THE EIGHT MONTHS SCHOOL LAW.

One of the greatest blessings that could come to Franklin county in the way of tax relief would be the passage of the McLean eight months school bill. At present practically eighty-five per cent of Franklin county already has an eight months school under special school district taxes...

EDWARD BEST HIGH SCHOOL DYNAMO

Eighth Grade News The freshmen seem to be enjoying their civics. Last Wednesday they had a debate which was very well discussed. The query was, Resolve that the death penalty should be abolished. Those on the affirmative were J. C. Bunn, Eloise Jennings, Maud Hayes and Leon Alford. Those on the negative were, Newell Smith, Nell Stallings, Jessie Wester and Helen Mitchell.

The freshmen were somewhat surprised at their good grades on English test Thursday. So was Miss Gupton. The freshmen and sophomores played the first half of their class game last Wednesday. The score was 3 to 2 in favor of the freshmen.

FACTS ABOUT A MOSQUITO The mosquito is the deadliest of insects. In spite of her diminutive size, and harmless appearance, she is as fierce, for her size, as a tiger, and by carrying disease has probably caused more deaths the world over than the sum of tigers, panthers, lions and other wild beast that have preyed on men since the beginning of time. Her "bill" is her only weapon. It is more slender than the finest sewing needle. Science has unmasked the mosquito's true character. In time the mosquito will doubtless become extinct; this depends upon the activity with which man is willing to combat the pest.

It begins life with the egg. The mosquito looks about for standing water when she gets ready to lay her eggs. Her wings are not strong enough to bear her more than two or three hundred feet from her own breeding place, but unless human beings are very careful about such things it is not difficult for her to locate near them a home for her family. She will use an old rain barrel, an old shoe or anything that collects water. In water every few minutes a larva will come wriggling up to the surface for air, the head is down and breathing tubes extending just above the water. If for any reason it cannot get air it dies. This is why putting oil in the water destroys them and this is a very simple thing to do. The bill of the female is a wonderful instrument. It is very fine, and extremely sharp. It pierces the victim's blood. What we call mosquito bite, is not really a bite, but a puncture made by this daggerlike mouth; and the irritation is caused by a bit of saliva injected into the wound. The mosquito carries malaria, and yellow fever. Now is the time to clean up all garbage, so she will not find a place to lay her eggs. By doing this you will make your community a better place in which to live. Do it now! BIRDIE THARRINGTON.

It Might Have Been Sitting in his office, in a great building in New York, watching the busy world below, the mind of John Smith began to travel back to the days that were gone. He was considered a successful business man by his friends. When a young man he had inherited a comfortable fortune from his uncle. Investing the money in stock he had been able to double the amount, until at present he had all that money could buy—except happiness. If his friends could see him now, with his head in his hands, and that far away look in his eyes, they would hardly recognize him as the shrewd business man.

Following his thoughts we see that they are centered around a lovely country home. Here as a boy he had spent many happy hours. He recalled the careful corrections, and good advice his parents gave. It always made him angry to be corrected. Like every other boy he thought he knew it all. He little realized the sacrifices his mother and father made in order that he might have time to study. Study, the thought brought a smile to his lips. How often he had been up to some prank when he should have been studying.

He went to college, but he was always a drag. Little did he think that what he was accomplishing then would largely determine his actions in the future. He was sowing his "wild oats" and he had had such fun. At the thought of those wild college pranks he had played on the boys, he rubbed his hands in glee. His one aim had been to get the most fun out of life.

All this had been good enough then. But now—now he saw the need of all the opportunities he had let slip. It was too late to begin over, yet it was not too late to make the remainder of his life count. He collected his wandering thoughts, brought himself up with a start. It was too late to sigh over what might have been. But a look of determination settled over his face as he thought of what could be done. EVELYN GARDNER.

Basket Ball Last Friday at E. B. H. S. at the play period hour our entire school went out to see a basket ball game between Gold Sand and E. B. H. S. boys.

The first quarter showed the Gold Sand boys in the lead. Indications were that the visiting team would win, but not so for shifts were made in our team. When George Earp, Bruce Sykes, Waverly Ivey and Wilson Edwards went in, our team began scoring. The final score stood 42 to 8 in favor of Edward Best.

Gold Sand boys showed a fine spirit. It was outstanding how high their loyalty and school spirit stood. Edward Best boys showed skill in the technique of ball playing. One, of many other strong points in a ball game, is a controlling of feeling in a contesting hour.

The Disadvantage of Lying Lying is a great disadvantage to the human race of today. We can recall many instances in which this statement proves true.

Take for instance our earliest days. If we take up the habit of lying, sooner or later the reward will be a very bad one. We learn to have but little confidence in people who are accused of this horrible trait. Neither can any dependence be put in a person of this type. Even though he might tell the truth occasionally, but who could believe him? Lying lowers the character of a person quickly, and it is hard to put

TRAINS ATHLETES ON PLENTY OF SWEETS

G. H. Heineman, coach and trainer of the Philadelphia Turngemeinde gymnastic teams

G. H. HEINEMAN, Physical Director of the Philadelphia Turngemeinde, the largest and probably the oldest gymnastic club in the United States, has ideas of dieting quite the opposite of those of certain food faddists. "Plenty of sweets," is part of Mr. Heineman's prescription for his 1,200 athletic charges, and in offering such a prescription he exposes the absurdities of starvation diets undertaken by some women in pursuit of unnatural slenderness.

"Understand me," says this trainer of men and women, "I do not mean over-indulgence. Too much sweets, like too much of any other one thing, can be detrimental. I do mean, though, that a regular ration of sugar, in some form, is absolutely necessary to the proper nourishment and energy supply of the body. "Sugar is crystallized energy. I never take a temp from the Turngemeinde to any contest without a supply of lump sugar. When the last events are reached and some of my athletes are beginning to show signs of fatigue, a lump of sugar will pick them up more quickly than any other thing I know of." Among Mr. Heineman's athletic stars is Roberta Ranck, the Philadelphia girl who, in 1926, at Churchill Downs, Kentucky, took every major woman's gymnastic championship, and who, during the past summer at Cologne, Germany, acquitted herself with honor at the international Gymnastic Festival back on a firm foundation. The man that faces the world with truth finds life much brighter than one of the opposite type.

Let us remember the story of the "boy and the wolf." The story shows the disadvantage of lying. The boy was keeping some sheep on a hillside. The sheep were often attacked by a wolf. One day the boy decided to have some fun, so he shouted to the top of his voice "wolf, wolf." The men of the village heard him and ran to help him. But seeing no wolf they went back to their work. In just a short while the same cry came to them. Again they left their work and hurried to the calling boy. When they reached the hillside they saw the boy was only lying. Back to their work again they returned. When the boy gave the third call for help he was really in earnest, but how could the people believe him after he had lied to them twice? The wolf killed many sheep, because the boy had no help.

Not only in cases like this is lying a disadvantage but in all others. People are some times forced to tell many lies after telling one. The truth will stand while a lie falls. GLYCERINE TURNAGE.
