver foxes.

And were you to be so bold as to ask him about that arm, he probably would make answer in this fashion:

"I am letting it alone. My primary concern now is in living the life I like to lead with my family. I think that when one is mentally happy it is very easy for the body to be happy.

"Of course, I hope my arm will be in good shape for next summer. But I am not working with it this winter. I'm just enjoying life and trying to add a little weight. Being frail, I don't have to worry about getting too fat during the winter."

Pennock is a wealthy man and he doesn't have to worry about the time when baseball won't have use for him. But you can tell by his talk that he wants to pitch as long as he can even though he will be satisfied when the time comes for him to quit.

The Yankees have cause to worry over Pennock's arm. His is the most gifted in baseball and, without him next summer, the Yankees will be sorely pressed for pitching. Perhaps, as he says, his arm may get happy, too.

ROGERS HORNSBY has signed with the Cubs for next season

and Tris Speaker will manage the Newark International League club—those two items are interesting the baseball world.

The Cubs, with Hornsby's batting punch, surely should win the pennant next summer, but don't be too sure of it. It is difficult to see why they should fail as their club has been one of the top-notchers in their league for the past few years and not an important player left the Cubs in the deal that gave them Hornsby.

Joe McCarthy is the boss of the Cubs and it won't do for Hornsby to ever think otherwise and it is safe to say he won't. He knows McCarthy.

The Cubs have one of the sweetest outfields in the majors and their infield, while not a wow as individuals, certainly stacks up a sight better than many major league quartets. The pitchers are the real stuff and Hartnett can catch with any of them. What more could one ask to go after that pennant?

SPEAKER takes over Walter

Johnson's job at Newark. Just what success he will have is hard to guess. He gave Cleveland the only American League pennant that club ever has won and he always had his team fighting even though at times it was hard for the experts to figure out just why the club should ever win a game. He expects to play regularly and that will be one spot taken care of, that spot he plays.

MARTIN PICKS ALL-AMERICA TEAMS FROM WEALTH OF MATERIAL—SCULL, HARPSTER, CAGLE AND STRONG GIVEN BACKFIELD POSITIONS

BY PHILIP MARTIN

WELL, the boss says it must be done, and being one of those obliging young men (insofar as the boss is concerned), we've used up several dozen sheets of paper figuring out an All-America eleven for 1928. And a second one, too.

We're going to present these selections, for you to agree or disagree with, without any comment whatever except the fact that we witnessed in action teams from all sections of the country except the southwest and Rocky Mountains, and that we talked to coaches and contemporaries from all sections.

Georgia Tech gets the nomination for the best team of the year. They haven't been beaten. They have a chance on New Year's Day to make this unanimous by beating California, if they can, a team that tied Southern California and Stanford.

The defeats of N. Y. U. and Army late in the season by Oregon State and Stanford, respectively, and the walloping of Notre Dame by Southern California, places Georgia Tech in a nice spot to have a claim at the championship better than N. Y. U., Army, Boston, Florida, Detroit or any other team can make.

But the teams like Carnegie Tech was the day Notre Dame was bested, N. Y. U. was the day Carnegie Tech was licked, Oregon State was the day N. Y. U. was trimmed, and Stanford was the day she beat Army—those are the teams this writer will remember years after the 1928 season.

And when all is said and done, that Stanford team the day they tore the Army to pieces is the team that impressed this correspondent the most this season. And we admit to having seen the following teams in action at least once—Purdue, Wisconsin, Ohio State, Iowa, Alabama, Carnegie Tech, West Virginia, Pittsburgh, Army, Nebraska, Oregon State, N. Y. U., Stanford.

First Team	Position	Second Team
Fesler, Ohio State	L. E.	Provincial, Georgetown
McGuirk, Boston	L. T.	Steele, Florida
Westra, Iowa	L. G.	Wagner, Wisconsin
Pund, Georgia Tech	O.	Heinecke, Stanford
Post, Stanford	R. G.	Burke, Navy
Pommerening, Michigan	R. T.	Lassman, N. Y. U.
McCasin, So. California	R. E.	Van Sickle, Florida
Harpster, Carnegie Tech	Q.	Maple, Oregon State
Strong, N. Y. U.	L. H. B.	Mizell, Georgia Tech
Cagle, Army	R. H. B.	Carroll, Washington
Scull, Pennsylvania	F. B.	Hoffman, Stanford

Scull

Cagle

TO be frank, with the exception of Fesler, Pund, Harpster, Strong and Cagle, we admit that the young men named on the second team would suit just as well on our first team. But since a preference must be made, we prefer our second team men where they are.

After watching "Big" Hoffman perform against the Army, we thought of putting him ahead of Scull at fullback. But we can't, for this reason—Scull has been consistently great all season, and before the Army-Stanford game we were told that Hoffman had had a very fair season and that Simkins, of the same team, was really a better fullback.

Heinecke of Stanford also looked every inch an All-America against the Army. But Pund is the mainspring of that great Georgia Tech eleven. A better center than either of these two can't be found this year.

Some of the young men worthy of mention who won't be found on either one of these two teams are Franklan (St. Mary's), Barrabee (N. Y. U.), Rosenzweig (Carnegie Tech), ends; Barfield (Princeton), Nowack (Illinois), and Hibbs (Southern California), tackles; Hagler (Alabama), Drennon (Georgia Tech), Robesky (Stanford), and McMillan (Nebraska), guards; Howe (Princeton), and Pressley (Clemson), centers; Holman (Ohio State), Maple (Oregon State), Cuisinier (Wisconsin), and Crabtree (Florida), quarterbacks; Brazil (Detroit), Clark (Colorado), Banker (Tulane), Sims (Stanford), Sloan (Nebraska), Thomas (Southern California), and Welch (Purdue), halfbacks, and Holmer (Northwestern) and King (Texas), fullbacks.
